The plant is of strong, vigorous habit of growth, over 5 feet high; fully one-half of this consists of much branched pyramidal shaped flower stems which are filled with lively light lavender-blue flowers fully 1¼ inches in diameter. The plant is in flower from the latter part of August to the middle of October. 35 cts. each; $3.50 per doz.; $25.00 per 100.

THREE IMPORTANT DELPHINIUMS.

GYPSOPHILA (Baby's Breath).

Paniculata Flore Plena. This double flowering Gypsophila is one of the most important hardy plants for cutting purposes.

We guarantee our stock, every plant to be the true double form. Seedlings are sometimes offered very cheap, but only a very small percentage come double. Our plants are all either grafted, or grown from cuttings. Strong flowering plants $2.00 per doz.; $15.00 per 100.

NEW HEMEROCALIS QUEEN OF MAY.

A splendid new hybrid, flower stems from 3 to 5 feet high, terminated with from 12 to 18 flowers of largest size of a rich Indian-yellow. The flowers begin to develop in May and continue for nearly two months; perfectly hardy. 25 cts. each; $2.50 per doz.; $18.00 per 100.

NEW GIANT-FLOWERING MARSHMALLOWS (Hibiscus).

A wonderfully improved form of our greatly admired native Marshmallow or Rosemallow, in which not only the colors have been greatly intensified but in which flowers of enormous size, frequently 10 to 12 inches in diameter, have been developed.

These plants can be highly recommended for all kinds of plantings, they appear to be equally at home in all positions, having the same vigor in dry and wet ground and are perfectly hardy, they grow from 5 to 8 feet high and are very floriferous, blooming from early July to late in Autumn. We offer three distinct colors, Red, Pink and White in strong two year old roots. 30 cts. each; $3.00 per doz.; $20.00 per 100.

LUPINUS (Lupine).

Polyphyllus Moerheimi. The most beautiful variety yet introduced; a combination of light and dark shades of pink. $2.50 per doz.; $18.00 per 100.

LYTHRUM ROSEUM PERRY'S VARIETY.

larger spikes and of glistering cherry-red colors. $2.50 per doz.; $18.00 per 100.

NEW ORIENTAL POPPY "PERRY'S WHITE."

A sterling novelty and the most distinct break that has yet been made in Oriental Poppies, it being a pure satiny-white with a bold crimson blotch at the base of each petal; this is undoubtedly the most important addition to our list of hardy perennial plants this season. 35 cts. each; $3.50 per doz.; $25.00 per 100.

THREE SPLENDID NEW HARDY PHLOX.

Rheinlander. A beautiful salmon-pink with flowers and trusses of immense size, the color of the flower is intensified by a very decided eye of a deep claret-red. $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.

Riverton Jewel. One of our own introductions which it gives us great pleasure to recommend, a lively shade of mauve-rose illuminated by a carmine-red eye, a splendid improvement on the popular variety Asia. 30 cts. each; $2.50 per doz.; $18.00 per 100.

Thor. A most beautiful and lively shade of deep salmon-pink suffused and overlaid with a scarlet glow and a light almost white halo around its amiline-red eye. This variety will undoubtedly hold the same place among deep salmon colors that Elizabeth Campbell holds among the light salmon-pinks. $2.00 per doz.; $15.00 per 100.

PERRY'S WHITE ORIENTAL POPPY.

Our New Rose Mrs. Moorfield Storey

Has a strong upright growth, the wood being very stout and smooth, with large handsome dark green foliage, practically mildew or black-spot proof. The flowers, which are freely produced, are of good size and substance with abundant petals, opening freely. The color is a shell pink deepening toward the centre with the large smooth petals tipped deep rose.

It will be a fine, yet distinct, companion for the Mrs. Charles Russell rose.

EASTER—THE SEASON OF OPPORTUNITY

Greetings to my brother florists and may good fortune attend you all upon this Easter-tide! Once more does Mother Earth awake from her slumber, ready to clothe herself in all her most wonderful garments, bestirring herself to provide adornment in her gems. We florists have a most important mission to perform in bringing Nature's jewels and messages of her Spring awakening close to the busy, bustling, mercenary crowd, who have strayed far from the fresh, wholesome contact with the living things of Mother Earth. The Spring brings with it a stimulation of interest, a rejuvenated enthusiasm in matters rural and natural. The tired city folks, wearied with the confining and sordid labors of the winter, renew the annual back-to-the-land propaganda, and it is to the florist, the proxy of Nature, that they turn. If every right-thinking flower merchant will only realize that he is one of her representatives, employed in her behalf to convey Nature's beautiful offerings to the cave dwellers of our cities, the selling of flowers will become the respected profession that it should be.

Easter is the season of opportunity for the florist. At no other holiday period of the year is there such a variety to present to lovers of flowers. We prepare for the season several weeks—in fact, months before Easter Sunday. Our baskets, hampers, pots, and boxes are selected long before the rush begins, and we make contracts with growers and wholesalers far in advance, to assure enough stock of high quality at a reasonable price. It is hardly necessary for me to dwell on preparations for delivery, packing, extra storage room, etc. Our popular advertising campaign for Easter starts about two weeks ahead, gradually increasing space and frequency of insertions until the last day.

The exquisite baskets, hampers and pans now made for the florist present a splendid opportunity at this time of year. The effective grouping of well-chosen blooms in pretty receptacles invariably stimulates their sale and if it will do so this season, we want more of it. The Easter of 1915 promises to be the biggest yet for the florist who is up and doing. Never before have we had such a variety of stock, colors and quality to choose from. It is up to every wide-awake man to take advantage of these in connection with the little accessories that help to increase profits, such as pottery, baskets, ribbons, butterflies, rabbits, ducks, etc. Many a sale has been induced through the combination of flowers, basket, and that odd touch secured by the addition of a mounted butterfly or chicken. Baskets of unique shape find a profitable market at Easter, especially the Italian egg-shaped baskets of white and pale green. Those white enameled baskets of French design, about three and a half feet in height, are very pleasing to the eye; filled with Beauties or lilies and the handle trimmed with ribbon, we have never found any difficulty in disposing of them.

Easter sentiment runs strongly for lilies. The florist who creates unique arrangements of these stately blooms will find himself greatly in demand. We endeavor to sell them in combination with large wicker baskets or hampers. Even a simple pot cover will materially aid in selling them.

The special feature of the Easter trade this year will be the long vase initial baskets with high handles for spring flower effects. They are cheap, attractive and with us have proven easy sellers. But now-a-days there is a special basket for every flower—lilies of the valley, orchids, gardenias, sweet peas, roses, etc. With the proper ribbons these make splendid Easter gifts. Get the public in your town to appreciate this fact by showing them effectively in your windows.

Lavender and white are the traditional Easter colors. This means simplicity of color—the prevailing floral atmosphere of the season. The riot of colors, reds, yellows, lavenders, purples, cream shades, orange, etc., are not so much in evidence at Easter as they are at Christmas time. We look for delicate light tints at Easter. Colors which tend toward light, have their greatest beauty in their brightest tints; and those which similarly tend towards shade are most beautiful in their greatest depth of fulness.

Undoubtedly there are many people who dislike the element of fashionable frivolity which has come to mark the general keeping of Easter; but as long as it finds some expression through flowers as well as clothes, we florists ought to feel proud of our position as distributors of Dame Nature's floral offerings. The story of Easter is proclaimed every spring over all the earth, in greening grass and budding trees and springing flowers. Brother-florists, we are on the right side!

Awake, thou wintry earth!
Lend off thy sadness!
Plant coral flowers, laugh forth
Thy ancient gladness!
Christ is risen!

The Queen of Flowers—The unfortunate conditions have been organized her body guard at and it would have been in New York or all and those of her votaries who will receive a loyal and which has probably done more than any other garden the world will find here no sentiment, "a bush for every garden," has been taking on a new activity within the last few years the adaptability of the hybrid teas and little polyanthas for culture in the home garden and the character becomes known. The American Rose Society has now a field for activity which is practically limitless.

The Carnation: will it come back?" This was the title of a paper which recently appeared in one of our contemporaries as written by a prominent member of the craft. The presumption naturally follows after reading the title that the carnation has been waning in prestige and popularity, which, however, from a low point would seem to be a debatable proposition. A careful survey of the records of the past few years would hardly bear out the conclusion that the carnation has suffered to a greater extent than any other one of the leading flower market staples, from the aggressions of other specialties or from the general business depression which has borne more or less severely on all branches ever since last summer. It is, of course, up to the carnation men themselves to hold their divine flower up to the popularity it merits, by an alert and well-considered publicity policy in respect to the general public. "Where there's a will, there's a way."

Should be encouraged—A very potent advertisement, fruitful with beneficial publicity for the plant and flower industry is the fast increasing custom of spring "openings" with floral decoration, in the big department stores in various cities. These events come at a season when fresh decorative material is most abundant, when the grower can readily furnish the large quantity of material needed to make an impressive showing in these vast establishments and at a fair profit, and consequently it is the part of business wisdom to encourage the extension of the practice. The advantage of having such a means of remunerative sale for the abundant spring product is really only a minor consideration, the greater benefit to the flower people being the presenting of their goods before myriads of interested observers, in their most attractive and practical form in the most frequented marts. As an incentive to the popular desire to have such things and an education in their proper use, the department store has qualifications which make it easily the peer of the regulation flower show.

Worth the price—The great majority of men in the trade, and the public as a whole, have little realization of the vicissitudes through which an Easter lily must pass between the time of the starting of the tiny bulblet in the field, and the time when, toggled out in its Easter ribbon, it

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Crotons

Crotons will now want plenty of water and syringing. Examine each pot at least once a day. On all good days use the syringe freely as it helps to keep down mealy bug and red spider. These plants like to be close to the glass; it makes them grow stocky and helps their coloring. Crotons like plenty of light so long as it does not burn the foliage. Do not fail in damping down under the benches and walks at least every morning and afternoon. Make it a point to freshen the air once a day even if for only a short time.

Dracaenas

Retail growers in whose line business decorating with plants plays a prominent part, generally make free use of dracaenas. All plants pressed every now and then into service of this kind, soon lose their individual beauty, become shabby and useless even for this sort of work. So now is the time to rejuvenate our stock in dracaenas. Cut into pieces of from one to two inches long, the thickest to be split lengthwise of the stems, the heaviest of the roots to be treated in the same way, and all these pieces to be strewn thinly over a bottom-warmed layer of pure sand. A hot-house propagating case answers best, though a pretty warm corner of the common propagating bench covered with spare sashes, will also do. If kept moderately but constantly moist and bottom heat does not give out before that time little plants of half a finger's length will in 20 to 30 days work their way up through the top covering.

Final Preparations for Easter

Easter being early this year it is not likely that much of the stock intended for that holiday is greatly ahead of time. For the preservation of any such, cool and somewhat darkened quarters must be chosen. The remaining days of March have yet so much of chilly winter in them that any holding back of too forward stock, or its keeping in acceptable condition, should not prove difficult. A day or two could now be devoted to the filling of pans, fancy dishes and baskets, even going to the extent of filling a few indoor window boxes of attractive exterior and convenient size, such as last year found ready sales at good prices. Whatever is done in this line of work should give proof of artistic taste in the arrangement of the plants used and care in their makeup.

Propagating Bougainvilleas

These plants will root from half-ripened wood that has two or three joints. They will want plenty of bottom heat—anywhere from 75 to 80 degrees. See that each cutting is set firm. They will need shading, and frequent sprinkling or light syringing. When they show a root growth of about half an inch they should be potted in a rich compost—something like turfy loam three parts, well decayed cow manure one part, and enough sand to hold the compost open. These plants are rapid growers so will want frequent shifts until in 6 or 7 inch pots. Keep them well up to the glass so that they will grow stocky and short jointed.

Seedling Tuberous Begonias

Seedlings sown early in January and pricked out later should now be large enough to go into small pots. The one aim in growing this class of begonias is to push them along quick without any check. Screened fibrous loam and leaf mold in equal parts, with some sand will suit them. When they are potted place them well up to the glass and in a temperature of about 60 degrees. They will need shading during mid-day but are better for full light early in the morning and late in the afternoon. Shift as they may require until they reach a 5-inch pot. They like a moist atmosphere but not humid close air.

Propagating Double Pyrethrums

These will soon root in a cool propagating bed. When rooted they can be potted off and grown on and by the first of May they can be planted out. These are fine to cut for "made-up" work.

Next Week:—Cannas; Foliage Plants; Primulas; Preparing Ground for Carnations; Sweet Peas; Keeping a Diary.

reaches its destination and takes its brief proud station in milady's window on Easter morning. While never favoring exorbitant prices or undue profits on the wares of the florist we are always sorry when conditions force the disposal of plants or flowers at prices which manifestly do not yield a legitimate profit over the cost of their production, in money, skill and labor. Among the unforeseen contingencies in the matter of lily bulb importations for the present season was the interning of a number of steamers early in the course of the great European war—boats carrying large cargoes of lily bulbs shipped minus war insurance and, so far as we can learn, many hundreds of these cases still on the boats, untouched since last July. Every bulb thus wasted means a definite loss to somebody which, in the prevailing conditions of close competition and price cutting, cannot be retrieved. We hope, for the interests of all concerned, that the Easter lily market may steady itself nicely and make a good record, yielding an adequate return for those to whom the occasion means so much.

Retarding Orchids

Although the retarding of florists' flowers has been largely practised for many years with considerable commercial success, it is only recently that attention has been given to the subject by orchid growers. With the ever increasing multitude of hybrids flowering, as they do, throughout every week of the year, it may be asked why there is any necessity to attempt the production of orchid flowers outside their natural season. With the amateur who has but one desire, and that to see things as and when Nature demands, there is, of course, no need to attempt the alteration of the plants' respective seasons of flowering; but with the large trade growers, who have to produce a quantity of bloom during the certain seasons of the year when market prices are at their best, it is at once evident that every means must be utilized to meet the demand.

Although many species may be equally beautiful to the eye, and may probably have the same decorative effect, there is a vast difference in their lasting qualities, and for this reason some species have a higher market value than others. For instance, during the summer months the demand for Cattleya Gaskelliana is good, but it ceases directly C. labiata makes its appearance; and although the supply of the former may last well into the autumn months it is practically unsaleable on account of the better lasting qualities of the latter species. No one, therefore, ever thinks of attempting the retardation of C. Gaskelliana.

The flowers of Cattleya Trianae, which open during the late winter months, are of a comparatively thin and delicate structure, and make poor subjects for cut-flower purposes, but they fill up what is oftentimes a wide gap between the autumn flowering C. labiata and the spring flowering C. Mossiae. To cover up this gap with better material is where the retarding of C. labiata proves very useful and effective. The process mainly consists of starting the plants into growth late in the spring months and delaying the production of the flowers by placing the plants, as soon as their bulbs are matured, into cooler surroundings. A cool corridor or house where the atmosphere is fairly free from moisture proves the most suitable place, for when the plants are in a comparatively dry state they safely withstand a much lower temperature.

The first year's treatment of this kind may only cause the plants to flower about a month later, but their resting season being proportionately retarded causes them to commence their new growth at a later period in the following year, and their season of flowering will then be two or three months later than the normal time. Thus it is possible to ensure a supply of Cattleya labiata right through the winter season, and, as many have found to their advantage, good Cattleyas make high prices during Christmas week.—The Orchid World, London.

New Cattleyas

PERCIVALIANA VAR. THE KAISER

The accompanying picture shows a most remarkable cattleya with very broad, wavy petals of firm substance. The lip is of the brightest purple color with a paler margin. All in all it is the finest formed Percivaliana we have ever seen. The photograph was made at the orchid houses of Julius Roehrs Company at Rutherford, N. J. The flower is of enormous size, the engraving being greatly reduced in diameter.

CATTELEYA TRIANAЕ—"MRS. ALMIRA COOLEY."

Amongst the thousands and hundreds of thousands of Cattleya Trianae which have been imported from their native habitat to this country, there have been found some extraordinary varieties, but the above mentioned is the finest we have ever been fortunate enough to see in flower. It belongs to the Albino type. The flower is extraordinary in size, perfectly round in form, and is of an unusually heavy substance. The petals are very broad, of the purest white imaginable, and beautifully frilled at the edges. The sepals are of the same color, and an inch broad, which fills the flower completely. The lip is round and open, white, with a most delicate pink shade hardly visible. The throat is marked with a bright yellow blotch and veining. This plant is in the collection of W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J. Mr. Manda has dedicated this extraordinary flower to Mrs. Almira Cooley, the mother of one of the most ardent collectors of orchids in America.

CELOGYNE CRISTATA.

The beautiful specimen of this useful orchid which adorns our title page this week was grown by George Jacques, superintendent on the estate of Mr. William G. Mather, Cleveland, Ohio. It was grown in a 9-inch pan, had forty-three trusses of bloom, the number of flowers being two-hundred and fifteen. Cœlogyne cristata and cristata alba are very desirable for florists' use in bridal and other choice work. It is one of the easiest orchids to grow.

Dr. Felt, state entomologist, told the Western New York Horticultural Society, at its recent meeting in Rochester, that there had been a decrease of 48 per cent. in the number of native birds, in the last 15 years, and that it is reasonable to believe that there has been a corresponding increase in the number of insect pests. He declared that the farmer and fruit grower can well afford to accord due protection to the insectivorous birds.

CARNATION DISEASES.

Report of the Floricultural Pathologist, University of Illinois Agricultural Experiment Station, Urbana, Illinois, presented before the Illinois State Florists' Association at Urbana, Illinois, March 2, 1915 by Geo. L. Peltier.

Stem Rot of Carnations—Rhizoctonia solani Kuhn.

We now have in the process of publication, as a bulletin, the results of the last three years' work on the fungus causing the stem rot of carnations. This bulletin will be of a more or less technical nature, but will be of value to the florist.

The fungus Rhizoctonia has been reported in the United States as causing more or less trouble to 164 species of plants. About one half of this number include floricultural and ornamental plants commonly grown by the florists. The fungus is extremely serious in the cutting bench, not only to carnations, but to practically all cuttings made from herbaceous plants. In the seed beds it will attack seedlings of a large number of plants, causing the well known symptoms of "damping off." It is from the seed bed and cutting bench that the fungus is carried, to a large extent, into the fields and benches, causing more or less loss throughout the year.

Cross inoculation experiments show that one species of Rhizoctonia is the cause of all the trouble. As I have stated before, this fungus has been found to attack a large number of plants including field and vegetable crops, floricultural and ornamental plants, and many weeds. The fungus has also been found growing in the soil on dead plant material, so that it is probably present, to a certain extent, in most fields. It is quite clear then, that Rhizoctonia is present in almost every carnation field, as well as the soil that is put in the benches.

You may inquire then—why are not all carnation plants destroyed in the field? Rhizoctonia is what we call a facultative parasite; that is, under ordinary conditions it is a saprophyte—living on dead plant parts—but under certain conditions it becomes an active parasite and can attack and kill plants of all ages readily. As I have mentioned in previous reports, the conditions necessary for its parasitic development, depend on a high temperature and, to some extent, on moisture.

It is hoped that by next fall another bulletin taking up more specifically the work on the carnation stem rot will be ready for distribution.

Branch Rot of Carnations, Fusarium sp.

This disease has been under observation again this season. The fungus is able to attack the cuttings very easily and it is by the use of infected cuttings that the disease is spread in the field and house.

The completion of the work on stem rot will allow us to take up the study of the fungus and methods of control more fully in the greenhouse.

Carnation "Yellows."

As I have suggested in past reports, the only way this disease may be controlled is by the selection of cuttings from plants showing no signs of this trouble. During the current year, a from a number of varieties and the results have come out surprisingly well. Cuttings taken from plants showing "yellows" badly, produced plants of the same type. Cuttings taken from slightly diseased plants, produced only a few healthy, a number with "yellows," while the majority of plants showed only slight attacks of "yellows". When cuttings were taken from apparently healthy plants, they developed, in the majority of cases, into more vigorous plants showing no "yellows." Occasionally cuttings taken from an apparently healthy plant would all produce plants with "yellows" which tends to show that care must be exercised in the selection of cuttings from healthy plants.

Another selection from the first year's work has recently been made, together with a further selection from the stock now in the greenhouse.

Antirrhinum Rust—Puccinia Antirrhini, Diet. & Holw.

Due to the serious nature of the snapdragon rust, Mr. Rees has devoted his entire time, during the past year, to this problem. It has been reported in nearly all the middle western states, in Massachusetts, and again in Oregon and California.

The rust appears on the plants in the field about the last of July. The uredo (summer) stage persists until fall when the teleuto (winter) pustules are found on the stems and branches. The uredo, and to some extent the teleuto stage, is also found in the greenhouse throughout the winter, on cuttings, seedlings, and later on the mature plants. During spring the rust seems to die out in the house, reappearing in the field during the late summer.

Mr. Rees published an account of this trouble last fall in all the trade papers, which no doubt most of you have read.

Stem Rot (Fusarium sp.) and "Yellows" of Asters.

During the current year, a large number of inquiries relating to various plant diseases were answered. The troubles most commonly reported last summer were the "stem rot" and "yellows" of asters. We are planning to carry on some experimental work for several seasons, on the aster troubles, particularly the two mentioned above.

Dry Rot of Gloxinias.

We are also planning some work on a dry rot of Gloxinia bulbs, a disease which has recently been brought to our attention and which appears to be quite serious.

British Horticulture

Business as Usual.

Despite the depressing influences of the war and the tendency to upset the conditions which prevail in normal times, the nursery and seed trade are doing their utmost to maintain things at the usual level. For instance, the trade are rallying around the Royal Horticultural Society in keeping the shows going at the usual high standard. There was a meritorious display at the Society's show in London on Feb. 16th. Alpine plants were a special feature, and in this department many of the leading specialists showed some notable specimens. There were saxifrages of the buseriana type, including several new varieties. From China was shown Primula sylvicola, in the exhibits of Wallace & Co. Barr & Sons obtained awards of merit for three new crocuses—C. biflorus Alsandri, C. b. Lemon Queen, and C. Imperati albiflora.

Popularity of American Apples.

The "apple habit" is now firmly rooted in the British public. This is indicated by the increased number of grocers who now make a feature of this fruit. Our national fruit bill each year includes the sum of two million pounds for imported apples. With the abundant supplies pouring into our shores from America, Canada and Australia, it is possible to have apples on the dessert table all the year round. British growers are gradually improving their methods—the examples of the American and Colonial competitors have not been ignored. This season, as usual, the markets have been well furnished with apples from California, chiefly Newtown Pippins, the Oregon district, and from Nova Scotia. The fruit usually arrives in excellent condition, and meets with a ready sale at remunerative prices. Besides apples we are largely dependent upon America for our pear supplies. From the fertile Californian ranches we receive supplies of excellent samples of Winter Nelis, Glou Moreau, and Easter Beurre. For a cheaper trade the barreled American Keiffers find great favor. Although in recent years increased attention has been paid to fruit culture in Britain, we should come badly off had we to depend solely on the home supplies of fruit. Although there have been delays in obtaining some of the over-seas supplies, so far the trade has not been seriously hampered by the war.

W. H. Adsett.

Trenton, N. J.—The action of the First Judicial District Court of Morris has been affirmed by the Supreme Court in giving judgment to Patrick Connelly against Thuro Wollen. The litigation involved the lease of six greenhouses and a dwelling house in Madison. It was contended by Connelly that Wollen was in arrears for rent, and the former sued to recover.

CULTURE OF HARDY SHRUBS

Massachusetts Horticultural Society Lecture by Arthur E. Thatcher.

When and How to Plant

There has always been and probably always will be a difference of opinion as to whether the fall or spring is the better time for planting. If the work has to be done in the fall on account of the rush of work in the spring it is advisable to plant as early as possible when the ground is in a moist condition, directly the leaves commence to fall. For my own part I am strongly in favor of preparing the ground in the fall, letting it lie rough through the winter and planting in the spring. If the work is well done and the requisite amount of attention is given the shrubs afterwards there is small chance of failure. It is very true that we often have a short, dry planting season in the spring, but much disappointment is frequently caused by shrubs which if planted in the fall fail to become sufficiently established to withstand the severity of our Eastern winters.

With the ground in readiness and the material at hand the next operation, that of planting shrubs, is perhaps the most important part of their culture. So much depends upon how this is accomplished as to after success or otherwise that too much care cannot be taken to have it well done. From whatever source the shrubs are obtained they should be carefully unpacked on arrival and the roots thoroughly moistened and if they cannot be planted for some time, they should be laid in a sheltered place away from the wind. It is a good plan to place a stake with the name where each shrub is to go; this will expedite matters when the planting is being carried out. The best time for planting is when the ground is in a moderately moist condition, as the soil can then be made firm without becoming pasty, and if possible choose a calm day, as wind has a most detrimental effect upon the roots. A hole should be taken out of sufficient size to accommodate all the roots after they have been spread out evenly, so that it will not be necessary to bend any round or cramp them, and having seen that the hole is of sufficient depth, the planting can then proceed. Cut off any broken or damaged roots on the under side with a sharp knife and take great care of the small fibrous ones, as on these the life of the shrub depends very largely, and see that they are quite moist. Then place the roots in the prepared hole and spread out all of them evenly, working in among them some of the finest soil, pressing it firmly and adding more until the hole is filled. While the roots should be well covered, it is not advisable to plant too deeply, especially on heavy land, and the nearer the fibrous roots are to the surface the greater warmth do they receive and consequently start into active growth more quickly than if buried some distance from the surface. When the planting is completed it is an excellent plan to give the shrubs a good mulching of any suitable material at hand such as decayed leaves or long dressing. This is of the greatest assistance if warm weather prevails, for it keeps the roots moist and cool and prevents surface soil from becoming baked.

Not Too Much Watering.

Many people are under the impression that newly planted shrubs should be copiously watered at the roots, but I consider this unnecessary and oftentimes detrimental. If a good watering is given immediately after they are planted, which will settle the soil about the roots, and a mulching is applied, very little water will be needed for some time by the roots but it is an excellent practice to spray them overhead frequently. This keeps the wood moist and greatly assists the buds to develop. If shrubs of standard form are planted they will need some support until they become well rooted and for this purpose nothing is better than a straight stake, sharply pointed and driven firmly into the ground as near the stem as possible without injury to the roots. The shrub can be secured to it by wrapping a neat piece of cloth or rubber around the stem and tying to the stake firmly with string, but care should be taken that no injury is done to the shrub as the bark expands with growth. Many beautiful American shrubs are notoriously fond of peat and if the conditions are not naturally favorable for their cultivation, liberal additions of this material should be incorporated when preparing the ground, if it can be obtained. Peat, however, is not always available, neither is it absolutely necessary, for many peat-loving subjects will succeed admirably in a mixture of fibrous loam, decayed leaf mould and sand.

Pruning Too Little Understood.

The pruning of hardy shrubs is one of the most important matters connected with them but at present it is very imperfectly understood and we see far too often the lamentable results accruing from a lack of knowledge of their individual requirements. All that is generally considered necessary is for an incompetent workman to give the shrubs an annual trimming with a pair of shears, with the result that when the work is finished the shrubs all have about the same rounded, stiff appearance, much of the old growth which should have been removed is left and forms a mass of useless growth and the young wood, which should be carefully preserved for future blossom, is cut away. It is not possible to lay down any hard and fast rule, as shrubs differ so much in their individual requirements, but it is better not to prune at all than to prune indiscriminately. The large majority of flowering shrubs produce their blossoms during the spring and summer months and some of these, such as the Philadelphus, Deutzias and Forsythias, which produce their flowers on wood of the previous season's growth, are improved by having some of the flowering stems cut clear out as soon as the blossoms have fallen. This will help to strengthen the new growths sent out from the base and give them a better opportunity of becoming well ripened before winter sets in. The majority of hardy shrubs, however, require very little pruning beyond occasionally removing the old growth so as to keep them shapely and open to enable them to receive the full benefit of the sun and air. It is only by intelligent study and actual practice that one can become conversant with the requirements of different shrubs.

A Very Common Mistake.

As I have previously mentioned, it is quite unnecessary when planting ornamental shrubbery to use only those shrubs which are of bushy form, and by the inclusion of some of pyramidal growth for example and the proper use of standards one can produce a very much more attractive arrangement. A very common mistake, which should be carefully guarded against, is to plant all the larger shrubs at the back and graduate the others down to the front. By bringing some of the larger shrubs to the front and placing a well-grown standard on the edge of the shrubbery, where it stands clear above its neighbors, one will be able to give the appearance of much greater depth, which is important where space is limited. It will, of course, be necessary when the shrubbery is first made to plant more shrubs than those which can permanently remain.

LANDSCAPE WORK AT THE PANAMA FAIR.

The good results achieved in the landscape gardening at the Exposition are due to three things. First, the climate and nature of the soil of California, in which State plant life thrives better than it does in any other State; second, the generosity and patriotic spirit of the people; third, the expert knowledge and skilled gardening of the landscape department.

The credit for planting the gardens and bringing the plants to their present splendid growth belongs not to me but to my assistants. They put their souls into the work; they gave their days and nights up to it; they watched every tree and shrub with solicitous care, and they have their reward in seeing the exquisitely beautiful gardens which they created and which cannot be surpassed anywhere on earth.

Nature has endowed California with practically every climate in the world. Therefore there are very few plants that cannot be grown within the State's borders. To this may be attributed the fact that the Exposition presents, growing in the open, such a wide variety of plant life, embracing plants native to the tropics alongside of plants native to the temperate and cold zones.

The generosity of the people of the whole State has been boundless. We have asked for much and have invariably been told to come and take what we wanted. Private gardens have yielded practically every plant in the open air at the Exposition, and they were given to us ungrudgingly and without price.—Boston American

HARDY HERBACEOUS PLANTS.

W. A. Manda, of South Orange, N. J., delivered a very instructive lecture on the above topic before a large audience at Horticultural Hall, Boston, on Saturday, March 13. We shall have room for only a portion of the lecture which was well worthy of a complete presentation as were also the replies by Mr. Manda to the numerous questions propounded by interested people in the audience at the close of the lecture proper.

"Under the heading of 'Hardy Herbaceous or Perennials Plants' we can group such plants as are strictly herbaceous—that is, after they have made their growth, flowered and seeded, they die down to the ground, where they rest perfectly dormant, until awakened again in the early spring, when they put forth new growth, with double vigor, after having had such a long and complete rest. Good examples of the herbaceous group are the peony, phlox, and plants of that description.

There are, however, a great many plants which are not strictly herbaceous, but which the term "perennial" will cover well, although both of these designations ramify in different directions.

As examples of perennial plants which are not herbaceous, we can site such plants as the old-fashioned Scotch pinks, dianthus plumarius, the sea pink or armeria maritima, and a vast number of other plants which keep their green foliage and growth summer and winter, and when the early spring time comes, they simply continue their growth, and put forth their flowering stems.

However, in my short address, I do not want to stick strictly to the plants which would answer either or both of these technical definitions, but to include all such plants as can be grown for similar purposes, and such plants as are generally termed the old-fashioned hardy garden plants which were cultivated in our grandmothers' gardens, and which include even bulbs and some semi-shrubby plants which can be used for the adornment of the garden. With plants of this kind, we can ornament every nook and corner of every place, whether small or extensive, and it is only a matter of selecting the proper kinds for the purposes for which they are wanted.

These plants come from various parts of the temperate zone of our globe, and even this country has been blessed with a wealth of such vegetation, so that we need not go outside of our native plants in order to ornament our homes, whether on large or modest scale.

Of course of late years the hybridizer has added numerous new forms and varieties, by carefully hybridizing and patiently raising and selecting the best off-springs, so that there are individual plants now which have been developed into hundreds and even thousands of varieties. These are generally termed as "Florists' Garden Plants." Under this heading could be classed such plants as the hybrid Pyrethrums,

A FIELD OF DAHLIAS IN BLOOM.

Dahlias are an important crop in eastern Massachusetts. The accompanying picture of a field of cactus dahlias at the Dahlia Gardens of J. K. Alexander, East Bridgewater, gives some idea of how the dahlia takes to the climate and soil of this section. Mr. Alexander has issued a folder with full instructions on dahlia culture covering the subject very thoroughly in every detail. While intended primarily for amateur instruction yet it is written by a specialist and contains much of practical value even to the commercial grower and anyone wishing a copy can have it for the asking.

Hollyhocks, Larkspurs, Phloxes, Gailardias, German Iris, Japan Iris, Primroses, and other plants which are being developed and improved by cultivation.

There is one plant which, to my mind, has not been improved by the hybridizer, and that is the columbine, or aquilegia. It is my opinion and that of the majority of hardy plant growers that there is nothing as pretty as the pure species. The garden-grown seed, where several varieties are grown in a limited area, is hard to get pure, as they are so easily hybridized and cross-fertilized by the agency of insects, so where in the collection a species wants to be perpetuated it is always safer to have them covered with fine muslin, to keep insects away.

As to the purposes for which these plants are being used, we can divide them as follows: Plants used for borders, rock or Alpine plants, water and bog plants, and plants used for massing amongst or in front of shrubbery or for wild garden purposes."

EASTER AT COLLEGE POINT.

A. Schultheis has this year the most tempting display of Easter plants we have ever seen there, on our annual visit. This is particularly true of the roses, of which there are several large houses full. The so-called Baby Ramblers have to some extent usurped the place in the popular favor formerly enjoyed by the large growing Ramblers, partly because of their more convenient size and correspondingly lower price, and the majority of the varieties seen this year are of that class. Ellen Poulssen is a gem, with flowers of the Baby Tausendschoen type but not equal to the latter in perfume. Erna Teschendorff is an improvement on the original Baby Rambler, color much more vivid and the flowers strikingly regular in form. Others are Baby Van Nes, Peach Blossom, Marie, Frau Ada Rehfeldt and Baby Abel Chatenay which in their great variety make a sparkling show all together. These are seen not only in small bush form but in a variety of basket shapes, half-standards, etc.

The azaleas are glorious as ever but their attractiveness is greatly augmented by the addition in recent years of a number of soft salmon pink varieties of much beauty, such as Blushing Bride, Daybreak, Elso Roelker and Lady Roosevelt.

The ericas, for which this place is known far and wide are superb this year and a number of new ones of the tubular flowered class are deservedly admired. These include President Faure, King Edward VII. and several others. The best Easter seller is the lovely E. cupressina, with its peculiarly soft green foliage and myriads of pink bells. Other favorites are cylindrica, ventricosa, persoluta alba, codonodes Veitchii, etc.

The French hydrangeas, which we described quite fully last year are rapidly fulfilling our prediction that they were destined to supersede the old Otaksa for spring forcing. They are more easily handled and more reliable and prolific bloomers, the blue and pink varieties having the largest sale. Lilacs, rhododendrons, genistas and hybrid roses all contribute to the brilliant display now to be seen and the air is laden with fragrance.

A SIGN OF SPRING.

Our advertising columns this week announce the opening of the plant auction season in New York with a desirable lot of seasonable planting material, by William J. Elliott. Mr. Elliott promises that the stock will be of the usual high quality which, in past seasons, has brought the critical buyers to this pioneer house.

TWO GREAT SPRING EXHIBITIONS

THE BOSTON SHOW.

We have been privileged to visit exhibitions in Boston continuously for nearly half a century and have seen some superb shows in the halls of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society during that period, but never any to compare in size and splendor with the one that opened in Horticultural Hall this Thursday, March 18th afternoon. The Massachusetts Horticultural Society has in its recognition and welcome to the visiting American Rose Society simply overwhelmed itself. Every available foot of space is occupied to the limit in the three halls and even the vestibule is crowded with exhibits and there are truck-loads of plants for which no room can be made. In whatever direction one looks, is a veritable blaze of floral exuberance. As we go to press only a few awards have been made and consequently the names of exhibitors in most of the competitive classes are not obtainable for this report, which can be but superficial at best and our readers must wait till next week for details. The largest display is by R. & J. Farquhar & Co., who have transformed the farther end of the large exhibition hall into a beautiful garden with fountain and basin in the centre of a bed of spirea rubens, lily of the valley and white wisterias. In the background a wind-mill lighted and in motion forms the centre of an expansive landscape and the whole is massed with forced prunuses, and cherries, Kæmpferi and mollis azaleas, lilacs, standard wisterias and magnolias, malacoides and obconica primroses, etc., arranged in perfect taste.

The orchid groups are exceptionally good. A. W. Preston, gard. J. L. Smith, is represented by a very extensive display as are also F. J. Dolansky, Mrs. C. G. Weld, gard. W. C. Rust, T. T. Watt and Weld Gardens, gard. D. Finlayson. A splendid arrangement of orchids on moss-draped branches by J. T. Butterworth attracts particular attention. Cattleyas and the various spring flowering dendrobiums form the main part of the orchid groups.

The two great features of the lecture hall are first, the display of roses, Ramblers and H. T.'s, by M. H. Walsh, which is the most varied, extensive and beautiful Mr. Walsh has ever made, so far as our memory serves; second, Thomas Roland's wonderful group of acacias, ericas, etc., not for competition, and the group of trained roses occupying the entire stage, by the same exhibitor. Another group of acacias in unusual variety and symmetry is shown by Mrs. Fred Ayer, gard. George Page.

The cyclamen classes occupy a goodly section of the large hall floor and are the equal of any that have ever been seen here.

The entire space around the walls of both halls is banked high with resplendent masses of flowering plants, bulbous stock, palms, etc., in endless variety, but the names of the many exhibitors are not disclosed at this writing. Among the novelties are two lovely pure pink hybrid azaleas, raised from A. Kæmpferi and A. amoena, by Jackson Dawson; winter-flowering antirrhinums in many colors from H. Huebner; climbing Pink Killarney rose from Peirce Bros., and there are many unusual things such as Cherokee roses, new camellias, etc., from many contributors.

The carnation men are out in full force and their displays are fully up to the record as to quality and quantity and they beat the record by far in their beautiful baskets and hampers arranged for effect and for education of the public in the use of the carnation—something that Horticulture has been for years recommending and pleading for.

The tables decorated for dinner, of which there are many, are much better than in the past. Only two prizes are offered and Ed. MacMulkin is winner of 1st, with a simple centre piece and corsages of Dendrobium nobile, lily of the valley and adiantum. Second goes to Mrs. Duncan Finlayson for a dainty arrangement of pink sweet peas and adiantum, with corsage bouquets of Coelogyne cristata alba. The retail florists have contributed still further to the interest of the show by contributions of many baskets elegant in design and tastily filled with flowers in unique combinations. There are a few vases of fine roses but the cut rose exhibits of the American Rose Society are not to be staged until Friday, the 19th, and consequently our account of same must wait until next week.

The foyer is filled to overflowing with rich exhibits of sweet peas and pansies from Wm. Sim and brilliant groups of bulbous and other showy material in pans, including a collection of many hundreds of new Darwin tulips from Mrs. L. A. Breck. There are some very complete exhibits of fruit and forced vegetables in the loggia.

Plentifully scattered throughout the large hall are canary birds in wicker cages suspended from upright flower and ribbon-decked stands, their music mingling sweetly with that of the orchestra. The scene is one not to be forgotten.

The exhibition closes on Sunday night, March 21.

NEW YORK SPRING FLOWER SHOW.

There are two things that stand out preeminently in the show now going on in New York—the remarkable advance in the artistic arrangement of the trade exhibitors and the dominance of the private gardeners. Competition is very keen in all the leading classes particularly the "specials."

The chief trade contributors are Julius Roehrs Co., Bobbink & Atkins, A. N. Pierson, Inc., F. R. Pierson Co., W. H. Siebrecht and Lager & Hurrell among the growers and Max Sehling and G. E. M. Stumpp among the retailers. Among the private gardeners, the "old guard" includes W. H. Duckham, J. Canning, P. W. Popp, J. H. Dodds, James Stuart, William Cordes, D. Gordon, E. Fardell, R. M. Johnstone, P. J. Bacheler, J. Everitt, H. Gaut, D. S. Miller and A. J. Loveless. The Rose Garden competition is a prime feature, and the public swarmed around the two entries.

This show sets a new standard. The stereotyped style of display has gone, and in its stead a new scheme, kaleidoscopic in color effect, is beautifully alluring. The cultural quality of the plants is of an unusually high order. And the public comes with its support. On the opening day, the attendance exceeded by a long way that of the corresponding day last year.

The Department of Parks, by its superintendent, J. H. Beatty, is represented by a large display of flowering and foliage plants, including azaleas indica, amoena, and mollis; cinerarias, genistas, amaryllis, camellias, Japanese cherries, narcissi, tulips, hyacinths, palms, pandanus, ferns, euphorbias and Jasminum primulinum.

This exhibit is intended to call the attention of the public to the effort the department is making along horticultural lines in the Department Conservatory in Central Park, in the neighborhood of 106th street and Fifth avenue. It was only decided upon at a late date.

It is too early when this is written to give awards, for the judges' task on the opening day lasted late. In a word, artistically and horticulturally, New York has arrived. Next week we shall tell all about it in detail.

MANHATTAN'S TRIUMPH.

This is not a report of the Flower Show. I came over to Manhattan on other business. But when I got here from Philadelphia, I found so much local enthusiasm about the Flower Show that I had to side-track my own important affairs and go up and take a look. I'm glad I did.

The New York boys—bless their hearts—have done great things in recent years; but this last is really a crowning glory.

For generations New York was a by-word for civic spirit in horticulture—she was not there. Boston, Philadelphia—even crude Chicago—away ahead of her!

But today's show puts her where she belongs, and that's why I say—"Hats off to Manhattan." All men know what a snorting unbeliever I have been for the past thirty-two years about New York's trying to make us think she was a leader. I have always looked on her as a village kid! Glory be, that I have lived long enough to see this splendid transformation. From now on, we will be justified in looking on the metropolis of our country as a leader and not a tail-end in horticulture.

This is the way the show sized itself up to me—as compared with anything in the past:—

1. More material;
2. Better material;
3. Better arranged.

The details about it all will come out next week and this preliminary glimpse is only to whet your appetite and put you in tune to listen to the story.

Those rose gardens certainly were great. Frank R. Pierson's inspiration about planting below the boardwalk is the best ever. You have to see that to appreciate it. The orchid displays were the best I have ever seen. Among the many, that picture frame from Roehrs stood out impressively and was worth millions. I never realized what could be done with Schizanthus until Bell showed us. It is wonderful. I never realized what could be done with Amaryllis until Duckham showed us. Wonderful. And the primulas—the malacoides and alba; the obconica grandiflora (all shades); such splendid specimens—almost beyond belief.

I could talk to you all night but the P. O. and the press presses. I "blew in" by accident and am glad I did.

Hats off to Manhattan!

A PURE WHITE GLADIOLUS.

This illustration shows what unquestionably will be one of the leading commercial gladioli. There are white gladioli in plenty but this one is absolutely pure white, without mark or flush in the throat. It is one of Kunderd's future introductions as soon as the stock is sufficient. The picture does not show it fully out as it is one of the bloomers with half a dozen or more flowers open at once.

LIFTERS AND LEANERS.

There are two kinds of people on earth today:
Just two kinds of people, no more I say;
Not the rich and the poor, for to count a man's wealth
You must first know the state of his conscience and health;
Not the humble and proud, for in life's little span
Who puts on vain airs is not counted a man.
Not the happy and sad, for the swift flying years
Bring each man his laughter and each man his tears.
No! the two kinds of people on earth I mean
Are the people who lift, and the people who lean.
Wherever you go you will find the world's masses
Are always divided in just the two classes.
And, oddly enough, you will find, too, I ween,
There's only one lifter to twenty who lean.
In which class are you? Are you easing the load
Of overtaxed lifters who toil down the road?
Or are you the leaner, who lets others bear
Your portion of labor, and worry and care?
—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

BLACK SPOT ON ROSE3.

Horticulture Pub. Co.:

In the latest issue of your paper there was an article recommending the ammoniacal copper carbonate mixture for black spot on roses. Will you kindly publish the formula for this mixture. Also do you consider paris green the best remedy for thrips, and how much would you put to 50 gallons of water? Yours truly,
Texas. A. M.

Take copper carbonate 5 ounces, ammonia 3 pints, water 45 gallons. Make a paste of the copper carbonate with a little water; dilute the ammonia with 7 or 8 quarts of water, add the copper carbonate to the ammonia and water, and stir until thoroughly dissolved. It is hardly advisable to use paris green in the rose house to combat thrips. Tobacco smoke used lightly and persistently is preferable. The medium formula for paris green mixture is one-third pound paris green, two-thirds pound fresh lime to 50 gallons water.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

GARDENERS' AND FLORISTS' CLUB OF BOSTON.

This club had a good meeting on Tuesday evening, March 16. It was well attended and interesting and breezy throughout. Committee reports were all acceptable and plans outlined for the future included a proposed picnic to be held in midsummer. President Bartsch gave a glowing account of his recent visit to Chicago as a member of the S. A. F. Executive Board. L. J. Reuter, who had been slated to talk on roses was unable to attend and Eber Holmes graciously stepped into the breach and gave a nice practical talk on the rose question in its various phases. He recommended rose culture as promising an excellent future for any earnest young man who will take it up seriously as a life work. The question of the effect of sawdust and shavings mixed in manure brought out quite a number of opinions for and against its use, the character of the soil and the kind of wood in the shavings being generally accepted as having an important bearing on this question.

Mr. Holmes mentioned as good H. T. roses for out-door garden culture in this latitude, the Killarneys, Testout, Mock, Russell, Radiance, Hadley, Richmond, Teplitz, MacArthur, Robin Hood, Sunburst, Margaret Dickson, Druschka, Kaiserin and others.

The judges awarded a cultural certificate to Chas. Cooper, gardener for Miss Amy Lowell for a large specimen of Clivia miniata with twelve enormous trusses of bloom, a report of cultural merit to James Wheeler for yellow daisies Etoile d'Or, and a vote of thanks to W. W. Edgar Co., for French hydrangeas Mme. Moulliere and Souv. de Chautard.

CONNECTICUT HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The March meeting of this society was held in the County Building, Hartford, on the evening of March 12th. It was voted to hold a show on Thursday, June 10th, the proceeds above expenses to go to the Red Cross Society. As announced, this was "Carnation" night, and William A. Dawson, of Willimantic, exhibited his new seedling carnation "Red Wing," registered under No. 565 by the American Carnation Society. Alfred Cebelius exhibited excellent roses and carnations. A. N. Pierson, Inc., displayed a vase of Arawana, a very dark red carnation. President Mason had on exhibition a vase of Spirea Philadelphia, also carnations.

First class certificates were awarded to William A. Dawson and A. N. Pierson, Inc.; cultural certificate to Alfred Cebelius; honorable mention to Warren S. Mason.

At the next meeting there will be a demonstration of the art of pruning fruit trees by G. H. Hollister, C. H. Sierman, and John F. Huss, W. W. Hunt to furnish the stock. This will also be rose night, and we expect to have our lady members with us.

ST. LOUIS FLORIST CLUB.

The St. Louis Florist Club held its monthly meeting, March 11, 50 members present. Vice-President W. S. Wells presided. A letter from the County Flower Growers' Association said that they at their last meeting voted to assist the Florist Club in entertaining the American Carnation Society when it meets here next January. The chair then appointed Messrs. Windler, Guy and Grossart to act as judges for the exhibition staged at the Windler salesrooms. W. W. Ohlweiler, superintendent of the Missouri Botanical Garden, read an interesting paper on "Propagation of Soil for Florists' Use." A discussion was started on the question "Can Carnations Be Grown at a Profit at Two Cents, for the Season?" Ended with a decision that they could not. The exhibits were as follows:

W. J. Pfeifer, roses Killarney, White Killarney, Killarney Brilliant, Hadley, Milady and Ward, also Mazzara violets. W. A. Rowe, fancy jonquills and carnations. Al. Kropp, J. A. Kropp, Anton Bros., Chas. Meier and A. H. Abner, carnations. Hugo Gross, sweet peas, Pink and Lavender Freesia and a new blue butterfly sweet pea. Thos. Kirkwood & Sons and O. C. May, sweet peas. Henry Meier, California violets. A. Kropp, snapdragons. John Stridel, new Sunbeam and other carnations. Joe Hauser, new Kaiser violets. Phil Goebel, sweet peas. Therman Nursery Co., new rose Minnetonka. G. W. Thost, carnations. A. Wiber, of Hillsboro, Ill., daisies. Shiller, of Toledo, Ohio, ferns. Ben Albers, primroses, etc. J. F. Ammann Co., Windler Floral Co., Alton Floral Co. and J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., carnations. Wentzel & Hecht, sweet peas and carnations. Windler Co., florists' supplies.

The crowd numbered nearly 75 and they were all well entertained by the members of the Windler Co., to whom a vociferous vote of thanks was extended.

LANCASTER COUNTY FLORISTS' CLUB.

When we get over one-fourth of the members of a Florists' Club to get out at five o'clock in the morning, take a visiting trip covering over 250 miles and get home by 11.30 at night, we feel that we have a very live Club, and if it were not for the fact that a goodly number of our members do their own firing the number on this occasion would have been over one-half.

The first stop was at E. A. Stroud's, Strafford, Pa., and, being met by automobiles we were rushed to the greenhouses and shown through by W. E. Johnson who did the honors nobly. Carnations are always the first attraction and we were well pleased with the houses of Matchless, Gloriosa, Philadelphia and Mrs. C. W. Ward. The retail end of this establishment has grown to a two-truck delivery size and of course requires some room to grow the stock. Among the unusual things for variety, a batch of wall-flowers and some very choice camelias were especially noticeable. Multi-florum and giganteum lilies were in extra fine form and the number ran into many thousands.

The Florex Gardens was our next point and our first inspection was their large house, where one does not think in ordinary florists' figures but gets into those of high finance. When one is in their King house 172 feet wide, 700 feet long and 30 feet high, it does not take much of an imagination to complete the rest—seven miles of paths, sixty thousand panes of glass, fifty-six thousand feet of heating pipes 79,000 roses, 50,000 plumosus; bigness is characteristic of the whole place. H. B. Girvin a former Lancasterian has charge of the carnations and they are simply superb. White Enchantress and Enchantress proper are here on solid beds as good as they have ever been grown and it would do Peter Fisher's heart good to see these Enchantress, immense flowers, perfect in form, color and substance and scarcely a bursted calyx to be seen. They also have a pink variety of their own called Ruth and it is a wonder that some novelty introducer has not captured it as it certainly has all the ear marks of a profitable variety. They also have a flesh-colored pink that looked good but does not ship very well and will be discarded. Having carnations on benches and in solid beds they have decided after a number of years' trial that the solid beds are the most profitable. A small house of snapdragons upheld the reputation of the place by producing ten-foot stems.

After a dinner at North Wales we started on our way again bound for Hatboro. We were shown around the Weiss establishment by Harry Weiss who proved an enchanting host in spite of the fact that we came upon him unexpectedly. We were not disappointed at the quality of blooms grown here, and the extreme neatness of the place. This firm believes in trying a new one properly or not at all and will plant over 5,000 Alice next season and they have made enough out of Georgious to plant 30,000 of this variety for next season. Our next stop was the Stevenson rose house 72 feet wide and 850 feet long of Lord & Burnham construction, their representative Dennis T. Connor having met us at the Weiss place. Not being rose growers, this house was more of an attraction as a house than the crop but we were shown how to pack flowers and it was a revelation to many of us.

We then hustled to Philadelphia and divided, some going to Neissen's, some to The Pennock-Meehan Co., to see how flowers were handled in the closing hours of a commission house. There was some food for thought here and this part of the trip was very interesting.

After a 6.30 dinner we all marched into the rooms of the Philadelphia Florists' Club and inspected the carnation blooms on exhibition, it being carnation night for the club. They were so busy showing us the hospitalities of the club that it was time for us to leave before the meeting opened. They evidently forgot they had a meeting on or are not as prompt as our Lancaster Club which opens on the minute designated on the notice, regardless of everything else, but we had a good time all the same and only wait an opportunity to reciprocate.

Our next trip comes the 13th of this month, leaving Lancaster 12.15 noon with Christiana as the first stopping point and as many stops on the way back to Lancaster as daylight will permit. Visitors are always welcome on these trips and are always allowed to pay their own way so that they do not have to feel under any obligations to any one. The meeting of the club is on the 18th, with Charles Grakelow as the speaker. ALBERT M. HERR.

The next meeting will be held Friday evening, April 9th. P. W. POPP, Cor Sec'y.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

The Newport Garden Club and the Newport Horticultural Society have decided upon Aug. 12, 13 and 14 as the dates for the mid-summer flower show to be held in Newport.

George Arnold addressed the members of the Rochester Florists' Association March 8 on the subject of Growing Seeds in this Country. He maintained that owing to the European war, a shortage of seeds is bound to develop and consequently cut flowers, also an increase in cost.

The regular monthly meeting of the New London (Conn.) Horticultural Society was held on the 11th inst. W. J. Schoonman of the New London County Nurseries spoke on Trees for Pleasure and Profit. Mr. Schier spoke on sprays for different insects. Professor Jenkins of New Haven will speak at

The contest closes on May 31 so that enrollments should be sent in promptly.

A WARNING AGAINST TREE REPAIR FAKERS

Bulletin 113 of Mass. Forestry Association.

The Massachusetts Forestry Association has been trying to protect the forests and shade trees of the Commonwealth for the past sixteen years. Its fight generally has been against insects, ignorance and lack of interest, but today a new evil besets our trees in the form of the quack "tree surgeon," and to be true to the cause we are forced to oppose him also. Not only is he to be found in Massachusetts, but in nearly every section of the country where tree repair work is being done.

Usually this faker has worked for a few days or perhaps a few weeks in the crew of a company which does tree repair work. With little or no scientific knowledge of trees, he goes into business for himself and poses as an "expert."

A typical and favorite trick employed by these "experts" is to represent that they have some mysterious insecticide, known only to themselves, which will render trees immune from further attacks by insects. All that is necessary is to give the tree an injection or a thorough spraying with this fluid. Usually these "experts" profess to do anything in the forestry, landscape gardening, and tree repair lines.

The association has learned of so many cases where unsuspecting parties have been humbugged by fakers that it now proposes to bring this matter squarely before the public in such a way as to eliminate this fraud. These men obtain money directly under false pretense, and at the same time do the public an injury by mutilating the public and private shade trees. The work of some of these men has been reported to us and unless they cease operating in this state, their names will be made public, and the law will be used to punish them.

We would call attention to some points which, if followed, will help to protect your trees.

1. Do not permit anyone to do repair work on your trees until he produces reliable recommendations. The honest man in the business can and will be glad to do this. Be sure to verify the references with the parties referred to in such recommendations.

2. When having gypsy and brown tail moth work done by private parties, do not pay the bill until you have an inspection of the work made by the local moth superintendent. This inspection will cost you nothing.

3. We advise against the use of climbing irons in tree repair work, especially on shade and ornamental trees, although it may cost more to have your work done without the use of such irons. It is a well-known fact that many rot-producing fungi can attack a tree only through some wound in the cambium layer. By the use of climbing irons, hundreds of little wounds are made in trees, which are ideal places for the fungi to begin their work. While these irons will damage any kind of tree, they are especially injurious to those having smooth bark. From the esthetic standpoint alone, a tree whose bark is scratched and pricked full of holes by the use of climbing irons is very unsightly.

4. Do not permit anyone to spray or tangle-foot your trees without knowing that the materials used meet the approval of the State Forester.

5. Have your trees inspected and necessary repairs made once a year by a competent party. Trees are analogous to teeth, in the matter of care. Go to a dentist once in five years and we are safe in saying that your bill will be greater than the total cost of yearly inspections would have been, and your teeth will be in worse condition. That principle applies to trees.

6. Find out what the approximate cost of repairing your trees will be before allowing the party to begin work.

7. Do not have your trees filled with cement, unless the cavities are too conspicuous and you do it for esthetic purposes, or unless the cavity is such that drainage is difficult to secure. There are some cases where filling is justifiable but there is entirely too much cement being put into our trees. On the whole it is generally better to spend the money which might be used for cement fillings, for frequent inspections, and for creosote, coal tar, paint and other preservatives.

Unfortunately the business of repairing trees is subject to many abuses. For instance, it is possible to fill a cavity with cement and make a perfectly good job on the exterior, while on the inside, the work may be slighted and the fungus which caused the decay be allowed to remain so that the decay goes on just as before. The cambium layer may even grow over the filling and the fungi still be eating away at the heart of the tree. The mycelium or rootlets of the fungus are so minute that they are invisible to the naked eye. With some forms of fungi, the wood is discolored before it is invaded, while with others the wood is affected without any perceptible change of color. For these reasons it is impossible to fill cavities with any assurance that the fungus is removed. After a cavity is once filled, inspection of the interior is impossible. We believe that it is cheaper and safer to leave the cavities open, except in the cases previously mentioned and to make frequent inspections, treating the wounds from time to time with preservatives.

Another thing besides quackery which is hurting the tree repair business and retarding the practice of conservation of trees, is the excessive charges made by some parties for such work. People get discouraged when they find that their bills are so exorbitant and hence prefer to let their trees go without attention. This is a mistake, but it is the result of the action of some parties in the business, who have aimed to make the bills as large as possible, often advising that work be done on trees that are not worth repairing.

On the other hand many people having such work done do not realize that climbing over trees is hazardous to workmen, hence it is difficult, and naturally expensive. There is no reason why the cost of such work should be prohibitive, however, because the expensive process of filling every cavity with cement can usually be avoided. In cases of bad decay safety must be considered, and possibly even a new and vigorous tree may be necessary rather than to incur the chance of other trees being destroyed or persons injured in the fall of the old one. Besides it may be cheaper to have an old tree removed and a good sized young tree put in its place, than to waste time and energy on a tree that is sure to die in a few years under the best of care. Much money has been spent uselessly in this work by amateurs who were gaining experience at the expense of their clients and the trees. The vocation at best is in the early stages of development, which fact of itself should be sufficient to warn people against charlatanism.

Two things we wish to emphasize: First, secure an honest and efficient party to do your work; secondly, have him inspect your trees once a year, and make the necessary repairs.

We shall welcome any information which will lead to further discovery and prosecution of the fake "tree surgeon" in Massachusetts.

IMPORTATION OF EUROPEAN PINE PROHIBITED.

No European pine trees will be permitted to be imported into the United States after July 1, a quarantine order to this effect having been signed by the Secretary of Agriculture. This action has been taken to save American pine trees from the pine shoot moth which has long done much damage in European forests. This pest has already become established in nurseries and parks in some states but it is believed that by pruning and destroying the affected shoots the disease can be stamped out if no more infected nursery stock is imported into the country.

The moth feeds mostly on young trees between 6 and 15 years of age. It lays its eggs early in August singly on the new buds of the pine. The young larva soon hatches and eats its way into the bud where it spends the winter. As soon as the sap begins to rise in the trees it leaves its winter quarters and bores into the adjoining bud, destroying this and as many others as it needs for food. When the remaining buds begin to grow into young shoots, the larva attacks these as well, consuming the entire inside of the youngest and injuring the more developed ones so that they grow downward and outward instead of upward. It is impossible to reach the larva with any insecticide after it has once found its winter quarters, and the only effective way of combating the pest is to destroy the infested buds and twigs.

THE GLASS SITUATION FROM THE MANUFACTURER'S STANDPOINT.

Address of E. R. Johnston, President
Glass Manufacturers Association, 200 N. Dearborn
St., Chicago, Ill. 60610. Before the National Association of Glass Distributors at New York, N.Y.

It is apparent there is some business still existing in this country as is evidenced by the placing of orders for more than a million boxes of glass within the last ten days. When it is taken into consideration that all lines of business are stagnant it is remarkable that the buying movement of this magnitude could be awakened in such a short time. It only shows what we can expect in the way of real prosperity when the movement is fully under way. It is rather surprising that the jobbers complain about lack of profit on the business they are doing, regardless of the volume. It would seem that if business was quiet and the volume diminished that they should be the more alert to show a profit on such transactions as exist, but if their statements are to be taken as accurate, the various lines of glass that the distributors are handling show little or no profit. I have been a member of various organizations for the last 25 years. They were all worth forming and supporting and each in turn served some good purpose. The window glass people have been fairly well organized for the past three years and this is the first time that I can recall when the jobbers have not co-operated when the manufacturers were doing some consistent team work. I believe this is the first time that the jobbers have failed to unite their interests and work in harmony with the manufacturer and at the same time there have been more organizations and more time spent in holding meetings than any time I can recall. With National, Sectional and Local organizations it is most surprising that the jobbers do not obtain better results. I am not attempting to point out the reasons as they will know what their own troubles are, but I do know that one or more jobbers in every principal city are spending time and money carrying out plans that are offensive and harmful to the people that I represent and which in turn will be harmful to themselves. I don't believe it is too late to remedy this condition and I think the same force put into a co-operative movement would change the whole situation inside of thirty days and would make 1915 a most excellent year even if the volume should be below normal. In some sections it is the apparent purpose of the jobber to sell glass cheaper than the manufacturer, and where he has through one method or another made contracts below the prevailing prices, he has invariably given it away and worked this supposed advantage to his own financial loss and detriment. It certainly should be far more helpful to the distributor to get his normal profits of 20 per cent. on his smaller business than to jeopardize his entire sales by trying to scalp out an extra 2½ per cent. that his competitor does not enjoy.

Relative to the output of factories the trade seems to be somewhat interested in the quantity of small glass produced, and just having completed a canvass of the factories I can say the production of first three brackets single in the hand plants from the commencement of the blast does not exceed 35 per cent. and I am confident that during the remainder of the fire the percentage will be reduced still further. For years past it has been stated that 50 per cent. small single was the least that a well managed plant could handle, but several factories have been getting only 25 per cent. first three brackets single and one plant reduced the quantity during a four weeks' settlement to 18 per cent. With this curtailment of small glass with the hand factories and reported improvements in the character of the production in the machine factories, the question of small glass should not be the menace that it has heretofore.

On the question of exports, there has been some lull. No large amount of business has been placed from abroad during the past six weeks but during January inquiries have increased greatly and within the next sixty days I expect there will be some very substantial orders placed. One feature that has retarded buying of glass by foreign firms has been their inability to arrange for space on ocean steamers, and with an uncertainty as to the deliveries, they are not inclined to buy freely. The inquiries that are coming in are accompanied by specifications for hundreds of thousands of boxes and undoubtedly a great deal of this is going to be actual shipping business in a very short time.

To look ahead, I would venture the suggestion that with proper handling there should be excellent business in window glass both at home and abroad for the next two years at least. The manufacturers are most desirous of contributing their full part toward handling these two years with profit to all concerned and they are most anxious to have the support and co-operation of the jobber. Many of them feel that they have had antagonism from quite a percentage and believe that the policy of trying to shade the market or find weak spots is not the broad way in which money can be made. The factories have been willing to regulate their output in accordance with the demand and are willing to adopt any other rational suggestion of the jobbers as to re-establishing and maintenance of a differential to the qualified buyers and feel that if there has been any shortcomings in the past it has been largely the fault of the distributor and they should welcome a change that would mean satisfactory balance sheets to their jobbing friends rather than to hear continued complaints of a year's hard work without advancement.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

The Page Company, Boston, has just issued the fourth volume in the deservedly popular Hadley Hall Series, by Louise M. Breitenbach, author of the three preceding volumes. We take especial pleasure, at all times, in saying a word of commendation for fiction books of the class which the Page people invariably send out. This story is one that any girl who reads it will pronounce delightful. Flowers are accorded their proper place and attention in the chapters, which constitutes another claim upon our esteem. For a birthday gift to a young lady, for a vacation reading, it is all right. 320 pages. Illustrations by John Goss. Price $1.50 net.

Studies of Trees. By J. J. Levison, Forester to the Department of Parks, Brooklyn, N. Y., and Lecturer on Ornamental and Shade Trees at the Yale University Forest School. It may be true that there is nothing new under the sun and it is also true that a good many books have been written on tree subjects in recent years but a newer and better light may ever be thrown upon even a much more overworked subject than that to which this book is devoted and that is just what Mr. Levison has here done. Long years of training and practical observation have equipped him well for such a work and his efforts will be appreciated not only by the public who are ready for any authentic information on the care of trees but by the professional student and planter who will find in its pages much to interest and help them. The several chapters giving characters and facts useful in the ready identification of trees at any season of the year strike us as especially valuable. In addition to the distinguishing characteristics of the various trees listed, the soil best suited to its needs, its enemies, its value commercially or decorative, etc., are fully recorded. The structures and requirements of trees, trees for street, lawn, woodland and screening, tree diseases, insects, pruning, etc., forestry, uses of the various woods, and other pertinent topics are fully treated in the other chapters. There are 155 fine plates illustrative of the text and a very complete reference index to the contents. 260 pages. Price $1.60 net. Publishers John Wiley & Sons, Inc., 432 Fourth avenue, New York.

Very truly yours,
S. J. D.

Lily of the valley pips, if in perfect dormant condition, should be kept in refrigerator at a temperature of 26 to 28°, and can then be carried over until February, but if they show any signs of starting when received, pips should be planted right away.

Lily bulbs, if any description like L. multiflorum, giganteum and the hardy Japanese varieties, such as Lilium auratum, rubrum, etc., should be put at 34° and then can be kept until November-December.

Friends and Fellow Market Gardeners

Baltimore County, Maryland

March 2nd, 1915.

I hereby inform my many friends, the Market Gardeners, Cannors and the public in general, I have placed my entire supply of "John Baer" Tomato Seed which I personally grew and selected, with J. Bolgiano & Son of Baltimore, Maryland. Any seed offered by any other source is not my production and I cannot feel morally responsible for the results it may produce.

I have given this tomato my greatest care and attention for many years and take pride in seeing that my fellow Market Gardeners are getting only seed that truly represents the results of my lifework.

NEWS ITEMS FROM EVERYWHERE

BOSTON.

Houghton-Gorney Co. will feature baskets of roses for Easter.

At Harry Quint's Back Bay store the "popular price" idea is taking hold in this high-class district and is being very favorably received.

N. F. McCarthy who has been in Bermuda for the past month has returned much benefited by the opportunity for rest and quiet.

Galvin's new store on Park street, is a veritable indoor garden. An additional touch of cheery welcome is given in the use of canaries in cages suspended from the ceiling.

The closing lecture for this season at Horticultural Hall, Boston, will be by Prof. H. H. Whetzel, Ithaca, N. Y., Saturday, March 27, on Diseases of the Peony, illustrated by stereopticon views.

Waban Rose Conservatories are making a fine display of their new rose, Mrs. Moorfield Storey, at the Rose Show. This variety is being received with favor all over the country, especially in the East.

C. Fine, formerly located at 136 Massachusetts avenue, has moved to larger quarters at 121 Massachusetts avenue. This move to a bigger store has been necessitated in part by the rapid development of his business.

J. B. McDonald, of Wax Bros., delivered a very interesting talk before the Lynn Art Club, March 12, on the construction and planning of old-fashioned gardens. Mr. McDonald has had much practical experience in this phase of landscape gardening.

Sidney Hoffman has opened up a branch store at 194 Boylston street, where Ed. MacMulkin was formerly located. Mr. Hoffman is one of the best decorators in the city. An effective display can be seen in the windows of his new store, in which a toy automobile is centered.

Kameyama & Serada of North Cambridge dispose of a large part of their bulb stock through the 5c. and 10c. stores, and say they find it more profitable to market their product by contract in this way than to take chances on the fluctuations of the markets. They have already sold their entire Easter crop of bulbs and lilies.

Penn. the Florist, had an attractive St. Patrick's Day display this week. Brilliantly colored butterflies were tethered to the plants with some fine thread, so as not to flutter away. Roses in baskets and other rose combinations will be featured for Easter. It is expected that much public interest in the rose will be stimulated by the Rose Show in Horticultural Hall this week.

Boston's two old pioneer wholesale flower establishments, Welch Bros. Co. and N. F. McCarthy & Co., are well prepared for a big Easter rush. Both have secured large lily crops of very fine quality and an abundance of all other material required for the flower trade of the big floral week. Lily plants are a big specialty with Welch Bros., their custom being to have them shipped in crates direct from the greenhouses to their customers. Plant auction sales at McCarthy's are to open up in a few days.

With the rebuilding of the Gray Herbarium at Harvard, by which the original frame structure has been completely made over in concrete and steel, Harvard has the best equipped building in the world of its kind. The building is in the Botanic Garden in Cambridge. The original herbarium was built in 1864 to house the collection of Professor Asa Gray. The first stage in the reconstruction was the erecting of the Kidder wing to house the indexed specimens of flowering plants and ferns. The library wing was then constructed and the George Robert White laboratories are now located there.

New Bedford, Mass.—Business has been somewhat dull lately, though good roses still find a ready sale at comparatively high prices.

The Horticultural Society is to hold its annual dinner on the eighth of April at the Parker House. The entertainment committee, Messrs. Barrows, McVicker and Post promise some readings, and some good music for the occasion.

WASHINGTON.

George H. Cooke who has been confined to his home on account of illness for about two weeks is again at his store.

The store of Fred H. Kramer, 916 F street, Northwest, presents a very attractive appearance at this time, as he is holding his annual exhibition of spring flowers.

David A. Bisset will leave early next month for the Northern Great Plains field station at Mandan, N. D., going thence to various points in Washington, Oregon and California to confer with and assist field representatives of the bureau of plant industry, of which he is a laboratory aid.

S. Kahn Sons & Company department store last week held their annual sale of rose bushes, flowering shrubs and grape vines, which they sold at ten cents each. So great was the demand for these that they quickly cleaned out their stock and were forced to recall their advertisement which was running in the daily papers.

The bankrupt estate of the Washington Florists' Company was offered for sale at public auction at the store. But two bids were offered, both by J. Louis Loose, the president of the concern. A number of local florists and others present at the sale were ready to bid on individual articles, especially the automobiles, but the bids were made by Mr. Loose in bulk.

Letters have been received by William F. Gude from each of the four express companies in answer to a letter addressed by him to the Interstate Commerce Commission wherein he asked for a modification of that section of Classification No. 22, applying to the shipment of potted plants. Naturally, the express companies declare that the present classification of growing plants is not unreasonable, and that the second class rate was intended to be applied to the cheaper grades of stock such as strawberry, cabbage, tomato plants, etc., and not to flowers or ornamental plants, or plants shipped in receptacles which by their nature require additional care in handling. There is a difference of about twenty-five per cent between the two rates. A conference with a committee of the S. A. F. and O. H. would be acceptable to the representatives of the express companies, the same to be held in New York City, and Mr. Gude is inviting correspondence by those interested that when the time comes for such a conference he may have a good case for presentation.

PITTSBURGH.

The Blind Floral Company expect shortly to reopen road work through their West View plant, which was suspended during the winter. Ligonier block is being used for this work.

It is with regret that we chronicle the recent death of Mrs. Harvey C. Sheaff, whose interment took place on Friday of last week. Mr. Sheaff has the sympathy of many friends and acquaintances in his bereavement.

Julius W. Ludwig, of the Ludwig Floral Company, is negotiating with the railroads for club rates to the Panama-Pacific Exposition. Both he and Mrs. Ludwig together with Mr. and Mrs. Gustave Ludwig, and several others expect to take this trip, remaining "as long as their money lasts."

The McCallum Company is unfortunate this week in the absence of George Marshall, one of the firm, and Karl Klinke, the credit man, both of whom are confined at home by illness. Their neighbor, W. A. Clark, through a severe cold, has almost reached the same stage, keeping up and doing only through heroic measures.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Company opened business this week in its new building at 616-18 Seventh street, which is one of the most modern and complete wholesale houses in the country. Although only three stories are now completed, the foundation and structural work were built with reference to a future building of twelve floors. On the first floor is the store room proper with a mezzanine for ribbons and chiffons. Here, also, are the automatic ammonia refrigerating flower boxes. Offices and supplies are on the second floor, while the third is used for the manufacture of wire designs. There is a case 75 feet long which will keep the baskets in perfect condition, and lavatories on every floor.

PHILADELPHIA.

Prof. McFarlane of the University of Pennsylvania addressed the Garden and Orchard Society on Rhododendrons and Azaleas at 1714 Chestnut street, on March 12th.

FRESH-CUT FLOWERS TODAY.

5000 bunches sweet peas, 15c. bunch.
Double and single violets, 15c. bunch.
Carnations, 60c. dozen.
Tulips, 35c. dozen.
Daffodils, 35c. dozen.

POTTED PLANTS.

Hyacinths, in bloom, 20c. each.
Spirea, in bloom, 50c. each.
Azaleas, in bloom, $1.50 each.
Rose bushes, in bloom, $1 each.

The above is the Wanamaker department store ad. for Saturday, March 13. In view of the incessant invective by a certain class of retail dealers against department stores or any one but themselves selling flowers and plants, it is interesting to note that Wanamaker is getting 60c. a dozen for carnations, while the regular flower stores are only asking 35c. to 50c. a dozen. Unable to sell them at good prices themselves, they seek to prevent others from doing it. G. C. WATSON.

ST. LOUIS.

Vincent Gorly, of Grimm & Gorly, will have to remain in bed for the next ten days with a sprained foot, result of roller skating at one of the local rinks.

W. F. Bentzen and Otto G. Koenig well known in local trade circles ran for the nomination of alderman on the republican ticket, Friday, March 12, and Mr. Bentzen won out and now we want to elect him.

John T. Millekin whose ambition it is to have the largest greenhouse plant in America at Crescent, Mo., perhaps will carry out his plan as he recently sold his interests in the Golden Cycle Mine at Colorado Springs for $4,500,000. Mr. Millekin is now rated as one of the richest men in St. Louis.

Plymouth, Mass.—A man in this town, named Bernard Feldman, is being exploited as a prospective "rival to Luther Burbank," having "revealed a discovery in plant propagation that may be destined to surpass the wonders of the Wizard." Inoculation of the "pulse root" of the tree with certain microbes is the process, and marvelously increased growth is the alleged result which is to enrich the scientific world with another "wizard." Glory be.

Fred Lautenschlager, of Kroeschell Bros. Co., is in the East, where he will attend the flower show and visit Boston and other cities.

It looks now as if the LeMoyné building might become a sort of florists' center some day. "How long is your lease?" is a very frequent question. A. L. Randall and E. C. Amling will soon be able to move in.

Growers of bulbous stock are rejoicing over the fine quality of the stock they are now selling, by far the best they have ever had. It is attributed to the possibility of this country having received the high-class bulbs heretofore reserved for European countries.

Walter M. Schlueter, who was in the sash and door section of the Foley Greenhouse Co. at the old factory, has now rejoined the company at its new place. He is a brother of Christian H. Schlueter, secretary of the firm, and is already at home with the greenhouse material propositions.

The Foley Greenhouse Manufacturing Co. shipped a carload of material this week to August Von Boeselager at Mt. Clemens, Mich., for his new greenhouses. The material will be shipped to Columbus, O., in a few days, for the new vegetable range at the Ohio State University. This makes four state universities that this company has erected greenhouses for in the past year—Illinois, Indiana, Iowa and Ohio. The Von Boeselager house will be of unusual size—42 x 200 feet, and the 24-foot bars are each in one piece.

The Adams Flower Store is receiving credit for catching a crook trying the worn-out game of getting flowers and money on a worthless check. A telephone order for three dollars' worth of flowers and request to send seventeen dollars for change aroused suspicion and a detective was sent to be present when the money was passed. The result is, one less at liberty to make a living at the expense of others.

Eight years ago, the humble shamrock made its first appeal to the plant lovers of Chicago. A few hundred plants were grown in Elgin, Ill., and sold to the wholesalers here for $12.00 per 100. They were in two-inch pots and were resold, to hotels mostly, for 25c. each. Each year has seen the stock increase, and this year about 100,000 are offered in three sizes. The department stores have used them as special offerings, and one store alone uses half the amount grown. Methods of handling have improved also. The ones in thumb pots are stood in flats containing wet sand and so kept fresh. Proper boxes are provided for customers to carry home their plants, and fancy boxes for shipping. It seems as if everything now had been done to popularize the sale of the shamrock, and the public has responded with a will. What plant comes next?

At the meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club, April 8, the members will be entertained by a stereopticon lecture on the trip to San Francisco, given by a representative of the Gregory-Tours. The club has a live man who knows how to get good entertainment for the meetings, and his friends call him "Mike." He is just as popular, however, when it comes to selling flowers at the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, on Michigan avenue, where, with his chief, Paul Klingsporn, they sell every kind of stock to be found in the Chicago flower market. Their supply of roses this year has been unusually fine and arrangements have been made that will secure a still larger supply of the very best to be had another season. Plants as well as cut flowers are a strong feature here. Manager Klingsporn has made his one year in this store count big and to him is due much credit for the year's success.

The body of a man, believed to be that of Albert Scott, of West Roxbury, Mass., was found at Quincy Neck, last Sunday afternoon, by three boys who were taking a stroll through the woods. A receipt for rent made out by the Boston Flower Exchange led to the probable identification. Mr. Scott was the proprietor of greenhouses in West Roxbury, which he conducted under the name of the Willow Hill Greenhouse. He disappeared from home shortly before Thanksgiving. At that time he is said to have been in a highly nervous state that bordered on melancholia. He was well liked by the trade in and about Boston and much regret is felt at his tragic ending.

SAN FRANCISCO NOTES.

John R. Fotheringham, of this city, has just received a large sample line of baskets from the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Company, of Philadelphia, which are well received by the local trade.

The National Association of Park Supervisors and Superintendents is now in progress at the University of California, Berkeley. The closing session will be held in the Southern Pacific auditorium at the Exposition.

George Jacques, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., is leaving the flower business to embark in the hardware trade with some of his friends. Mr. Jacques has many friends among the local florists, to whom his departure from the trade is a matter of regret.

Newton Peck has been named as Horticultural Commissioner of San Mateo county, Cal., in which are located, aside from important fruit-growing interests, some of the principal violet farms of the state, a number of important hothouses and nurseries of ornamental plants.

Albert O. Stein, the Sutter street florist, recently added a basket room to his store, where he is exhibiting a large line of novelty baskets, selected from many lines, many of them being finished in his establishment. He has also set aside a room for the display of artistic jars and pottery for use with flowers.

At the last meeting of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society, March 6, H. Plath brought a collection of very fine primulas from 4-inch pots as an exhibit, which was rated at 85 points. The MacRorie-McLaren Company brought an exhibit of Phalaenopsis leucorrhoda, a natural hybrid of amabilis and Schilleriana, a delicate pink in color. Final arrangements were discussed for the Spring Flower Show under the auspices of the society, in conjunction with the Department of Agriculture of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition. The show will be of greater magnitude than was expected, as plenty of space has been arranged for in the Horticulture building at the Exposition. The Exposition management has come forward liberally with offers for prizes, and an unusually large number of exhibits are promised. The premiums include a gold medal, several silver and a number of bronze medals and diplomas, as well as a large number of cash prizes. The competition is open to all in all classes, and plants and flowers do not necessarily have to be grown by the exhibitors. The show will take place March 19, 20 and 21.

A KINDERGARTEN FOR SUCCESSFUL FLORISTS.

We were talking to Frank J. Dolansky of Lynn, the other day, about old times, and during the conversation he became fondly reminiscent about the days when he first came to this country and was working for Pitcher & Manda at Short Hills, N. J.

He spoke of the men who had been his fellow workers, and the names he mentioned are those that the trade conjures with at the present time, so we list some of them below as a stimulant for all young men now in subordinate positions, in order to emphasize the thought that the present positions held by the young men engaged in floriculture are only stages in the climb to more profitable places; that every place of business is a training school, in which those in minor positions are being paid while they are really learning and preparing themselves for the big opportunity—getting a thorough training in floriculture at the other man's expense—so that when the time comes to launch out into business the intelligent learner will have acquired his knowledge without taking any chances with his little capital. The well-known men listed below possessed this advantage at the big Short Hills establishment:

Daniel MacRorie of MacRorie-McLaren Co., San Francisco; John E. Lager and Henry Hurrell of Summit, N. J.; F. L. Atkins of Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. J.; F. J. Dolansky of Lynn, Mass.; J. H. Troy of New Rochelle, N. Y.; A. T. Boddington of New York; Harry A. Bunyard and Arthur T. Bunyard of New York, and several others.

NEWS NOTES.

Danvers, Mass.—The Woodman greenhouses have been leased by George W. Marshall for a term of 2½ years with privilege of purchase.

Hudson, N. Y.—The establishment of the late R. W. Allen has been sold to Leon Hathaway who will conduct it under the name of The Allen Greenhouses.

Yonkers, N. Y.—James Macdonald, who has been associated with his brother William Macdonald in the florist shop at 2 Main street, has opened a new store at 442 South Broadway. It is known as the "Broadway Flower Shop" and will carry a full line of cut flowers, potted plants and seeds.

PERSONAL.

John G. Tilden has been appointed a member of the Park Commission by the mayor of Malden, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Wyman of North Abington, Mass., are in California viewing the Exposition and will return about April 1.

Frederick Martin, formerly of Wayne, Pa., has accepted the position of gardener at Reynolda Greenhouses and Farms, Winston-Salem, N. C.

Mr. Speelmann of Sassenheim, Holland, who has been in this country on a business tour covering five months sailed for home on Wednesday, March 10, on the Ryndam. Mr. Sassenheim expressed himself as not enthusiastic over the conditions for the Holland trade in this country.

Flower Market Reports

As we go to press, Thursday, the market continues steady. St. Patrick's Day stirred up a fair demand for white stock of all kinds, especially carnations and Narcissus poeticus. The latter cleaned up very well last Tuesday, being in much demand for green coloring. Carnations are plentiful and of excellent quality, but except for last Tuesday and Wednesday they have brought only average prices. Roses remain about the same, excellent quality, but not in great demand. Bulbous flowers relieve the market a bit, moving more easily than other stock. There are plenty of other flowers,—English primroses, antirrhinums, mignonette, pansies, etc. There is no exceptional call for sweet peas. Callas and Easter lilies move slowly. The demand for shamrock plants was one of the redeeming features of the week's business. Flowering plants are being bought in larger quantities and a big variety is offered. The leading retail stores are displaying fine specimens of lilacs, bougainvilleas, French hydrangeas, rambler roses, etc. The long list of flowers and plants available at this time of year is remarkable and makes the season very attractive to the trade.

Quite a busy week has passed and up to this writing the market is in excellent condition. There is a good supply of carnations, roses, sweet peas, freesia, lilies, violets and other stock. Receipts are heavy on tulips and daffodil. Beauties have come on a little better in quality and have good sales considering the high prices. There is plenty of southern asparagus and other good greens and ferns.

Stock daily becomes more plentiful. There is now all that the market can take care of and most houses would welcome more customers. On the busy days stock generally cleans up or nearly so, but all the days are not busy ones. The smaller florists, in the outlying towns, are now able to cut most of the stock they need from their own houses, thus diminishing sales of the wholesalers. Bulbous stock is in good crop generally. Every store, wholesale or retail, has a large assortment, and prices are staying up especially well. This is largely due to the excellent quality this year. In spite of the fact that the stock of the Mrs. Russell rose is being heavily cut for propagating, there is a fine supply of those roses coming in and the price far exceeds that of any other rose except American Beauty. There is a good supply of all the Killarneys and, in yellow roses, Ward and Sunburst are both coming in fair quantity and good quality. There are just about enough Richmonds and Milady to supply the trade with red. Beauties are making a little better showing. Quite a few cattleyas are now seen but the supply is far from large. Very few gardenias are offered. Sweet peas have dropped in price, Spencers, of course, leading. Violet season is nearing the close of a rather poor year.

Flowers for the Easter Parade

No Easter costume is complete without its corsage of flowers, giving it just that dainty touch and finish that makes it perfect. Some want the very choicest, some medium-priced and some cheaper flowers, but the majority—the masses—want the moderate-priced flowers, which we will have in quantity.

The market is well supplied in every seasonable. During last week the daily increase in the size of the receipts was large and served to make the market. The aggregate demand is as large as it was but does not seem as active, owing no doubt to more than ample supply. Roses and carnations are moving fairly well. Easter and rubrum lilies and callas are not very active although of a high quality. Sweet peas sell pretty well, but receipts are so large that only bottom prices are realized. Smaller bulbous stock is in a good supply but moves rather slowly. The same is true of lily of the valley and orchids.

The situation in the NEW YORK wholesale flower trade of this city is about as it was last week, "only more so." Indeed, the business interests are simply "snowed under" by the big flower show up-town and all seem to have accepted the inevitable slump as a sort of interlude which will continue, at least, until the Easter rush starts—that is, if there is to be any Easter rush! Crops are coming in heavily under the impetus of long sunny days and moderate temperature and much of it must be sold at greater or less sacrifice. Demand by the retail stores is very light and if it were not for the street vendors and other floating distributors the situation would be vastly more embarrassing for the growers.

There was a slight improvement in the cut flower market here last week but nothing to brag about. Conditions still remain far from what they ought to be to make it worth while for the grower to stay in business. The bright weather experienced was the main factor in the slight betterment. This was especially the case with the clean-up on Friday and Saturday. Not nearly so much went to the dump although prices were almost at the vanishing point. The rose market was abundantly supplied—the sunny days being just what the rose likes. Carnations a little off crop but quite enough for the demand. The two Wards, Matchless, Gloriosa, Pink Delight and Enchantress Supreme are the leaders at present. St. Patrick sent up the price of white carnations for a few days but the influence of the saint otherwise was not appreciable on the market. Sweet peas are very plentiful but the sale is good too. It is certainly astounding to see the immense quantities being used now compared with a few years ago. Violets moved a little better but that isn't saying much. The price is still far too low and they are a heartbreak to the producer.

St. Patrick's Day caused somewhat of a break in the quiet of Lent ("Praise be to Allah," irreverently ejaculated a retailer evidently dissatisfied with his spoils for the season). Mainly in demand were cunning little pots of shamrock, together with carnations and sweet peas so vividly dyed that their reflection alone was enough to turn a Burbank green with envy. Conditions promise favorable for the Easter trade, the wholesale firms "cleaning up right along," with prices proportionately fair. Recent weather conditions have been favorable for stock, as regards both quantity and quality. In addition to the bulb plants, which now go without saying, heather and roses, especially baby rambles, are reported particularly fine. Notwithstanding adverse foreign conditions and attendant prospects of nothing doing, the town has been flooded with commercial Hollanders and Belgians of unpronounceable and unspellable names, who report more azalias, rhododendrons, palms, evergreens and bay trees than ever. Apropos of this condition, it is interesting to note that one of these Belgians, although overflowing with bitterness for Germany, was fair enough to admit that the enemy had left the greenhouses and lands of Belgium unmolested. Also from Germany has come an unusually large importation of baskets, all in good shape, to the McCallum Company. Reports of selling conditions vary in the Allegheny and city market proper. While one reports his sales as one-third better since the holidays (which "were bad"), than during the same time last year, another nearby, discouragingly says, "not making expenses."

SAN FRANCISCO

The flower trade is moderately active this week, but conditions are not satisfactory, either to growers or retailers. The fashion show at the department stores has taken a good many flowers, both cut and potted stock being used rather extensively in store decorations, while a good many people are attracted to the stores by new offerings and exceptionally fine displays. The small trade from strangers in town, however, is largely taken by street vendors, who are handling a larger variety of flowers than usual. Practically all seasonable flowers are offered in great abundance, and as the average quality is good, it takes something better than usual to bring satisfactory prices. The market is glutted with short and ordinary stock of all descriptions, good American Beauty roses being about the only popular flowers at all scarce. The cut of all other roses is very large, and bulb stock of all sorts is cheap, tulips now sharing the general weakness. Anemones are still something of a novelty and clean up fairly well, and some very nice lots of ranunculus have found ready sale. A good many peonies have come in this week, and some forced amaryllis has appeared. The orchid situation shows little change. Gardenias are still fine, but only the best offerings receive much attention. Rhododendrons are coming out nicely, and will probably be quite plentiful for Easter. There is a good supply of primroses, with only moderate demand. There is no longer any great call for violets, which are freely offered.

ST. LOUIS

The market is rather dull with plenty of stock for any size order and at rather low prices. White carnations have taken a rise this Monday going up to 4 cents for the best. The demand was larger, these being wanted for coloring for St. Patrick's Day. Roses are in plenty and bulb stock is a glut since the southern daffodils are coming up by the ten thousands daily. Sweet peas sell well, also violets.

WASHINGTON

Business last week showed some little improvement. There is plenty of stock and at reasonable prices. The violet and sweet pea supply is far in excess of the demand. Roses and carnations are more plentiful than they have been. Snapdragon is being produced in larger quantities and better qualities. Pink seems to be the most popular and meets with a fairly ready sale amongst the better class of trade. White and yellow is also to be had. Practically all of the Easter flowers now have representation in the market. There are quantities of tulips, jonquils, narcissi, at almost the buyer's own price, Easter lilies, both cut and potted, and fine first shipments of spirea and rambler roses. There are fully enough Cattleyas to meet all demands.

Stoughton, Mass. — F. E. Swett & Son, florists, have dissolved partnership, Raymond M. Swett wishing to devote his whole time to the growing and selling of gladiolus bulbs of high quality. For this purpose he has secured forty acres of ideal bulb soil and will plant it this spring.

Dear Sir:—Some time ago we ordered a copy of Thomas' Book on Roses. We promised to send you postage as soon as we learned the amount. The book was so good that we forgot all about postage until today. Please forgive our lapse of memory.

We loaned it to a friend and he likes it so well we're afraid that we will have to buy another.

Respectfully,

ILLINOIS EXPERIMENTS ON FERTILIZERS FOR FLORICULTURAL CROPS.

The results of the experiments of the Illinois Experiment Station, conducted by the Illinois Experiment Station, University of Illinois, Urbana, Ill., contain the results of experiments with the use of dried blood, acid phosphate, and potassium sulfate in carnation growing which have appeared from time to time in previous reports in the trade papers. The most important points are, briefly, that dried blood or ammonium sulfate can be used with benefit on soils naturally moderately well supplied with organic matter; that no benefit has so far been found from the use of potassium sulfate on a brown silt loam soil; and that an increase in production was noted when acid phosphate was supplied in addition to dried blood, particularly with the variety Enchantress, less so with White Perfection. Comparative experiments, also, have shown that these commercial fertilizers may be used in moderation with the assurance of producing a crop as large and of as good a quality as with manure exclusively.

The carnation experiments during the present as well as last year have been ones on a more extensive scale in regard to the value of acid phosphate, in this experiment as a supplement to sulfate of ammonia. The varieties White Perfection and Rosette have been used and with these varieties, no increase has been found. This contradiction of the experiment of 1912-13 (Bul. 176) may be due to the use of sulfate of ammonia in place of dried blood used that year or to the fact that the varieties used are not responsive to its use as Enchantress is. It looks as if it were necessary in this connection to study closely the difference in response to fertilizers of the variety type represented by Enchantress and Beacon, which stood rather profusely and of the type represented by Rosette and White Perfection.

Continued experiments in the overfeeding of carnations have shown that the danger from overfeeding with commercial fertilizers can be roughly predicted from a knowledge of their solubility in water. For instance, sulfate of ammonia (of which about 6 pounds dissolve in a gallon of water) is markedly injurious while acid phosphate (of which 1-6 pound dissolves in a gallon of water) shows no, or almost no, injury in very heavy applications. The injury from equal applications of potassium sulfate, of which 2-3 pound dissolves in a gallon is less than that from ammonium sulphate but is still severe enough if large amounts are used to cause complete ruin of the crop.

A careful comparison of weather conditions daily with daily production records has given data that clearly establishes the relation between periods of cloudy weather and splitting in carnations. The long period of continued cloudy weather of the fall of 1914 (about three weeks) was followed, for instance, by an increase in the percentage of splits up to as much as 25 per cent. The increased splitting is not coincident with the period of cloudy weather, however, but follows it by a week or two. The records showing how these conclusions

South American Sheep and Goat Manure

We have just landed the Third 1000 Ton Cargo in New England and it is certainly as good or even better than the last. If South American Goat and Sheep Manure had not come up to the expectations of the growers who bought the last, or if we could not guarantee to furnish the same high grade article, which has built up for itself and for us such a splendid reputation from the very first start, we would never have had to send a ship after another 1000 tons. That's plain. We have an abundant supply for New England and it is our aim to keep this right up to the high standard you know it to be. It is ground fine and is clean, to handle, makes an ideal liquid manure, which is safe. WE GUARANTEE OUR S. A. S. & G. M. TO BE ABSOLUTELY PURE. Spring is near and plants need feeding. For Roses, Carnations, Lilies, Ferns, Palms, or any other plants, our S. A. S. & G. M. will do just what a full meal will do for a hungry man.

were obtained will be published in detail.

Excessively high applications of acid phosphate to first year roses have caused slight injury, more marked with Richmonds than Killarneys. But amounts up to 40 pounds per 100 square feet of bench space, (which is equivalent to 1 pound per cubic foot of soil if a compost is made, or about 9 tons per acre) have given a larger number of flowers than the soil to which none was applied. The need for acid phosphate, is most marked in the latter part of the season, and the increase due to its use is greatest at that time. No benefit from the use of dried blood has been found on the soil at the Experiment Station (a brown silt loam) until the spring of the year after the plants were set in the previous summer. The results seem to show a decrease from its use in fall or winter on fresh soil. In the spring, however, the plants show the nitrogen starvation by yellowing of foliage and increased production follows the use of a nitrogenous fertilizer.

A study is being made in the chemical laboratory of the value of liquid manure made (1) from fresh droppings, (2) from barnyard manure, and (3) from shredded manure. The relative value of steaming and of fermentation in preparing it also are being worked out. This is a practical problem, the results of which can be of immediate use to the florist. In connection with this and other work, a study is being made of the variation of temperature and humidity in greenhouses and their relation to growth as measured by the growth records of roses. The results obtained on these subjects up to the present are interesting but hardly complete enough for publication. In the latter study, the Experiment Station has been assisted by several florists and opportunity is taken at this time to acknowledge their kind co-operation in this difficult problem.

SCOTCH SOOT

good leave the METROPOLITAN PATENTED is, you would use no other. It is made of cast iron and will not rust. That part of your greenhouse which in other constructions is the weakest becomes the strongest. Not this alone, it is ice-clearing and carries all the water of condensation from the inside, and it is so constructed that almost the entire end of the bar is exposed to the air, thereby preventing decay. Only one screw, about two inches from the end, is all that is necessary to secure the bars. For side stationary glass, wood headers are absolutely unnecessary, thereby causing no shade. Zinc glass stops are not necessary—the glass is made with a lug to prevent the glass from slipping. Let your next house be built with a Metropolitan Patented Iron Wall Construction. You will never regret it. Our price and service are right.

"Get them at Dreer's"

We offer here only a few of the most important recent introductions. For a complete list of new varieties as well as all the good old sorts worth planting, see DREER'S GARDEN BOOK and our current WHOLESALE PRICE LIST

THE NEW ANCHUSAS.

The Improved Varieties of Italian Alkemet or Bugloss.

These wonderfully improved Anchusas have proven most valuable additions to the limited list of blue flowering hardy perennials, and plant freely so as they flower from May to July, a time when the color is only sparingly represented in the hardy garden.

The habit of the plants while strong and vigorous is not at all coarse. They form many branched specimens from 3 to 5 feet high, each branch of which is terminated by a large, graceful pyramidal spike of blue flowers.

Dreemore Variety. Rich cerulean-blue.

Opal. A splendid lustrous light blue.

$1.50 per doz.; $10 per 100.

THREE CHOICE ANEMONE JAPONICA.

Alice. Large semi-double, silvery blossoms suffused with cerulean.

Kriemhilde. Nearly four inches in diameter, semi-double, ruffled.

Loreley. Cup-shaped flowers, large in diameter, light mauve-pink.

$1.50 per doz.; $12 per 100.

ARTEMESIA LACTIFLORA.

An introduction from China and a most effective flowering plant, growing 3½ to 4 ft. high, with large panicles of Hawthorn scented, creamy white Spiraea-like light and graceful flowers during August and September.

$1.50 per doz.; $10 per 100.

ASTILBE ARENDSII.

This new type is of very vigorous growth, producing many-branched feathered heads of flowers, 2½ to 3 feet high.

Ceres. Delicate, light rose with silvery sheen.

June. Strong upright plumes of deep violet rose.

Salmon Queen. Beautiful salmon pink.

Venus. Deep violet rose.

Vesta. Light lilac rose.

White Pearl. Dense pyramidal plumes of silvery white.

30 cts. each; $3.00 per doz.

Choicest Mixed Varieties 35 above, $2.00 per doz.; $15.00 per 100.

NEW HARDY ASTER NOVI BELGH CLIMAX.

Novi Belgh Climax. One of the most important additions to the Michaelmas Daisies, and we believe the forerunner of a new type. The plant is of strong, vigorous habit of growth, over 5 feet high; fully one-half of this consists of much branched pyramidal shaped flower stems which are filled with lively light lavender-blue flowers fully 1¼ inches in diameter. The plant is in flower from the latter part of August to the middle of October. 35 cts. each; $3.50 per doz.; $25.00 per 100.

THREE IMPORTANT DELPHINIUMS.

King of Delphiniums. One of the most distinct yet introduced; the plant is of remarkably strong growth, with flowers of gigantic size, semi-double and of a deep blue color, with large white eye. 35 cts. each; $3.50 per doz.

Moerkheimi. This is the first really white hybrid Delphinium introduced. It is a decided acquisition. The plant is of strong, vigorous growth, 5 feet high, the lateral or side shoots 2½ feet high. The flowers are of purest white, without the slightest shading; a free and continuous bloomer from June till frost. 20 cts. each; $2.00 per doz.; $15.00 per 100.

Rev. E. Lascelles (new). One of the finest varieties yet introduced. Plant very strong, grows six feet high. Flowers very double of a deep purple-blue, with clear white centre and of greatest size. $1.00 each.

GYPHOPHILIA (Baby's Breath).

Paniculata Flore Plena. This double flowering Gypsophila is valued for its most important hardy plants for cutting purposes.

We guarantee our stock every plant to be the true double form. Seedlings are sometimes offered very cheap, but only a very small percentage come double. Our plants are all either selected or from true cuttings. Strong flowering plants $2.00 per doz.; $15.00 per 100.

NEW HILMEROCALIS QUEEN OF MAY.

A planted new hybrid, flower stems from 3 to 5 feet high, terminated with from 12 to 18 flowers of largest size of a rich Indian-yellow. The flowers begin to develop in May and continue for nearly two months; perfectly hardy. 25 cts. each; $2.50 per doz.; $15.00 per 100.

NEW GIANT-FLOWERING MARSHMALLOW (Hibiscus).

A wonderfully improved form of our greatly admired native Marshmallow or Rosemallow, in which not only the colors have been greatly intensified but in which flowers of enormous size, frequently 10 to 12 inches in diameter, have been developed.

These plants can be highly recommended for all kinds of plantings, they appear to be equally at home in all positions, having the same vigor in dry and wet ground and are perfectly hardy, they grow from 5 to 8 feet high and are very floriferous, blooming from early July to late in Autumn. We offer three distinct colors, Red, Pink and White in strong two year old roots. 20 cts. each; $3.00 per doz.; $20.00 per 100.

LUPINUS (Lupine).

Polyphyllus Moerkheimi. The most beautiful variety yet introduced; a combination of light and dark shades of pink. $2.50 per doz.; $18.00 per 100.

LYTHRUM ROSEUM PERRY'S VARIETY.

A splendid improvement on the common Loosestrife, with much larger flowers, larger spikes and of glistening cherry-red color. $2.50 per doz.; $18.00 per 100.

PERRY'S WHITE ORIENTAL POPPY.

larger spikes and of glistening cherry-red color. $2.50 per doz.; $18.00 per 100.

NEW ORIENTAL POPPY "PERRY'S WHITE."

A sterling novelty and the most distinct break that has yet been made in Oriental Poppies, it being a pure satiny-white with a bold crimson blotch at the base of each petal; this is undoubtedly the most important addition to our list of hardy perennial plants this season. 35 cts. each; $3.50 per doz.; $25.00 per 100.

THREE SPLENDID NEW HARDY PHLOX.

Rheinlander. A beautiful salmon pink with flowers and trusses of immense size, the color of the flower is intensified by a very decided eye of a deep claret red. $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.

Riverton Jewel. One of our own introductions which it gives us great pleasure to recommend, a lively shade of mauve-rose illuminated by a carmine-red eye, a splendid improvement on the popular variety Asia. 30 cts. each; $2.50 per doz.; $18.00 per 100.

Thor. A most beautiful and lively shade of deep salmon-pink suffused and overlaid with a scarlet glow and a light almost white halo around its aniline-red eye. This variety will undoubtedly hold the same place among deep salmon colors that Elizabeth Campbell holds among the light salmon-pinks. $2.00 per doz.; $15.00 per 100.

HENRY A. DREER, 714-716 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

The prices quoted above are intended for the trade only.

COLORINDA

A sweet-scented Pelargonium. The result of a cross between Cape Pelargonium and Quercifolium, splendid, strong growing habit; deep green foliage, an agreeable aromatic fragrance. The flowers are nearly the size of the Pansy Geranium, larger than those usually found on a scented variety, bright neyron red, shaded darker with maroon blotch, freely produced.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Cannas

Roots that have been wintered over in a sound condition can now be started on a bench with temperature 60 to 65 degrees. Spread a few inches of sand or dampened moss over the bottom, and in a short time every eye will be distinctly developed and they can then be divided with a sharp knife into as many pieces as show a green growth. For wholesaling and long distance shipment $2\frac{1}{2}$ or 3-inch stock, with a new growth of about five inches in height, is the best, but for a good retail trade it is the 4-inch canna with a firmly held ball of new roots and sturdy top growth that sells fastest and brings the best price. A healthy, fast-growing canna is a moisture-loving plant but one emerging from uncongenial winter quarters, soft of flesh and slow in starting, resents any excess in humidity and soon yields to utter decay if watered too much or too often. Care in this particular, therefore, is necessary until the new growth in shoots and roots is well under way. On all good days syringe them freely and when they become crowded give them a spacing so the light will reach all around them.

Foliage Plants

Take advantage of every bright day to give these plants a good syringing both under and over the foliage. When a strong force of water is directed especially against the underside of the leaves you help to keep the many insects under control. Where plants are infested to any great extent it would be better to take a little time and go over them thorough by sponging with some insecticide such as Aphine or Lemon Oil. When well cleaned up they should be given a repotting and a resetting. When repotting remove as much as possible of the old soil down to the active roots. This old compost is generally clogged with stagnant rotting root fiber and moisture. Provide well enriched soil and be very careful about drainage in each pot or pan as nothing hurts foliage plants as much as poor drainage.

Primulas

A succession of sowings of primula seeds from now on up to the 10th of May will assure their coming along in batches that will flower from the holidays through the winter. Use plenty of rough material in the bottom of the pots or pans to insure perfect drainage. A light open mixture of loam, leaf mold and sand will suit. Sift some of the mixture fine for the top, make level and sow the seed, but not too thickly; cover very lightly and press over firmly. Give these pans a warm house. Keep covered with glass and shaded until they show signs of coming up, when they should be given a temperature of about 50 degrees and placed well to the glass. When large enough they should be pricked out into flats.

Ground for Carnations

This is such an important crop that effort should be made to have everything right when planting out time arrives. See that the ground has plenty of manure plowed under. When the ground is deficient in plant food you are sure to have a lot of poor plants by housing time. Any good soil will grow carnations, but in every case it will have to be well drained either naturally or artificially before it will produce fine stock. Excellent land for carnations is sod ground that has been broken up last fall. Before planting out time see that it is well pulverized with a smoothing harrow and roller.

Sweet Peas Outside

The soil should be prepared by proper pulverizing. Whether you plow or spade, the deeper this is done the better. Where the land is available it is better to plant sweet peas on a new piece of ground every year. Land that was heavily manured and deeply plowed last fall will make the ideal place. Wood ashes is a decided advantage where the land is of a clayey nature. They can be sown broadcast at the rate of from 30 to 40 bushels per acre. Sow the seed just as soon as the soil dries out sufficiently to be in a workable condition. Make trenches 4 or 5 inches broad and the same in depth, from 3 to 4 feet between the rows. Sow thinly and cover with about an inch of soil. Plants that were started in pots during February can also be planted out when the ground becomes dry enough. To have good sweet peas they should be planted early so that the germination will be slow, followed by good root action while the top growth is almost at a standstill. When the seed is planted firm the ground over each row.

Keep a Diary

Every florist should keep a diary of his operations. This will lead him to know better every year what to do and what not to do—all such things as the sowing of seed, when planting is done, when different plants flower and so on. By jotting down these notes you will pave the way for better success another year.

Next Week:—Decorative Foliage Plants; Gardenias; Mulch for Carnations; Swainsona; Starting Achimenes; Stock Plants.

What do you think of the management of that exhibition? And those judges—An inborn propensity is there any punishment drastic enough to inflict upon them? There is no trait more generally characteristic of the human race than that of kicking. Almost from the minute of birth, dissatisfaction with the established order of things and a determination to kick up a fuss if we don't have our own way is our common instinct. It is, doubtless, one of nature's provisions for the "survival of the fittest," that we should be prepared to make a struggle, not only for what belongs to us, but for all we can get of what belongs to the other fellow, as well. The mastery of this inborn impulse is the function of civilization and the history of the world thus far would seem to indicate that civilization has yet "a long, long way to go." But we started to talk about the exhibitions. Did you ever undertake that delightful little sinecure of a job—the management of a flower show? Or was the honor of an appointment as a judge at these affairs ever thrust upon you by your admiring and appreciative friends? If so, may be you know something about this subject. "Get me?"

We all know the "bad loser." We don't suppose there was ever a show where the species was not in evidence in one or another of its forms. Unquestionably he has his uses as a corrective influence against hasty or prejudiced decision and as a wholesome, although unpalatable, restraint upon the autocratic spirit of manager and judges, without which they might become too pompous and seek to hold on to their job indefinitely, to the exclusion of their fellows, every one of whom is, in his own mind, of course, fully competent to judge and to manage. But, my dear sir, supposing that we did get a second prize, or possibly no prize at all, when we are fully convinced that we were entitled to first—let us forget it and suppress those outraged feelings and our friends will like us just as well, and perhaps better than if we persist in pulling them to one side to pour into their ears our grievances against the judges. Brace up; things will yet come our way and then we shall have a chance to see our rival who lost and got fussy about it in the same light in which others see us now!

Judges are human—no different in that respect from the rest of us; liable to make some mistakes; prone to defend their decisions, maybe, rather than to admit that they have made a mistake. Perhaps we are not so careful in all cases in selecting them as we should be. In any exhibition, however small, and in increasing proportion according to its size, it is no light responsibility we place on their shoulders. The best are none too good, in any case. There are many considerations to be taken into account in their selection. Personality, relation with and to the people on whose accomplishments they are asked to set their seal of comparative excellence—these are pre-requisites of importance second only to a thorough knowledge of the goods they are to pass upon. The professional judge system which prevails to some extent in other countries has its undoubted advantages as compared with our custom of asking our neighbors and friends to serve us in this capacity, but our communities are too widely scattered and our distances are so great as to make the professional judge plan impractical here at present. Under conditions as we have them we must make the best of our opportunity, bearing in mind that if we are to get the most competent men to serve us in these trying duties we must desist from fault-finding or those who are self-respecting will be very likely to find an excuse for "side-stepping" the honor.

NEW YORK SPRING FLOWER SHOW

This great event has now passed into history and we are happy to say that it far surpassed the most ardent anticipations of its sponsors in the public support and the financial results attained. The average attendance was about 8,000 a day for the week of the show, an unprecedented public testimonial which was well merited.

The Red Cross Tea Garden proved a most valuable and remunerative agency in securing the active co-operation of the society people and liberal access to the reading columns of the big newspapers, all of which gave large space to illustrations from day to day. The Tea Garden was in the form of a spacious pergola, richly furnished and adorned. A beautiful flower garden extended the whole length, with stucco columns and walls, with a series of wall-fountains and water-lily pools, alternated with antique and valuable marble statuary. It cost something to get in there and have a cup of tea poured by one of New York's society buds. As one young man expressed it, "The Red Cross on this occasion added new horrors to the war." Yet even at that they had to turn people away for lack of room. Of course this is not exactly flower show news, but the value of this recognition by the 400 of the metropolis as an asset for the future of the annual flower show may be imagined. It was a magnet which gave to the show from start to finish the atmosphere of a society festivity, and among the people most prominent in the Red Cross enterprise were many folk whose estates were large contributors to the exhibition proper.

We think the general arrangement of the exhibits on the main floor was superior to that of any of its predecessors, but it is almost hopelessly impracticable to make an effective and harmonious whole in a hall so full of heavy columns. Big bays and palms sufficed to give pleasing outline effect as seen from the entrance, while to enhance the brilliancy of color on all sides would be next to impossible. The broken up character of the architecture of the great hall, while uncompromising as regards any general view or vista had its compensating advantages, offering abundant opportunity for individual effort on the various displays and groups.

Attention and admiration was largely centered on the two splendid rose gardens, by Cromwell Gardens and F. R. Pierson Company, to which reference was made in our notes of last week. The A. N. Pierson garden which took 1st prize was enclosed with a low rustic fence, gracefully festooned with Tausendschoen roses and the same beautiful rose clambered in natural abandon over a rustic pergola. Quaint flag stepping stones formed the paths across a green moss lawn bordered and bedded with Baby Rambler roses. F. R. Pierson's garden was a model of fastidious primness and finish. It was placed in a white lattice enclosure with arborescent seats and statuary and a central sun dial. The beds were filled with delicate pink tinted Baby Ramblers with the pots plunged out of sight and the walks were of light colored crushed stone. In addition to second prize this garden was given a special gold medal by the Horticultural Society of New York for its artistic excellence.

The groups of flowering plants and bulbs arranged for effect, 200 sq. ft., were greatly admired and worthily so. From a spectacular standpoint it would be hard to beat Wm. Duckham's group in this class. It was a bold riot of color compelling attention by its very daring, the central mass of glowing bloom running into a background of tall acacias and genistas overrun with nasturtiums and flanked on either side with masses of lilacs, schizanthus and Cape plants.

The F. E. Lewis group, which won 2nd prize presented a glorious spring floral effect. Standard peaches and laburnums figured impressively in this exhibit.

For uniqueness we cannot refrain from words of praise for the group of W. B. Thompson in the aforementioned class. Abutilions, chorizemas, Rehmannia, climbing roses, trailing begonias, cyclamen, wisterias, cinerarias, etc., were arranged in masses, columnar groups and over arches in most unusual combinations.

One of the most enticing exhibits for the real garden lover was the rock garden by Julius Roehrs Company. It was a beautiful conception and showed elegant judgment in its arrangement. Dielytras, low phloxes, aquilegias, veronicas, sedums, dianthus, and a host of alpine gems snuggled among or drooped over the rocks and groups of pyruses and hawthorns on either side gave a welcome touch of realistic spring to the whole.

The group by R. M. Johnston, gardener to W. B. Thompson which won in the foliage plant class for private growers was the finest arrangement of foliage plants in the hall. In fact, we do not remember to have ever seen any group to surpass it anywhere. It was an object lesson in plant grouping.

The orchids were as usual a source of wonder and interest to the visitors. The orchid men fairly outdid themselves and there were many very extensive and handsomely grouped collections. The unique arrangement by Julius Roehrs Company which we illustrate herewith was much admired. It was on a much larger scale than the picture suggests, the whole illuminated by lights hidden behind the frame. Clement Moore's collection was rich in hybrids of high caste. The exhibit of George Schlegel was staged with great taste. Cypripedium Morganae Burfordense was one of the jewels of this superb collection.

In our humble judgment the most beautiful orchid in the show was the hybrid Odontoglossum Jasper, in the exhibit of Arthur N. Cooley of Pittsfield, Mass. Miltonia St. Andre in the F. E. Lewis collection was another gem. In Lager & Hurrell's display some notable things were Cypripedium Rothschildianum and Miltonia Bleucana, beautifully flowered specimens, also Dendrobium Schuitzi, white flowered, in way of D. formosum. The pets in Julius Roehrs collection included: Brasso-Cattlaelia Wotan, Odontodia Madeline, Odontodia Keighleyensis, Miltonia St. Andre, Odontoglossum Loochristie var. excellens, Odontoglossum x Dora, O. Wilckianum, O. Armainvillierense, Brasso-Laelia Jessopii, Cypripedium Maudiae var. Non plus ultra and Odontodia Charlesworthii.

Friday was Hotel Day in the table decorations and seven of the leading houses competed. Judging was done by society ladies. Each hotel had its champion among the onlookers and in the judgment of each the favorite "ought to have had it." The Holland House won the Horticultural Society Cup with a decoration of acacias and sweet peas. The Ritz-Carlton came in 2nd with a miniature lake with flower-adorned banks. The Aster, Biltmore, Delmonico, McAlpin and Manhattan were all well represented.

The classes for table decorations by private growers on Monday, March 22d, brought out six competitors, and all were liberally rewarded. As a whole, they were in our estimation more artistic in conception and finish than those shown by the commercial florists previously. The winning entries were models of exquisite simplicity, and here it might be mentioned that the judges acted seemingly from the same motives as those in the Boston exhibition, almost invariably giving their commendation to those tables which were the least elaborate in form and color. The first prize table, entered by A. Lewisohn, was decorated with a tall vase of Dendrobium Wardianum, Mrs. Aaron Ward roses and Acacia pubescens. Second prize went to R. M. Johnston's table, on which Phalaenopsis and Schizanthus were used.

Other tables were as follows:

P. W. Popp, dark Cattleyas, lily of the valley and Primula malacoides, special award. Wm. Brock, Hillingdon roses and freesias, special silver medal. W. Atkinson, pansies, special silver medal. Thos. Aitchison, Afterglow roses, special silver medal. M. J. Fitzgerald, Dendrobium Wardianum, D. densiflorum and Chorizema, special mention.

The Department of Parks, as mentioned in our last week's issue, made an exhibit which was a great garden

The Trade Displays

More extensive than ever, the numerous trade display booths added interest and variety to the show, as well as abundant shekels to the exchequer. Quite a number of concerns not in any way identified with horticulture took space this year and busily exploited their wares in country fair style. Some objection was voiced by "legitimate" exhibitors and no doubt this question will be brought up for consideration later on as to the wisdom of the innovation. Following is the list of trade exhibitors:

Max Sehling, New York. An elaborate booth in the form of a Greek temple and carpeted with green plush, in which were shown numerous examples of floral arrangements in baskets, etc.

George E. M. Stump, New York. In Mr. Stump's prettily equipped booth, a specialty was made of flowers arranged in dainty receptacles of novel design, Japanese vases, water vases, etc.

F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., a very large and attractive booth, in architecture similar to that of their imposing building at Tarrytown, finely decorated with specimen ferns and roses.

A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Ct., had a very large booth in pergola form, lavishly banked with ferns and flowers, in the same section as last year.

Julius Roehrs Company, Rutherford, N. J. Characteristic display of the choice greenhouse material and nursery stock for which this house is well known.

Knight & Struck Co., New York. Interesting exhibit of hard-wooded greenhouse plants.

R. J. Irwin, New York. Samples of novelties and specialties, including Carnation Pink Sensation.

Arthur Cowie, Berlin, N. Y., showed on his stand forced blooms of the new Gladiolus Pease.

A. L. Miller, Jamaica, N. Y. A brilliant group of Easter plants.

Collin Campbell, New York. Dracenae in variety.

Scott Bros., Elmsford, N. Y. Nephrolepis Elmsfordii, a lovely dwarf tufted variety.

Robert Craig Company, Philadelphia. An extensive collection of the many choice greenhouse plants, foliage and flowering, for which this house is widely known.

Boblink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. J. This house had some splendid groups of conifers, and occupied a large octagonal booth surrounded by trained fruit trees and other pertinent material.

Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J. Samples of orchids.

J. M. Thorburn & Co., a latticed garden filled with gorgeous bulbous bloom, making a brilliant effect.

Stump & Walter Co., New York. An extensive bulb flower display, in which the initials of the firm were deftly woven into the display with tulips and daffodils.

Bon Arbor Chemical Company, Paterson, N. J. Samples of plant food.

New York Stable Manure Company, Jersey City, N. J. Samples of Diamond Brand Compost.

Apline Mfg. Company, Madison, N. J. A very large booth with samples of the various insecticides for which this house is well known.

Wm. F. Leary, New Rochelle, N. Y. Spraying outfit.

Benjamin Hammond, Beacon, N. Y. Slug Shot, Paint, Putty, and other specialties of this well-known house. A large and interesting display.

Hitchings & Co., Elizabeth, N. J. A complete greenhouse with boiler illuminated to show interior fitting. Hitchings benches, etc., and numerous photographs of conservatories and greenhouses erected by this company.

BOSTON SPRING FLOWER SHOW

DUTCH GARDEN — EXHIBIT OF R. & J. FARQUHAR & CO.

We gave a quite full account of the features of this fine exhibition in last week's issue and little remains to be recorded except the names of the winning exhibitors. The two lofty groups of palms, bays and flowering plants by W. W. Edgar Company and Weld Garden, the perfectly bloomed acacias from Mrs. F. Ayer together with all the other prominent features mentioned in detail last week made a superb picture as one gazed from the loggia over the central exhibition hall. The Farquhar Dutch garden at the far end was a show in itself and gave a character to the hall never before attained. We present herewith a picture of that exhibit but unfortunately it gives only a meagre idea of its extent and beauty and the fountain with its basin of callas is entirely lost, and the graceful pendant racemes of the white and purple wisteria are practically invisible. A gold medal was awarded to this exhibit.

The attendance beat all records for a spring show in Boston. At times the halls were well nigh impassable. The canaries, contributed by Sidney Hoffman added charmingly to the scene and the ladies orchestra was a much enjoyed feature.

The orchids were very fine throughout. In the A. W. Preston exhibit, Brasso-Cattleya Veitchii was the particular gem. Another beauty was the seedling Dendrobium Wellesley, a cross of D. nobile x Murrhinacum x D. nobile Victoria Regina, shown by Walter Hunnewell. The flowers are considerably larger than those of D. nobile. E. B. Dane's exhibit was, as always, a rich and rare collection. Mrs. C. G. Weld's orchid group was most artistically arranged.

The roses entered for the various prizes of the American Rose Society and the Massachusetts Horticultural Society were in noble form and the visitors were loud in their admiration. The big towering vases of Radiance from Jos. Heacock and Mrs. Russell and Killarney Queen from Waban Rose Conservatories were superlatively grand and much regret was expressed on all sides that the latter had to be disqualified because of a mistake in the number of blooms entered.

Judging from this exhibition as well as that in New York, Schizanthus Wisetonensis and Primula malacoides are destined to be big performers in the spring flower shows hereafter and Cineraria stellata has almost displaced the old C. hybrida.

The American Rose Society, to be American in fact as well as in name, embraces various sections of country in which the climatic conditions are different, and there is probably no variety of flower that covers so much ground as does the rose. No matter where the rose is, there is no single flower which carries with it more attraction than the rose in full bloom; no bud has more significance in its choiceness than the rose bud; no flower as a gift to sick or well has so much character or feeling attached to it as the rose. It grows on the confines of Mexico on the Rio Grande River; it grows in the Highlands of the Laurentian Mountains beyond Lake Superior; it thrives in abundance in the warm breezes of the Pacific Ocean; it thrives in the East and it blooms in the South, and a society to hold an interest in a connection of this kind is no small affair.

The Test Gardens.

The past year has seen culminated efforts that have gradually grown up to provide test gardens for roses in various geographical locations. At Hartford, Conn., the rose garden there attracted attention which stimulated efforts in other directions. At the city of Washington interest was stirred up and now there has been started a National Rose Garden of some considerable proportions. At Cornell University, which is an ideal region for climatic conditions for outdoor roses, there is now a garden which, if it is pushed with persistent energy, will very soon become as famed as some of the choicest spots in Europe. In Minneapolis in one of the beautifully located parks is a rose garden that has demonstrated what can be done where the winters are sharp and long, and the result as seen there is a credit to the man whose genius has created it. In Southern California the rose is almost of spontaneous growth. In Oregon, Washington and British Columbia there the rose in the brilliancy of its colors, in the heyday of its blooming makes a showing that is wonderful. All these things when reduced to simple every day use, add to the beauty of the home, and old as the hills comes the cry—"there is no place like home."

Affiliation

The effort of the American Rose Society is to lead off and to affiliate with every local society that has its annual rose show; to encourage the same by distribution of its medals. The past year the Rose Society in the city of Syracuse, N. Y., joined the American Rose Society. It has 244 members. In the city of Newport, R. I., two organizations have joined the society, viz: "The Newport Garden Club" and the "Garden Association."

The Year's Activities

The Bulletin of the past year giving a record of some of the work accomplished is a book of value. It gives accurate illustrations of the Rose Gardens at Washington and Cornell: it gives articles from California and Oregon bearing upon this subject of rose adaptation which is of interest and value to every commercial rose grower, not only in America but in Europe as well, because America is a great rose market for imported stock.

The past three years the limited income of the American Rose Society has been greatly assisted in its premium list by the associations with whom its main exhibition has been placed. There is no one connected with the American Rose Society in an official way that accepts any compensation whatever either for time or effort given. The society stands today in a position of influence in the development and the adaptation of the rose for general display. One of the things we want to do and which was tried, when for over a year we published the Rose Journal, simply as a means of keeping in touch with its membership. The matter of scale of points as adopted by the society is one thing that has been accepted in various parts of the country. The judgment as made upon either plants or blooms by the able men who have been selected as judges and who have acted in the capacity of judging accurately the various points of value, have gained the confidence of local associations far and wide.

A society like the American Rose Society with interests in all parts of the country has a patriotic as well as a commercial value; it touches local interests and home interests that are echoed far and wide. During the past year more medals were distributed than we ever before have given, and last year was the first year that the five-year limit covering the Mrs. Gertrude M. Hubbard fund was reached. This medal went to a man in Massachusetts, M. H. Walsh of Woods Hole, while a close competitor for the honor was the well known rosarian—John Cook of Baltimore, Md., with his rose—Radiance.

Looking Ahead.

It is the hope of the society to see its growth in numbers largely increased; to see the spirit of affiliation take a wider form; to see the rose test gardens spring up in sections that will show what can be done in Texas, in Idaho or Montana, or what may be done in Kansas or Kentucky or what may be done in the Gulf States.

As a society we have held our meetings mainly in the East. This year there is the greatest exhibition that was ever planned or carried out, in commemoration of what is said to be the greatest physical work of engineers that the work has ever seen—the opening of the Panama Canal, and what will be used to show up the grounds of the Exposition to a large extent will be Roses, because it is held in the land of roses. How many of our members will attend that exposition is unknown, but wherever you go on that journey you will find the rose in evidence and wherever the next annual exhibition may be, we hope that it will reach a company of people who will make it a decided success in every way.

Prosperity.

Our finances are in fair condition. The life membership fund has grown until it is $3,150, which is used as a permanent fund, and the larger this permanent fund is the more the American Rose Society will become a society of permanent ability to do good. Associate members are what we need, but if we get such membership we must have from time to time during the year publications of decided interest to the home grower. One thing that helps more than any other is—colored illustrations. These are expensive pieces of work if well done, but I hope the time will come when the publications of the American Rose Society will be so accurately illustrated, and illustrated in color that they will be a part of the choice products of the printers art. To accomplish this we want an increased membership of all classes and if there is any one here today who is not a member of the American Rose Society we should be glad to have them join us in any one of the three grades of membership, because when we leave Boston we want to leave it stronger than when we came, just as we have done each time we have been here.

HARDY HERBACEOUS PLANTS.

The Old-Fashioned Flower Garden.

This class of garden has been in use for thirty years and upwards. It generally consists of regular, though sometimes irregular beds, in some sort of form or design, yet not too formal, where plants have been planted according to the real home taste fashion, and is cherished not only for its beauty, but for its association, sentiment, etc. These gardens, while generally well kept, were so planted that they never presented a large display nor continuation of flower through the season.

Roses were associated with daffodils, the hollyhocks planted near the fence, with bunches of sweet williams and Scotch pinks in long lines or double and triple lines planted together, with the hardy heliotrope, a bush or two of the Old Man, several clumps of peonies, and with a large plantation of lilies of the valley in a shady place, foxgloves luxuriantly growing in clumps alongside, with larkspurs and patches of hardy pompom chrysanthemums to enliven the fall flowering. These were generally interspersed with bunches of geraniums, heliotropes, and other annual plants, all bespeaking the tender care and affection bestowed by the owner of the ground.

The Modern Garden.

From these old-fashioned gardens, by gradual changes and evolution, came the present flower garden and formal garden, and from them the so-called Italian garden which, however, is only a misnomer. The present-day flower or formal garden is laid out more or less on a regular plan, and the plants arranged so that there would be a succession of flowers from early spring to late fall, or sometimes, according to the taste of the proprietor, arranged either according to seasonal flowering or made into a color scheme. The plants suitable for these purposes are the following:

Achillea millefolia rubra, millefolia "Cerulea Queen" and serrata plena "The Pearl"; Agrostemma coronaria; Althaea rosea, double and single; Anemone Japonica; Asclepias tuberosa; Boltonia asteroides and latifolia; Campanula persicifolia, persicifolia alba and rapunculoides; Cassia Marylandica; Chrysanthemum (hardy varieties); Coreopsis (Harvest Moon and lanceolata); Delphinium formosum, hybrids and sinense; Dianthus barbatus; Dicentra spectabilis; Dictamnus Fraxinella; Digitalis purpurea; Doronicum plantaginifolium; Echinacea purpurea, purpurea hybrid; Euphorbia corollata; Funkia grandiflora lanceolata and undulata variegata; Gaillardia grandiflora hybrids; Gypsophila paniculata and paniculata fl. pl.; Helenium autumnale superbum; Heliopsis scabra; Heliopsis multiflorus plenus and argyria; Heliopsis Pitcherianus; Hemerocallis dumortierii, flava, grandiflora, Kwan-so fl. pl. and Thunbergii; Hibiscus resplendens and Mallow Marvels; Iris auria Germanica in var., Kaempferi in var., Sibirica alba and Sibirica sanguinea; Lam. arvense Nipponicum; Lythrum chlorocephala; Monarda didyma; Oenothera fruticosa; Paeonies herbaceous; Papaver bracteatum, involucratum and orientale; Pentstemon barbatus; Phlox paniculata in var.; Physostegia virginica; Platyodon grandiflora; Pyrethrum roseum and uliginosum; Rudbeckia Californica maxima, Golden Glow, Mandarin and speciosa; Sedum spectabile and spectabile rubrum; Scabiosa caucasica; Spiraea alba holboellii, filipendula plena, Japonica grandiflora and palmata rubra; Statice latifolia; Tradescantia virginica; Veronica longifolia subsessilis and spicata; Yucca filamentosa.

Rock or Alpine Garden.

This class of gardening is not much practiced in America as yet, but will come in time, as much as it is in the European countries. The ground to be selected for this should not be in the full glaring sun, but generally near a border of woods, so that a part of this garden would be exposed to the sun, while a part would be partially or quite shaded. Also a part of it could be kept moist, so as to be able to use and accommodate such plants as delight in excessive moisture.

With this class of gardening, plants and flowers of small growth would be lost if planted in large solid beds where they would have to fight for existence along with the tall, hardy and free growing plants, which would run over and smother them. In selecting plants, any of the last mentioned class of plants should be carefully guarded, and not placed in such rock or Alpine garden, and only such plants should be used as are of moderate or slow growth and size, and none that spread and take possession of the ground at the expense of the others.

In preparing such ground, it is not always necessary that it be entirely built of rocks, but old stumps, logs of wood, and any other rustic material can be used to produce a natural rocky or woody effect, and any such material should be so laid and arranged in the ground that it would not give an artificial appearance but be as nearly as possible an imitation of what we find in nature.

The following are some of the leading plants suitable for our climate for this purpose:

Achillea tomentosa; Ajuga reptans; Anemone Japonica, Japonica alba, Japonica rosea and Japonica Whirlwind; Aquilegia hybrids; Armeria maritima; Arrhenatherum bulbosum; Campanula Carpatia; Cerastium tomentosum; Convallaria majalis; Coreopsis delphinifolia and rosea; Dianthus plumarius albus, plumarius plenus and superbus; Dicentra eximia; Festuca glauca; Iberis sempervirens superba; Linum perenne; Oenothera fruticosa; Papaver nudicaule; Phlox amoena, subulata and subulata atropurpurea; Plumbago Larpentae; Polemonium coeruleum; Primula veris;

FAILURE OF CARNATIONS.

Dear Sir:—

I would like if you could explain the failure of my carnations. I grew them from cuttings out in the garden all summer, potted them in four-inch pots in September till the bench was ready for them, in which I put them after chrysanthemums were done, cleaning out the bench. The soil I put in was old sod that I took off the lawn in the spring. It was in a pit. I mixed some sand and rotted cow manure with it and the plants seem in a very good and rooted condition, but they have thrown very few flowers but still look healthy. What few flowers come are not a good form, breaking to one side. Could it be that the soil was sour? I will be glad if you could explain the reason. WAIT.

The trouble with your carnations is late planting. Your soil probably was good, although you need no sand added to it. You will no doubt have a fine crop of flowers too late to be profitable. Never plant carnations for a winter crop later than the 20th of August.

ONE REASON WHY.

One reason why Robert Craig has outdistanced many other plant growers in the great business he has built up is because he is and always has been a liberal advertiser. Many growers around Philadelphia are just as good growers in some lines, but they don't get their share because they have never been heard of except by their local customers and these local customers take very good care not to give away their sources of supply. Many people seem to think that good goods will sell themselves. They will—in a limited way—but they would bring far better money if the producer knew how to market them. The mistake most of these good growers make is that they think it is not necessary to advertise. More than that—we have known of goods of even very moderate quality being sold by sheer strength of good advertising. James Gordon Bennett put the advertising proposition in a nutshell: "First have a good paper; then make a dam fuss about it."

Mr. Craig felt that he had the finest ever this year for Easter and he has been making a fuss about it, too, so much so that your humble servant had to go and see for himself whether there was any exaggeration. Nothing gives your scribe greater satisfaction than to nail the fellow guilty of saying something interesting, but which on examination isn't so. That's bad grammar, but you know what is meant.

Well, the critical eye had a full and unbiased view, and retired—not with the fire of derogation but lighted like Jim Shea's immortal hippopotamus, "with the love light in her eye," as Jim passed on his efficient duties through the Boston Zoo.

The Easter lily is, of course, a great feature here, as it has always been, and this year the stock is very fine indeed. Probably next in importance comes the Rambler roses, from the little babies to the big trained specimens. According to Robert, Jr., the best pink one in the "baby" class is Phyllis, while the best red one is Erna Teschendorff. A close second to the latter, however, is Orleans, lighter in tint. Tausendschoen is still the leader in its class and is shown in six and seven-inch pots, as well as trained in fan, globular and pyramidal shapes. Lady Gay and Dorothy Perkins also occupy an important place and are to be seen in profusion, well done in all the popular trained forms. There is a new red one to be had this year—Excelsa—which looks to be a very attractive and valuable addition. Mr. Walsh's Juniata is also a strong feature in this connection. It is considered one of the best of that veteran raiser's introductions.

Many good words have been said about Craig cyclamens during the past twenty years. Little need be added now except to say that they are still the leaders. The same is true of the Lorraine begonias. Here, there is to be seen house after house of the various types of Lorraine—from the parent up, and including the Lonsdale, Cincinnati, the Konkurrent, Florence Davenport and others—all a delight to the eye.

Hydrangeas are a strong feature and big stocks are grown both of the old-fashioned kinds and also of the new French varieties. Gladstone and Queen Alexandra seem to be the main survivors of our old friend, the spirea. They look fine. Plenty of well-done genistas, from little fellows in three-inch for basket work at fifteen cents, to big specimens at three dollars. Marguerites, azaleas, lily of the valley and other items are seen in profusion, and a special good word must be said for the rhododendrons. These are very shapely and well flowered and include all the best varieties.

In the foliage department the ferns are the great standbys, especially the various beautiful forms of nephrolepis. Next to them the crotons, for which the Craig establishment is famous, having been the pioneer, and, it is safe to say, still the leader. Twelve varieties of dracaenas are grown, the most popular among them being Massangeana and Lord Wolseley, that is, not forgetting the old but ever beautiful and indispensable terminalis.

POPULAR COLORS IN SWEET PEAS.

Dear Mr. Editor:

Just a line or two to ask you for publication the names of the favorites among the Spencerized winter flowering sweet peas in the Boston market, also the names of those to avoid, or rather the colors of the latter.

FLORA DALE

The pink varieties of Spencer sweet peas are by far the favorites here. Whites and lavenders are used but little, only for floral work. The retail trade is not familiar with the names of particular varieties and specify in terms of color only, calling mostly for pink shades of Spencers.

Trenton, Mo. A seed store has been opened in the Masonic Building by Harry Witten.

Westburg, N. Y. William Green will open a new seed and fertilizer store on Post avenue in a week or two. The store will be located in Chas. Krupp's store building.

The Boston seed stores continue to report good business, especially in perennials, the "old-fashioned garden" flowers which seem to be coming into favor more than ever before.

The value of horticultural imports into New York for the week ending March 3, is given as follows:

Nitrate of soda, $50,647; fertilizer, $4,234; guano, $4,959; clover seed, $10,777; grass seed, $24; trees and plants, $34,060.

"PERNICIOUS ADVICE."

Can't something be done to check the idiotic twaddle that appears in the lay press scribbled by people who are ignorant of horticultural matters? What with novelists urging the British public to send all their orders for begonias to Holland in order to benefit the Belgians, and city gents urging folks to grow potatoes in villa and cottage gardens instead of flowers, and equally pernicious advice from other equally incompetent meddlers, the nursery and seed trade of this country would appear to be the doormat of any individual who would walk into the limelight as directors of other people's philanthropy. One wonders how the papers that publish these haveerings can have the cheek to tout for the advertisements of the trade that stands to lose through such unfair and unwise recommendations.—Hort. Trade Journal, London.

Obituary

Alexander Proctor.

Alexander Proctor, superintendent on the estate of Mrs. H. S. Barrick at Hicksville, L. I., N. Y., died of pneumonia on March 20. He was a brother of Thomas Proctor of Lenox, Mass.

Mrs. Edward McMullin.

Mrs. Ed. Mac Mullin died on Friday, March 19, at St. Elizabeth Hospital, Brookline, Mass. At the funeral on Monday many beautiful floral tributes were seen. She was a most estimable lady.

William B. Paterson.

William B. Paterson, one of the best known Southern florists, died at his home, Montgomery, Ala., suddenly on March 16. He was born in Scotland in 1819 and came to this country in 1866. He entered the florists' business in 1894. He is survived by five children. The business will be continued under the name of the Rosemont Gardens.

Mrs. Hosea Waterer.

Mary Meredith Waterer, wife of one of Philadelphia's well known seedsmen and nurserymen, passed away on the 20th inst. very suddenly from an attack of pneumonia. Mrs. Waterer was a Philadelphia lady and was greatly esteemed in her circle as wife, mother and all that goes to make the halo of true womanhood. She is survived by her mother, husband and two sons. The sympathy of the trade goes out sincerely to them in their irreparable loss.

William Hatcher.

William Hatcher, gardener and florist, and one of the oldest residents of the District of Columbia, passed away last week at his home on Harewood road, Washington, where he had resided for more than forty years, following an attack of pneumonia. Mr. Hatcher was born in England about eighty-six years ago and came to this country when fifteen years of age. He retired from active work about three years ago, but during the preceding thirty years he was employed as gardener and florist at the Soldiers' Home in this city, where two sons are at present employed. He is also survived by his widow. Burial took place in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Elizabeth, N. J.—Fire of unknown origin destroyed the packing-sheds and two storage warehouses of the Elizabeth Nursery Company in King street on Saturday night, March 2. The loss, estimated at about $30,000, is partially covered by insurance. In addition to a great number of valuable plants and shrubs stored in the warehouses, a large quantity of material used in packing was destroyed in the packing sheds. A Maxwell car and a wagon were burned. Many trees planted near the buildings were killed by the heat.

Of Interest to Retail Florists

A little silken green shamrock boutonniere with miniature clay pipe attached was the St. Patrick's Day souvenir given out by Ollie B. Coombs of Jamaica, N. Y. He distributed over two hundred gross of them on that day and they made a very popular advertising medium, orders amounting to much more than their entire cost being a direct result.

The struggle of the florists dealing with the exclusive society trade to get away as much as possible from material which has become abundant and consequently common is well displayed in the flowers given prominence in their window displays. Beautiful clematises in pots and big spikes of rich blue perennial larkspurs were the central objects in the window of Wadley & Smythe when we passed their Fifth avenue store in New York recently.

NEWS ITEMS FROM EVERYWHERE

BOSTON.

H. J. Borowski & Sons, of Roslindale had a fine exhibit of cyclamen at Horticultural Hall.

The popular demand for baskets is well shown by the shipments at the big wholesale houses of Welch Bros. and N. F. McCarthy.

B. F. Snyder & Co. and the New England Florist Supply, two young supply dealers, report good progress for their first year's business.

Alex. Coplen, Boylston street, has one of the smallest stores in the city, but it is advantageously located in a rapidly improving district.

Heard at the Flower Show: "Aren't these tulips lovely?" Oh, yes, but they're not Darwins." The Darwins are rapidly forging to the front.

The new cyclamen, "North Shore," exhibited by Mrs. Lester Leland, of Manchester, Mass., attracted much attention at the Boston show. This is a seedling from Rosy Morn \times Giant Pink.

Some specialties noted in the flower market this week are Winsor carnations, from H. H. Rogers, of S. Sudbury; single violets, from Ed. Bingham, of Dedham; pot schizanthus, from J. Foote, of Reading, and Spanish iris, from Frank P. Putnam, of N. Tewksbury. The finest American Beauty roses seen for a long time are now being cut by the Budlong Rose Co. They are beautiful, stately specimens, topping seven feet in many cases.

WASHINGTON.

Fred H. Kramer has had his store filled with visitors during the week, this being the time of his annual spring show. The stock on exhibition is exceptionally fine and well worthy of mention.

Charles Scarborough was in charge of the Gude Bros., exhibit at the New York show. Donald Malcolm, with the same concern, has returned from a two weeks' visit in Rochester, New York City and Philadelphia.

Following a custom of many years, Gude Bros. Company have made a special display of their Easter lilies at the Anacostia houses for the benefit of the public. On Sunday they showed more than 15,000 lilies to a large crowd of people.

The Washington Floral Company has taken possession of its new quarters on Fourteenth street, northwest. This firm has succeeded to the business of the former Washington Florists' Company. The store is an attractive one. On the opening day a fine display was made of Bonfire, Gloriosa and other carnations produced by them and a fine lot of roses from their greenhouses.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has granted the express companies' petition for a rehearing of the express rate case, following the claim made by the latter that the present rates are proving disastrous. The date for the hearing has not yet been set but a case is being worked up here with respect to the rates on plants in pots to be presented at the proper time. William F. Gude has requested that it be announced in HORTICULTURE that he is very desirous of obtaining all data possible bearing on the subject and suggests that those interested forward to him such material as may be accumulated at the earliest possible moment.

SAN FRANCISCO

The California Rose Co., of Pomona, Los Angeles County, Cal., has opened a store at 721 K street, Sacramento.

Sacramento, Cal., school children held a bulb exhibition at the offices of Superintendent of Schools Hughes in the Sacramento city hall on Saturday, March 13th. Prizes were awarded for the best flowers, the children having raised the bulbs at home.

Arrangements have been concluded for the holding of a floral pageant in San Francisco on May 29th as a special feature of Sacramento Day at the exposition. The committee in charge of the event is composed of George M. Treichler, Major P. J. Harney and Wm. A. Meyer.

Domoto Bros. are sending in some nice gardenias which are being well received. They are only the second growers who have been successful in growing gardenias here, the first and long the only one in the field being the E. W. McLellan Co., which has lately been bringing in an unusually fine cut of these flowers.

PITTSBURGH.

George Marshall, of the McCallum Company, is still confined to his home by illness. Fortunately, Karl Klinke, the credit man for the firm, is again able to be on duty.

Ray J. Daschbach has received the contract for decorating the new Rosenbaum store, the opening being the important mercantile event of Easter week. Mr. Daschbach's work will include ten floors.

Mr. and Mrs. John Werner, of Knoxville, have the sympathy of their friends in the recent loss of their sixteen-year-old son, whose death took place last Sunday, the interment being Tuesday morning.

That "it is an ill wind that blows nobody good" has been emphasized during the past week in the unusual demand for hospital and funeral work for pneumonia victims. Pink ramblers were lavishly used in the single Lenten wedding of the week, the Weaklin Company doing the work. The arched doorways and windows were outlined with the ramblers, which also formed the background for the bridal party.

The Beckert Seed Company have an attractive window display of varicolored bulb plants, with a window-box border of grass, just appearing. Augustus Frishkorn, the manager, reports their work is just about the same as during previous seasons, notwithstanding the general financial depression. He attributes this to the "Back to the Soil" movement, together with the fact that many unemployed men are making the best of a bad matter by making gardens during their idleness.

Samuel McClements and Ed. C. Reineman expect to attend the convention in San Francisco, and, incidentally, the Panama-Pacific Exposition. Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Graves, who are also prospective visitors, are planning to leave in July. Some one who recently asked Superintendent William Falconer, of the Allegheny Cemetery, if he were going to take this trip, was answered in characteristic fashion, "Why, child, WHERE would I get the money?" So: "to him that hath shall be given" to see the Panama-Pacific Exposition.

to close his greenhouses at "Clayton," his Pittsburgh home. During their eighteen years' existence, these greenhouses have been in charge of David Fraser who came from the east for this purpose. For some years they were open to the public with Easter and Chrysanthemum shows, but these special features were abandoned several years ago. Dr. John Fremont Shafer, a connoisseur in orchids, has also decided to close his conservatory at his home in South Negley avenue, and to that end is disposing of his stock.

E. M. McCarthy is the inspirer for the handsome floral decorations which appear from time to time with the Joseph Horne Company. The spring opening was marked by an exceptionally attractive display, the plants and flowers, as usual, being furnished by the A. W. Smith Company, under the supervision of Mr. King. The white Grecian supporting columns were gracefully hung with hothouse smilax, with just here and there a touch of floral color, while the huge bronze circular radiators in the front of the store temporarily formed a broken column of primulas, genistas and cinerarias. Surmounting each was a splendid specimen of cibotium fern.

CHICAGO.

There is a meeting as we go to press of the joint committee appointed to represent the Chicago Florists' Club and the Cook County Florists' Association, with the idea of their again becoming one club.

The making of vacant city lots into gardens is being taken up this year much more extensively than before. The project is two-fold, to afford the opportunity to the industrious to raise their vegetables and flowers and create a love for such work in their children and to beautify the city by keeping the vacant lots in order. The plan is to employ a gardener who will direct the work and money has been pledged for this purpose and for purchasing seeds.

Whether Lincoln Park shall have erected in it an armory for the First Cavalry, Illinois National Guards, or not, shall be left to the people, is the decision of the Governor. The park is the most centrally located of the large reservations and is visited by thousands of people daily during the entire summer. On Sundays whole families spend the day there and to many children this is the only playground they ever know and there is room for armories in other parts of the city. It is to be hoped that the protests of the people will save Lincoln Park from any encroachments for it is none too large for the use of the people now and the rapidly increasing population of the city makes it desirable to save every foot of this park, which is so close to the downtown district.

Easter Stock.

In calling upon the growers of Easter stock one finds the usual diversity of opinion among them as to the quantity actually to be depended upon. Sunshine seems to be the most desirable adjunct. One thing is certain, there are a great many short lilies this year, too short to be counted as first-class stock and no amount of sunshine will change that fact. It is not possible that there will be an excess of good medium lilies for this market unless they are shipped in from a considerable distance. Azaleas are having to be culled more sharply than usual, so many coming shy of blooms. Rhododendrons are showing up well and will be just right for the big holiday. Roses differ somewhat this year in that the big trained ones will be few. There is a nice stock of the smaller plants and indications are that the rose plants will be as popular as ever. Bulbous stock in pans will still be in prime condition. Yarrowa a new New Zealand sweet pea is just coming into this market. The first bunch was received by the Amling Co., this week. It is a delicate blending of pale pink and white and the petals are deeply fluted. Manager Michaelson is pleased with its appearance and thinks something worth while has been added to the sweet pea varieties now grown.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

THE LANCASTER COUNTY FLORISTS' CLUB.

At the last meeting a report was heard from the Glad Hand and Sunshine Committee in regard to Ladies' night for April 15. Their report called for a banquet at the Stevens House and the committee consists of Ira Landis of Paradise, S. Rutter Hess of Gap, J. Wade Galey and Chas. B. Herr of Strasburg. They will be ready with the Glad Hand for any visiting florists and will endeavor to extend sunshine into the affair from 7 P. M. to any old hour they may decide to quit. The decorations will be voluntary and no doubt profuse.

Elmer Weaver gave a talk on the trip to Philadelphia and his little journey into Chester County the next day. Charles Grakelow then gave us an excellent impromptu talk on our business in general and it was without question the best and most profitable evening we have ever had. There was not one who did not go home with some good new ideas under his hat and if we could have had all the retailers instead of two of them the flower trade would have had an impetus here that would have been felt keenly. As it is I am afraid these two who were present will get all the trade; they at least got all the ideas for getting trade.

It is unfortunate for the rest of the world that this talk was not in the shape of a paper to be printed. Mr. Grakelow brought out strongly the benefit to be gained by and the necessity to have a strong personality in this business. He also brought out the necessity of getting away from the stereotyped forms of advertising and putting out advertising with what he calls a punch to it. He spoke of the department store features of our business and pointed out the necessity of our being able to meet this sort of competition as well as that of the street men. Our president was so deeply impressed with the talk that he started to make a motion himself to give the speaker a vote of thanks, but was headed off by the writer and Mr. Grakelow was not only given a vote of thanks, but actually had them from every member present.

After the meeting, under the leadership of George Goldbach a bowling league was formed and the first evening was spent in rolling duck pins with scores ranging from 64 to 110. Some of these days we are going to start out after the world's record.

ALBERT M. HERR.

GARDENERS' AND FLORISTS' CLUB OF BOSTON.

The next meeting of this club will be on April 20, at which time H. Howard Pepper of the Industrial Trust Company of Providence, R. I., will address the members on "Some Facts About Banking that Some Florists Ought to Know."

A SOUTHERN INVITATION.

R. C. Kerr, president of the Texas State Florists' Association has addressed the following letter to all members of the S. A. F. Executive Board:

Dear Fellow Director:—

The florists of Texas are very desirous of meeting the President and Board of Directors of the S. A. F. at their Convention at Ft. Worth, the second Tuesday and Wednesday, July 13 and 14th; and as President of this organization I extend to you an urgent invitation to be present at our second annual Convention.

We feel that you should make this trip and be present, as we know you are vitally interested in the Southern Florists, and we want to demonstrate to you what is being done in the South. We predict this will be the largest gathering of florists ever held outside of the S. A. F. Convention.

I sincerely trust that you will see fit to take advantage of this opportunity to visit Texas. We will have an interesting program, and we are sure you will be repaid for your trouble and expenses.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

A. Cowee will offer a $10 gold piece as a prize for the best fifty spikes of gladiolus Peace shown by a gardener or amateur at the Newport Show.

The Retail Florists' Association, St. Louis, held its monthly meeting at the Washington Hotel on March 15. The meeting was not as well attended as was expected. The few present worked out a credit system plan which will come up for action at the next meeting.

NEW YORK FLORISTS' CLUB.

The annual banquet of the New York Florists' Club took place at the Hotel Astor Ball Room on Saturday night, March 20, and was a glorious success in all respects. About 250 guests were present, fully one half being ladies. The tables were attractively adorned and the walls draped with southern smilax by the hotel floral decorator. President H. A. Bunyard managed the affair in his inimitable manner. Speech making was purposely limited to a few so as to leave plenty of time for dancing and when it became time to make a break the job was accomplished by letting loose a number of toy balloons, which did the job instantaneously.

The most interesting events of the evening were the presentation to the retiring president William Duckham, of a handsome silver table service and to Secretary John Young a $300 diamond ring in recognition of his 25th anniversary as secretary of the club. Souvenir Japanese fans, etc., were distributed to the lady guests.

PHILADELPHIA SPRING SHOW.

This annual spring event took place this week Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. The exhibits were mostly bulbous flowers for prizes offered by the seedsmen. There was not a great deal of difference from previous years except that the exhibits were rather fewer. No feature can be mentioned that was of more than local interest.

Burpee made a fine exhibit of new winter flowering Spencers among them Yarrowa and eight Fordhooks; rose, primrose, lavender, light pink, Routzahn pink and white Countess and Sankey, for which they were awarded the societies' certificate of merit.

BOSTON COMPLIMENTS NEW YORK.

I have never seen in this country a more successful horticultural show than the one just closed in New York. The quality and arrangement were far above the ordinary. The rose gardens and cut roses of the A. N. Pierson Co., and F. R. Pierson Co., and the orchids of Lager & Hurrell and Julius Roehrs Co., were the outstanding features. The carnation display of the Cottage Gardens on Wednesday, and the sweet pea classes on Saturday were also fine. Entries for the carnation classes on Friday were not heavy, but the grades of flowers was exceptionally good. In fact everything in the show was worthy of admiration. An exhibition of such beautiful things must be a revelation to the public.

The committee in charge of arrangements wisely chose the majority of their judges from a distance, and their awards gave general satisfaction. We in Boston can learn some good things from New York.

PACIFIC COAST FLOWER SHOW.

The spring flower show, under the auspices of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society in conjunction with the Department of Agriculture of the Panama-Pacific Exposition, opened at the Palace of Horticulture on the exposition grounds on March 19th to continue for three days. It is one of the finest shows of its kind ever given in this city and the participation is quite general. Practically all the growers in the San Francisco Bay district are represented; the retailers have entered excellent exhibits, and some displays of note are being made by amateurs. A good many fine exhibits are included besides the ones entered for prizes. Among these is a general display by C. C. Morse & Co., principally of bulb stock; several varieties of roses, including some long-stem Beauties, by the E. W. McLellan Co., and a big display of flowering plants and shrubs by the MacRorie-McLaren Co. The exhibits are arranged in three classes, prizes being offered on 45 different numbers.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON Business has been fairly good this week, especially in spring flowers. Tuesday and Wednesday were rather depressing, but at the present writing, Thursday, the markets are active, with a brisk demand. This is not so noticeable in roses, which are very plentiful, although of excellent grade. Large quantities of sweet peas fill the stalls and none but the Spencer varieties go at all. Carnations have improved a bit and better prices are being secured. Their quality is excellent and promises well for Easter. Potted bulbous plants are also in fairly active demand. A short crop of violets at Easter is expected, on account of the excessive quantity of foliage now being thrown. Otherwise, heavy crops of all kinds of flowers will be cut this next week, as the weather has been extremely mild. There is a good shipping demand and judging from the advance orders received by the big wholesalers, Easter week ought to be a record breaker.

CHICAGO Practically all of the stock coming into the Chicago market is being disposed of and at satisfactory prices. There is no marked deficiency along any line and the supply and demand are about as nearly balanced as ever occurs. Roses in general are reported by some of the wholesale houses to be a little behind the sales of former weeks but there is no marked decrease in call for them. The abundance of good bulbous stock, both cut and in pans, is bound to make itself felt somewhere and this probably accounts for the little slack in rose sales. American beauties are still scarce and growers look for a few more weeks before they will be good crop. There are plenty of excellent sweet peas, the butterfly type predominating, but there is a steady demand for the old varieties also, for making up. Double violets still come from the east but season is nearly over and quality not very good. Some excellent ten weeks' stock is coming now and sells quickly. Pussy willows have lost their novelty and sales lag this week. A limited number of marguerites, mostly white, are offered. Cattleyas are in fair supply. Spanish iris is the latest addition to the market and arrived last week for the first. Mrs. Russell rose continues to keep a continuous record for being in crop, a record beginning last June at Poehlmann Bros.

CINCINNATI As Easter approaches stock of all kinds is becoming very plentiful. The daily cuts of roses and bulbous stock are much larger and carnations while they have not increased in numbers as rapidly as have the other flowers, still are fairly plentiful. Business at the time of this writing is fair. The demand while steady is not as active as it might be. Prices, however, while lower than they were, are holding up pretty nicely. The outlook for the Easter supply is promising both in respect to the quantity and quality of the flowers.

NEW YORK Changes are few in this market. The heavy cut of bulbous stock continues and market values on all this class of stock has gone down. Roses are holding their own quite well, and carnations also remain steady. Acacia pubescens is abundant, bringing from $1.25 to $1.50 per bunch of sprays. Quantities of outdoor lilac are coming in from the south. Much of it arrives in poor condition. Whatever of it is sold brings 50c. per bunch but half of it at least, is thrown away. Violets are still very fine but they count for very little in the flower market now.

VALLEY

Always popular for the Easter corsage, either with other flowers or alone. Will have an unusually good supply for Easter, splendid, long, well flowered spikes.

ST. LOUIS The market is more than well supplied. The bulk of the stock consists of roses, carnations and bulb flowers, which have sold at greatly reduced prices all week. Carnations and roses are in very heavy supply, as also are sweet peas, violets and bulb stock.

SAN FRANCISCO There seems to be considerable division of opinion among local retailers regarding the effect the exposition is having upon business. Some say the people are spending enough time at the fair grounds to have a curtailing effect upon ordinary house trade, while others report a little improvement and look for a normal trade after the Lenten season. The principal feature of business at present is decorative work, and that can be attributed directly to the exposition as most of it is being done in connection with banquets and other special events given under the auspices of the various state, foreign, county and other fair commissions in the celebration of the formal openings of their exhibits, buildings, etc.; but only a few of the large retail houses are catering to that kind of business so it does not benefit the retail trade generally. The funeral of Lincoln Beachey in the past week created an unusually large demand for floral pieces. Wholesalers report fair business, but an oversupply of stock has a tendency to keep down prices. The only shortages noted are on the better grade of American Beauty roses and cattleyas. The latter are very scarce. Phalaenopsis is also less plentiful this week, but it is believed there will be plenty on the market to supply the Easter demand. Some fine displays of primroses are being made and the demand is fairly strong. A good many California wild yellow violets are coming in. The warm weather has made violets too soft to ship in good condition, and it is expected the Easter movement will about finish the season. St. Patrick's Day had but little effect upon the local flower trade. Very few of the better shops offered anything in the way of green dyed flowers.

WASHINGTON reports obtained from nearby growers there will be more Easter stock than this market can readily absorb and the result will be that they will have to look for other modes of disposing of lilies especially. In all probability, as in other years, the florists will have the competition of department, grocery and other stores to contend with. This latter they would not so much mind were it not for the practice of cutting prices. The Rambler roses that are now coming in have never been equalled and other stock such as spireas, hydrangeas, rhododendrons, and snapdragons in pots and tubs, a novelty of this year, are in fine shape. The weather has caused a slackening in the rose and carnation crops and as a result both of these are cleaning up well although at moderate prices. There is more bulb stock on the market than can be taken care of, and violets and sweet peas are overplentiful. It has come to the pass where the growers cannot produce many of these at a profit and with the returns from the exchanges and wholesale houses lower than the cost of production, a number have discontinued handling them. Business during the month has been quite satisfactory.

SCOTCH SOOT

We offer the genuine in original cwt.
Sacks, at:
$4.00 per 112 lbs.; $17.50 per 560 lbs.

VISIT TO WAVERLEY, MASS.

The annual Easter invitation to the Gardeners and Florists' Club members to visit the plant houses of the W. W. Lutz Company at Waverley, Mass., on Saturday, March 20, was responded to by a record crowd. They found plenty in attraction and interest to repay them well for the trip. Mrs. Edgar and Mr. Bartsch were indefatigable in their kind attention and hospitality and after the luncheon which followed the inspection of the houses, the gratitude of the visitors was voiced by a number of speakers and emphatically endorsed by cheers of appreciation.

As our readers are aware, this is one of the headquarters for high-class plants in the Boston section. This year we see fewer Acacia armata, metrosideros and big genistas than in former years but more azaleas, French hydrangeas and "Baby Rambler" roses—the last named now far out numbering the older strong-growing Ramblers. The roses most abundantly grown are Mrs. Cutbush, Orleans, Rubin, Jessie, Tausendschoen and Excelsa. A house of 4-inch geraniums in full bloom will be a welcome addition to the Easter list. We have never seen a better lot of lilies than here. They are mostly giganteums and although not potted until December 14, are just right for Easter trade. Hydrangeas for May sales and lilies for Decoration Day are eagerly awaiting accommodation on the benches as soon as vacated. There are 7,000 young cyclamen, but no large ones, as it is the rule here to dispose of all the cyclamen at Christmas.

King of Prussia, Pa.—J. W. Thomas & Sons, nurserymen, suffered seriously from fire on March 20. "Grandfather, the barn is on fire!" Two grandchildren, one 3 and the other 5, ran to Mr. Thomas, at his home on County Line road with this announcement, and in 10 minutes the structure, one of the largest in the region, was a flaming mass, doomed to ruin. The loss was estimated between $10,000 and $20,000. A horse was burned to death and a horse and a mule were badly burned.

IF YOU ARE LOOKING FOR HARDY PERENNIALS

"Get them at Dreer's"

We offer here only a few of the most important recent introductions. For a complete list of new varieties as well as all the good old sorts worth planting, see DREER'S GARDEN BOOK and our current WHOLESALE PRICE LIST

THE NEW ANCHUSAS.

The Improved Varieties of Italian Aikenet or Bugloss.

These wonderfully improved Anchusas have proven most valuable additions to our limited list of blue flowering hardy perennials, and particularly so, as they flower from May to July, a time when this color is only sparingly represented in the hardy border.

The habit of the plants while strong and vigorous is not at all coarse, they form many branched specimens from 3 to 5 feet high, each branch of which is terminated by a large, graceful pyramidal spike of blue flow.

Dropmore Variety. Rich gentian-blue.

Opal. A splendid lustrous light blue.

$1.50 per doz.; $10 per 100.

THREE CHOICE ANEMONE JAPONICA.

Allee. Large semi-double, silvery-rose suffused with carnine.

Kriemhilde. Nearly four inches in diameter, semi-double rose-pink.

Loreley. Cup-shaped flowers, three inches in diameter, light mauve-pink.

$1.50 per doz.; $12 per 100.

ARTEMESIA LACTIFLORA.

An introduction from China and a most effective flowering plant, growing $3\frac{1}{2}$ to 4 ft. high, with large panicles of Hawthorn-scented, creamy-white Spiraea-like light and graceful flowers during August and September.

$1.50 per doz.; $10 per 100.

ASTILBE ARENDSEI.

This new type is of very vigorous growth, producing many-branched feathered heads of flowers. $2\frac{1}{2}$ to 3 feet high.

Ceres. Delicate, light rose with silvery sheen.

Juno. Strong upright plumes of deep violet rose.

Salmon Queen. Beautiful salmon pink.

Venus. Deep violet rose.

Vesta. Light lilac rose.

White Pearl. Dense pyramidal plumes of silvery white.

30 cts. each; $3.00 per doz.

Choicest Mixed Varieties of above, $2.00 per doz.; $15.00 per 100.

NEW HARDY ASTER NOVI BELGII CLIMAX.

Novi Belgii Climax. One of the most important additions to the Michaelmas Daisies, and we believe the forerunner of a new type. The plant is of strong, vigorous habit of growth, over 5 feet high; fully one-half of this consists of much branched pyramidal shaped flower stems which are filled with lively light lavender-blue flowers fully $1\frac{1}{4}$ inches in diameter. The plant is in flower from the latter part of August to the middle of October. 35 cts. each; \$3.50 per doz.; \$25.00 per 100.

THREE IMPORTANT DELPHINIUMS.

King of Delphiniums. One of the most distinct yet introduced; the plant is of remarkably strong growth, with flowers of gigantic size, semi-double and of a deep blue color, with large white eye. 35 cts. each; $3.50 per doz.

Moerheimi. This is the first really white hybrid Delphinium introduced, and is a decided acquisition. The plant is of strong, vigorous growth, 5 feet high, the lateral or side shoots $2\frac{1}{2}$ feet high. The flowers are of purest white, without the slightest shading; a free and continuous bloomer from June till frost. 20 cts. each; \$2.00 per doz.; \$15.00 per 100.

Rev. F. Lascelles' new. One of the finest varieties yet introduced. Plant very strong, grows six feet high. Flowers very double of a deep purple-blue, with clear white centre and of greatest size. $1.00 each.

GYPHOPHILA (Baby's Breath).

Paniculata Flore Plena. This double flowering Gypsophilla is one of the most important hardy plants for cutting purposes.

We guarantee our stock, every plant to be the true double form. Seedlings are sometimes offered very cheap, but only a very small percentage come double. Our plants are all either grafted, or grown from cuttings. Strong flowering plants $2.00 per doz.; $15.00 per 100.

NEW HEMEROCALIS QUEEN OF MAY.

A splendid new hybrid, flower stems from 3 to 5 feet high, terminated with from 12 to 18 flowers of largest size of a rich Indian-yellow. The flowers begin to develop in May and continue for nearly two months; perfectly hardy. 25 cts. each; $2.50 per doz.; $18.00 per 100.

NEW GIANT-FLOWERING MARSHMALLOW (Hibiscus).

A wonderfully improved form of our greatly admired native Marshmallow or Rosemallow, in which not only the colors have been greatly intensified but in which flowers of enormous size, frequently 10 to 12 inches in diameter, have been developed.

These plants can be highly recommended for all kinds of plantings, they appear to be equally at home in all positions, having the same vigor in dry and wet ground and are perfectly hardy, they grow from 5 to 8 feet high and are very floriferous, blooming from early July to late in Autumn. We offer three distinct colors, Red, Pink and White in strong two year old roots. 30 cts. each; $3.00 per doz.; $20.00 per 100.

LUPINUS (Lupine).

Polyphyllus Moerheimi. The most beautiful variety yet introduced; a combination of light and dark shades of pink. $2.50 per doz.; $18.00 per 100.

LYTHRUM ROSEUM PERRY'S VARIETY.

A splendid improvement on the common Loosestrife, with much larger flowers, larger spikes and of glistening cherry-red colors. $2.50 per doz.; $18.00 per 100.

NEW ORIENTAL POPPY "PERRY'S WHITE."

A sterling novelty and the most distinct break that has yet been made in Oriental Poppies, it being a pure satiny-white with a bold crimson blotch at the base of each petal; this is undoubtedly the most important addition to our list of hardy perennial plants this season. 35 cts. each; $3.50 per doz.; $25.00 per 100.

THREE SPLENDID NEW HARDY PHLOX.

Rheinlander. A beautiful salmon-pink with flowers and trusses of immense size, the color of the flower is intensified by a very decided eye of a deep claret-red. $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.

Riverton Jewel. One of our own introductions which it gives us great pleasure to recommend, a lively shade of mauve-rose illuminated by a carmine-red eye, a splendid improvement on the popular variety Asia. 30 cts. each; $2.50 per doz.; $18.00 per 100.

Thor. A most beautiful and lively shade of deep salmon-pink suffused and overlaid with a scarlet glow and a light almost white halo around its aniline-red eye. This variety will undoubtedly hold the same place among deep salmon colors that Elizabeth Campbell holds among the light salmon-pinks. $2.00 per doz.; $15.00 per 100.

PERRY'S WHITE ORIENTAL POPPY.

HENRY A. DREER, 714-716 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

The prices quoted above are intended for the trade only.

COLORINDA

A sweet-scented Pelargonium. The result of a cross between Cape Pelargonium and Quericifolium, splendid, strong growing habit; deep green foliage, an agreeable aromatic fragrance. The flowers are nearly the size of the Pansy Geranium, larger than those usually found on a scented variety, bright neyron red, shaded darker with maroon blotch, freely produced. NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Decorative Foliage Plants

Before it gets any later all these plants should have a good sponging with some good insecticide such as Aphine or Lemon Oil, because later on you will not have much time. Repotted now they will start into active growth. Knock the plant out of the pot and remove as much of the old soil as will come off without injury to the active roots. Different composts will be needed to suit their different requirements. When repotted, they will require a closer atmosphere which will help them to start up quicker after they have been disturbed. Most foliage plants like plenty of syringing so don't be afraid to use the hose.

Gardenias

The right sort of easily rooted cuttings can now be had if good stock for the future is to be provided by home propagation. Gardenias in their young state grow faster than is generally supposed and a young, thrifty plant is worth more than several hard worked and hard wooded old ones when it comes to planting for indoor culture in northern latitudes. The new wood shoots just beginning to show the firmness of maturity along their lowermost joints, broken off with a bit of heel or cut sharp with a trifle of a slant will root steadily in good heat, if kept moist and shaded. When gardenias have safely passed through all the dangers of the winter and grown to productive plants, they are then in a position to appreciate generous treatment and respond to it as readily as any other kind of stock. The common stable manure water, as used for roses, I have found to be also the most reliable and beneficial feeding liquid for gardenias in pots or benches and they should now have it about once every five or six days after they have been thoroughly watered. In a steadily held temperature of 68 degrees gardenias feel most comfortable. A pleasantly humid air is to be maintained at all times but in particular while buds are swelling and opening.

Mulch for Carnations

To protect the feeding roots that are now near the surface from strong sunshine, and to keep the benches from drying out too quickly, they should now get a liberal mulching of rich compost. The soil, if the plants have been doing good work, will by this time be much exhausted, and as the spring growth is now on they will require some fresh material to work on. By mulching now the blooms can be kept up to size for quite a long time even in hot weather. The compost should consist of two parts decomposed cow manure and one part good soil. To this should be added fifteen or twenty pounds of dessicated bone meal to each cubic yard of compost, the whole to be thoroughly incorporated and put on the bench one inch thick. Passing the compost through a screen of an inch mesh makes it more easily spread, covering the ground more uniformly and making it more assimilable than if put on in a rougher state. This mulching, with aid of liquid feeding should keep the soil in good condition till planting time.

Swainsona

Now is a good time to propagate this very serviceable florists' flower. Swainsona can be put to a good many uses as it has the make-up of graceful and very delicate green foliage in contrast to its pure white flowers. Place in sand where they will have a little bottom heat, and with necessary waterings and frequent spraying they will soon root. Give them plenty of shading until they are rooted, when they can be potted into 2 or 2½-inch pots. Mix up a light compost, say one part leaf mold and sand to three of new loam. See that they are potted firmly and place in a somewhat closer atmosphere for ten days or two weeks or until they take hold of the soil. They can then be placed in from 55 to 60 degrees at night, shifted from time to time and grown on in pots, or planted out in a bench at about 55 degrees during the winter.

Starting Achimenes

These make very nice flowering plants to have on hand in the spring. A good way is to place tubers quite thickly in pans that have been previously filled with good drainage material finished off with sand so the pans will be three-quarters full. Then cover the tubers with sand. Place them in a temperature of at least 65 degrees. Keep the sand moist all the time but not too wet or the tubers will rot. When the plants have made a growth of two inches they should be potted—6 to 8 in a 5 or 6-inch pan or pot. Use a compost of two parts fibrous loam, two parts leaf mold and one part sand. Give them ample drainage and on this some turfy material or sphagnum moss. Keep in a temperature of about 60 degrees at night. Place well up to the glass but shade when the sun is powerful so that they may suffer no injury to their leaves. When flowering begins they will take liquid manure about twice a week.

Stock Plants

Now is the time to take note and find out what kind of stock, and how much we intend to grow another year. Every up-to-date grower should make a practice of looking ahead, so that when the time comes he will have the required amount of stock to meet his trade, so put aside enough now to propagate from during next fall and winter.

temptation to impose the deception upon a gullible section of the public so long as there was money in it. We hope it will quickly disappear forever, and that nevermore shall advertisements of dyes for coloring fresh flowers be flaunted before the world in the pages of florists' trade papers. We presume, however, that we shall have to endure it a while longer in the time of chrysanthemum blooming, more's the pity.

The status of the flower shows

Now that the big spring exhibitions are successfully over, the returns all in and things settled down to normal once more we can all look back with complacency and extreme satisfaction on the splendid results achieved, not alone in the mere financial success but in the broader consideration of the effect of these great shows upon flower culture, on future flower exhibiting and on the welfare generally of all who engage commercially in any of these branches of horticulture. A very wholesome stimulant to confident effort has certainly been administered which will undoubtedly give new courage where previous disheartening experiences have made caution advisable and we may hope to see more and better exhibitions in the coming season in consequence. That the unprecedented public attention enjoyed by the shows in Boston and New York was due in part to the effect of the European conflict which has made it discreet for large numbers of society people to forego their foreign tours and forced many lavish spenders to seek their diversions in their home country, is not unlikely but we should bear in mind that both affairs were in an artistic sense worthy and that is what we must strive for in every case if we are to make a permanent impression. With this favorable start we may reasonably hope that the influence exerted by these splendidly successful home enterprises shall continue and expand and that the flower show may become more and more strongly entrenched in the public estimation as a standard institution.

Exhibition problems

We did not quite realize, until after our editorial notes of last week had gone broadcast, the large number of discontented flower show exhibitors there were in the land. It seems quite evident that we "barked up the right tree," for, judging from the returns, in comment, approving or disapproving, it would appear that if all those who are said to have discontinued exhibiting because of dissatisfaction over their past experiences had come into this season's spring shows, staging room would have been at a premium. Now, HORTICULTURE harbors no prejudice and we have no "axe to grind." Our sole desire is to see public floral exhibitions grow in number, extent and influence and to help to that end by whatever means is in our power, for we have great faith in their efficacy as upholders of horticulture and feeders of the rapidly developing horticultural appetite of the American public. Any close approach to perfection in schedule making, arranging or judging can hardly be expected at once and mere fault-finding will not help along in the least. If defects exist in the methods now in vogue, in one or the other place, they should be squarely exposed and a heart to heart effort made at the proper time and place by those who detect them, with a view to having them removed. It seems to us that this is the right course for any member of any society who has become dissatisfied with its methods and the way they work out. Should any such, who read these lines, see fit to express through our columns publicly their views as to ways and means whereby improvement on existing conditions may be brought about we shall be more than pleased to make room for them.

Exit,

the green carnation

Welcome, indeed, is the news from various quarters where this abominable blot on the flower business has been perpetuated year after year, that very little of it was in evidence this year. This information coincides with our own observation, most of the "green" carnations coming to our notice on St. Patrick's day, 1915, being seen on the stands of the alley and doorway fakirs, whereas, it is not long since they were a window "ornament" of many of the leading retail flower stores whose proprietors presumably knew better but could not resist the

HARDY CYPRIPEDIUMS

The increased hot-house space for the cultivation of tropical and subtropical orchids as cutflowers for the markets is evidence of our advance as growers. Indeed the large volume of what hardly more than ten years ago was considered a choice and rare material begins to tax the enterprising distributors severely and the prices have gone down further than we like to see them. When looking at the hardy herbaceous class we find conditions reversed. The most beautiful species of cypripediums abound in the mountain recesses of our northern and western districts and are common in the woodlands of the plains, but extremely rare in our gardens. I admired the beautiful blossoms of Cypripedium acaule on the granite-ledges of Mt. Desert Island in Maine and they certainly are not less charming when we meet them in the flat sandy sections of New Jersey. Certainly we have sometimes tried them in what we considered the improved condition and sheltered atmosphere of our gardens but if they did not at once take kindly to our treatment we simply discarded them. Placed by nature before our very door it seems a comparatively easy matter to ascertain the reason why we are failing. If we knew the mocassin flower to be a denizen of the Trans-Baikal Region or Kamschatka I am sure we would most willingly go into scientific research and not rest until we had solved the cultural problems. Nicholson's Dictionary of Gardening says of Cypripedium acaule: "an extremely rare species of great hardihood." The German Gartenbau Lexikon describes it as "one of the showiest representatives of hardy orchids," and our picture of a flowering clump taken in its natural state on a granite-ledge of Brown Mountain near Northeast Harbor, Maine, testifies to its beauty. I think after all it seems worth while to investigate the natural conditions under which our native lady slippers thrive. Perhaps we may find means and ways to succeed; at any rate they should not remain a rarity in our gardens. As a rule we see them grow in partial shade, their long stringy roots running nearly horizontally about 3 to 4 inches under ground. The soil is invariably peaty or leaf-mouldy and frequently rocky. It is surprising how well they transplant even when advanced in bud and flower providing the work is done with proper care. There is no doubt that under conditions similar to nature's we can grow hardy cypripediums. The best of opportunities to enjoy the beauty of floral gems of this kind is offered, of course, in the advanced type of the modern rockgarden.

Cypripedium acaule varies in color from white to deep rosy carmine; the small sepals and petals being of brown greenish tint. By far the stateliest hardy species is our native Cypripedium spectabile. Attaining a height of from 2 to 3 feet it prefers moist situations and a soil rich in humus. The moisture, however, should not be stagnant. The extraordinarily large pouch is usually bright carmine pink while sepals and petals appear pure white. Of the much smaller foreigners of similar shades I mention Cypripedium guttatum and C. macranthum. Distinguished by yellow labellums are our Cypripedium pubescens, the European species C. calceolus, C. parviflorum and Wilson's new Chinese introduction C. luteum.

The three American mocassin flowers—acaule, pubescens and especially spectabilis—represent jewels in nature's great floral treasury. We may be justly proud of our cultural success as growers of orchids under glass, but so far we have neglected the beautiful species of our own land. I believe it is time for some of us to give them that amount of study and attention which is necessary for a more frequent and effective use in our gardens.

DISGRACEFUL EXPRESS SERVICE.

Editor of HORTICULTURE.

Before an advance in rates is granted the express companies, should we not have some guarantee of decent service? On Saturday, March 27, I received a box from Providence, containing 150 roses. The roses were tied in the box, and nearly six inches spare room at the end. The brown box carried a white label, 10 inches long and 6 inches wide, distinctly printed in black, stating perishable contents and requesting care. On opening the box, the roses were pressed hard against the end, and 19 broken short. You can imagine the condition of the ends of the unbroken roses. The box had evidently come from Providence, standing on end all the way. I have had the same experience several times. I am told I can collect damages. I cannot get pay for the time required to collect, or for my fits of temper, and if one needs the flowers for immediate use, he cannot get paid for inconvenience or loss of orders.

When waiting at depot, I have seen large wooden boxes, from a well-known grower, and containing American Beauties, lily of the valley and longiflorum lilies, thrown from the express car to the platform, the top boxes rolling over the sides of the heap. The boxes were for transshipment for a point 200 miles distant. Is such treatment of flowers much better than robbery? Perhaps Mr. Gude, of Washington, may be interested in these comments.

I use the electric express all I can, finding them more careful and much cheaper.

MASSACHUSETTS TREE WARDENS MEET.

The Massachusetts Tree Wardens and Foresters' Association held its fourth annual banquet at the American House, Boston, March 26. The banquet followed the opening day of the annual meeting of the association in Horticultural Hall, and which continued two days. L. H. Worthley of Melrose, special agent of the United States Department of Agriculture, was toastmaster, and the guest of the evening was Allan B. Chamberlain of the Massachusetts Forestry Association. Other speakers were Dr. George E. Stone of Amherst, retiring president; Nathaniel T. Kidder of Milton, new president; S. L. Symmes of Winchester, retiring vice-president; William W. Colton, Forest Commissioner of Newton; Harold J. Neale, city forester of Worcester; J. A. Davis, city forester of Springfield; A. F. Burgess of the Government experiment station at Melrose, and Harris A. Reynolds, secretary of the Massachusetts Forestry Association. The principal speaker at the morning session was State Forester F. W. Rane. In the afternoon Allan B. Chamberlain discussed "The Town Forest." Dr. George E. Stone spoke on "The Present Status of Cavity Work in Trees," and Dr. J. W. Chapman of the Bussey Institution described "The Leopard Moth."

THE AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF PARK SUPERINTENDENTS.

The seventeenth annual convention of the American Association of Park Superintendents will be held in San Francisco, August 18-19-20. The opening day, the 18th, will be devoted exclusively to business sessions, morning, afternoon and evening, while the two succeeding days will be given over to inspection tours and social functions.

Inasmuch as the Society of American Florists and the National Association of Gardeners have set their convention dates for the same week at San Francisco, the three organizations will undoubtedly bring together a tremendous gathering of men engaged in these professions. The Park Superintendents' Association in an effort to have as many as possible travel westward together, is arranging for a special train from Chicago through to San Francisco via the Pacific Northwest, which is conceded to be a scenic wonderland.

The party will assemble at Chicago on August 8th, and stop-overs are planned at Minneapolis, Glacier National Park, Spokane, Seattle, Tacoma and Portland, where elaborate entertainment features will be provided by local authorities at no expense to the party except at the National Park. Members of kindred societies and friends and relatives will be invited to join the party. No specific return route is being planned as the length of time to be spent at the San Francisco and San Diego expositions is so much of an individual matter dependent on time and means and a return route via Colorado or the South is an open question for individual decision.

CONNECTICUT HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

"Ladies' Night," the second March meeting of this society was held in the County Building, Hartford, on the evening of the 26th. The exhibits of roses by President Mason, amaryllis, by Louis Chauvy, and cinerarias, by Alfred Cebelius, were excellent. The judges awarded the roses a cultural certificate, and to each of the other exhibits a first-class certificate.

The feature of the evening was a demonstration of the science of pruning, by Mr. Mason and G. H. Hollister. Mr. Mason took a young peach tree and trimmed it back to about three feet high. He advised trimming off the lower branches at the end of the first year, and cutting back the upper branches, leaving them about six inches long. Mr. Hollister pruned a number of apple trees and ornamental shrubs. The demonstration was very instructive. At the close of the meeting President Mason gave each lady a bouquet of roses.

PACIFIC COAST FLOWER SHOW.

Interest in the spring flower show of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society in the Palace of Horticulture on the exposition grounds continued at a high tide during the entire three days of its progress, March 19, 20 and 21. By special dispensation the building was open to Fair visitors on the evening of the 20th, which was the first time any of the exhibit palaces had been kept open after dark. The displays were arranged in California's space in the building which was still vacant, and competition for the prizes was keen, the work of the judges being no light task. The place was crowded when the final awards were made. Ferrari Bros. took 1st prize, a gold medal and diploma, for No. 1, flowering bulbs, in Class "A," together with 1st prize for nine other numbers in the same class, and 2nd prize for another. The San Mateo County Commission took 2nd prize, silver medal, on No. 1, Class "A," and Pelicano, Rossi & Company took 3rd, a bronze medal. Domoto Bros. received several prizes, as did Schwerin Bros., and E. E. James was awarded prizes on six different numbers. H. Plath took two awards, the Hillsborough Nurseries, two, and I. W. Hellman, Jr., three. Other prize winners were Mrs. J. A. Scannavin, Geo. Nunn, Mrs. R. A. Darbie and the United Floral Supply Company. Pelicano, Rossi & Company were given the first award, a silver medal, for the best bridal bouquet, a creation of butterfly orchids and lilies of the valley. The second award, a bronze medal, went to Lundberg's Flower Shop and was given for a bouquet of white cyclamen.

OYSTER BAY HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

At the regular meeting of the Oyster Bay (N. Y.) Horticultural Society on March 24 the monthly competition prizes were awarded to Chas. Mills for Darwin tulips, and James Duthie for schizanthus. Special $5 to James Duthie for group of plants; cultural certificates to Jos. Robinson for azalea and lilacs; honorable mention, Jos. Robinson for amaryllis seedling and cottage tulips; J. Sorosick, for collection, lilies and cauliflower by Chas. Mills. Thanks to Arthur Patton, Frank Kyle and James Duckham for various exhibits. Talks were given by John Everitt and M. C. Ebel on the work of the National Association of Gardeners. James Duthie donated the special prize he received, to be used at the next show.

PANAMA-PACIFIC INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION.

The Philippine Orchids.

The present article regarding the Philippine Government Orchid Exhibit in this Exposition, which has just been installed, is written in the interest of those who are unable to visit this great World Fair.

A very congruous conservatory has been constructed to grow the orchids and to show them off to their best advantage. There are about seven hundred plants of the Phalaenopsis, these being P. Schilleriana, P. amabilis, P. equestre, P. Luddemanniana, P. Aphrodite, P. rosea, and many fine natural hybrids from P. amabilis and P. Schilleriana. Most of the Phalaenopsis are growing in baskets made of the red wood, Sequoia sempervirens. These baskets will last from two to three years. There are also samples of the species Trichosporum pallidum. The flowers of these plants only last a few hours, but they are very fragrant. There are over 130 Dendrobium superbum growing in six-inch baskets. These plants have made fine growth and belong to a large flowering type. Dendrobium cruentum is doing well. We have many plants of Dendrobium Dearei which have been flowering for the last three or four months, their flowers lasting three months. There are also the Dendrobium cariniferum, D. Wardianum, D. formosum, D. cretaceum, D. chrysanthum, D. Parishii, D. Dalhouseanum, D. Crassinode, D. crepidatum, D. bigibbum, D. infundibulum, and many fine plants of Cypripedium Argus and C. Philippinense. There is also a large plant, the largest that I have ever seen, of Gramatophyllum Fenzlianum in a three-foot basket hanging in the center of the house. A fine specimen of Cymbidium Finlaysonianum is seen growing in a 14-inch pot. This plant has flowered for the first time here and it is a fine type.

In addition to the above mentioned species there are also in display specimens of the following:

Cymbidium tigrinum, Gramatophyllum multiflorum, Rhynchostylis retusa, Aerides quinquevulnerum, Spathoglottis plicata, Saccolabium miniatum, Vanda Sanderiana, Vanda lamellata, Vanda Boxallii, Vanda Luzonica.

These orchids arrived here from the islands about one year ago, and I did not think at the time that they would be in flower on the opening day, but they have done remarkably well. I may state that it has been my main object to make a demonstration of how to grow these orchids, and this, I think, has pleased the people most.

In the background of the photo that I have sent is a garden seat built of palm stems that have been brought from the islands, which, as you will see, is covered with orchids. On taking the photo many plants in flower were placed above and below the seat to fill up gaps.

In the center of the house there is a staging, 12 by 60 feet, which is one mass of flowering orchids. On my

SAMUEL S. PENNOCK.

The name Pennock has been a florists' "household word" since long before memory began with most of our readers. The gentleman whose portrait adorns our cover page on this occasion needs no introduction to present day readers. S. S. Pennock is known in the florist trade of the entire country as one of the shining lights of the wholesale flower and supply market, an alert and shrewd business man, a model of integrity and all the gentlemanly traits of character. So with all these attributes, it is the most natural thing in the world that he should be unanimously selected as the standard bearer of the American Rose Society for the all-important year upon which that organization now enters. It goes without saying that nothing which the chief officer can do to bring the society to a high state of efficiency will be left undone while Mr. Pennock fills the office of president.

NEMATODE ROOT GALL DISEASES.

Of the many diseases, nematode root galls often prove a great drawback to plant life. Every grower and particularly the gardener, the florist and the trucker are especially interested in this class of plant ailment. Because of its great economic importance it will not be out of place to briefly trace the history of root knot. Nematodes are probably of European origin. In 1890 great losses are recorded on the Continent, the sugar beet then was almost wiped out by severe nematode outbreaks. In 1896 the trouble suddenly appeared in the United States. The first attack then being recorded on roses grown under glass; it being introduced with imported stock. Ever since that date the pest has spread over large areas in many states. Greenhouse plants have a harder struggle since the conditions under which they grow renders them weak and less resistant to diseases. What is true with indoor plants is also true for vegetable crops of the trucker and gardener. There, too, although the plants receive the benefit of outdoor air, they are nevertheless weakened because of the excessive use of manure or commercial fertilizer all of which is conducive to rapid growth. Intensive culture then invariably results in weaker plants. These then are the reasons why greenhouse and garden plants are greatly subjected to root gall injury as well as to numerous other diseases.

Symptoms of Root Galls.

Many a grower who loses heavily from this trouble hardly suspects its presence simply because he has not learned to recognize it in its initial stage. Beyond a yellowing and dwarfing of the affected plant there are no outward definite symptoms of the disease. Diseased plants cease growing, become yellow, languid, and may remain in this condition the entire growing season. This is usually true for affected roses, begonias, violets, sweet peas, and many other plants. With greenhouse cucumbers affected plants suddenly collapse and die without further warning. Upon pulling out such plants the seat of the trouble will be located at the roots. In size, root galls vary greatly with the individual host. On the roots of affected carnation plants the knots are irregular as to size and shape, varying from a sixteenth to half an inch or more in diameter; and from spherical or oval with smoothish surfaces to rough lumpy swellings. With sweet peas the knots are often the size of a pea seed and are mistaken for the true legume nodules of that plant. With roses, begonias and tomatoes the galls are fairly large. With lettuce the knots are small. Growers who notice a languid growth should at once pull out a few plants in order to make sure of the presence of the disease in their soil.

Cause of Root Galls.

The trouble is induced by a parasite commonly known as eel worm or nematode. Eel worm is a true worm, belonging to the same animal group as the common fish worm, the tape worm, the trichinia of the pork, and the vine-agre worm. Nematodes are very slender, minute pearly white, glistening worms. As soon as the young hatch

AN INGENIOUS ADVERTISING SCHEME.

RUBE BROWN AND HIS TAME ROOSTER

One of the cleverest advertising stunts seen lately is one used by Bolgiano's seed store of Baltimore, Md. It is a tall, lanky, country chap, winding his way in and out through the downtown crowds closely followed by a big rooster. The rooster does a number of amusing tricks and the advertising idea catches on with the crowds everywhere. Rube carries a big grip-sack upon which is Bolgiano's Ad.

from the eggs they push their way into the root of healthy plants in which they settle. The presence of these worms in the sound roots causes an irritation which results in these swellings or galls. At first both sexes are slender and hardly visible to the naked eye. Soon, however, the female increases in size as to be readily seen by a good eye. At this stage the female is incapable of locomotion and presents no more evidence of being alive than a small seed. The male on the other hand remains slender and active even upon reaching maturity. Because of this activity it is able to search the female and fertilize her. A fertilized female further swells presenting the appearance of a sack full of eggs. Soon the mother dies and all that remains is a cavity filled with mature eggs. These hatch and the young at once begin to travel to sounder portions of the plant root to renew the life cycle, or they migrate back to the soil searching for a new host. Because of the tender and minute nature of eel worms they do not thrive well in heavy lands. The soil best suited for this pest is the type of soil best fitted for forcing house and truck crops; namely, a light rich sandy loam.

Damage Caused by Eel Worm.

Generally speaking losses are more severe in the states where the winter is mild than in colder climates where nematode activity is confined to greenhouse plants only. In the South, for instance, certain areas have become so infested with nematode that it is difficult if not impossible to grow certain crops, particularly trucks. In Massachusetts, on the other hand, the greatest loss is experienced in the raising of cucumbers and lettuce under glass. In other northern states where indoor vegetables are extensively grown, tomatoes too are known to suffer heavily from the nematode pest. In Kentucky the disease has been severe on carnations under glass. The same is true for indoor roses and violets extensively grown in a number of states. With violets particularly the attack is almost fatal to the plant either directly or indirectly. Leaf curl in violets, for instance, is due directly to a paralysis of the root system. Leaf spot is indirectly caused by insufficient nourishment resulting in weak, poorly developed foliage which becomes easy prey to fungus attacks. Cyclamens and begonias are often greatly weakened by nematode attacks, giving rise to an unhealthy condition which is not easily overcome.

How Root Knot is Spread.

Outdoors, in the garden or in the truck patch, drainage water is probably the most important means of spreading root knot. Nursery stock affords another way of carrying the pest. Seedlings, pecans, peaches, figs, mulberry, young asparagus, eggplant, strawberry, tobacco and tomato seedlings when bought from sections known to be infested, may carry the worms on their roots as galls or with adhering soil particles. In the West where nematode commonly attacks the white potato, the parasite is carried with the tubers. In the greenhouse the trouble may be brought in with infested soil, or with diseased seedlings or plants or with the manure which is usually the dumping place of all rubbish and diseased material.

The following is but a partial list of the flowering and truck crops which suffer severely from root knot: Beet, cantaloupe, carrot, celery, crimson clover, cucumber, eggplant, salsify, squash, tomato, roses, watermelon, sweet peas, violets, begonias, etc. Plants which are less injured and which seem able to withstand to a certain extent the attacks of root knot are the following: Asparagus, lima and snap beans, cabbage, collard, onion, garden pea, radish, spinach and strawberry. There are a number of weeds which are greatly susceptible to root knot. These are: Morning glory, pepper grass, dandelion, and a number of others. Such weeds should, of course, be eradicated from the garden if it is hoped to keep the worm in check.

Methods of Control.

Under greenhouse conditions it is comparatively easy to control nematodes. The steam method is the best since it kills both eggs and worms in the soil. The steaming is done either before planting or when the crop is gone. The method consists in placing a series of perforated pipes in the beds, running parallel and about eighteen inches apart. These pipes are placed about one foot deep in the soil, connected with the steam boiler which to be effective must be able to generate from 80 to 100 lbs. pressure. Before treatment, the beds are properly fertilized and thoroughly pulverized and then covered with heavy burlap or blankets to confine the heat. As a guide it is well to bury a few raw potatoes here and there. The steam is turned on and maintained for about two hours at a pressure not less than 80 pounds. If the steaming has been thoroughly done the buried potatoes should be well cooked. With this method of sterilization we destroy the eel worm and also all fungus pests as well as all weed seeds. The steaming, too, is very helpful to the soil itself, and renders it in a better working condition. Plant growth in such soils is also materially benefited and stimulated. At first they seem to start a little slower but they soon catch up and surpass in growth and vigor those grown in non-sterilized beds.

Where steam facilities are lacking the formaldehyde method is the next best. It consists of soaking the soil with a solution of one pint of formaldehyde in twenty gallons of water applied at the rate of one gallon of the solution to every square foot of bed space. With this method the soil is prepared as for the steaming. After applying the formaldehyde, the treated beds are covered with heavy burlap for about 24 hours in order to retain the fumes. The beds are then uncovered and the formaldehyde fumes made to escape as rapidly as possible. This may be encouraged by frequent spading of the beds. The formaldehyde treatment should always be done about two weeks before planting.

Where nematodes have gained a strong foothold outdoors in the garden or on truck lands the methods at control become more difficult. The foregoing methods for large fields are too costly and impractical. Trap or catch crops afford a means of relief but it is only temporary. The method consists in planting on the infested land two or three successive crops such as the sugar beet or mustard, both of which are very susceptible to root knot. In about four to five weeks the roots of the crop will be thoroughly diseased. At this stage the plants are pulled up and destroyed. This method, however, is expensive, since the grower loses a season's profit. Another method of control is crop rotation. Any of the following hosts are either immune or largely so and could therefore be used as an alternative: barley, velvet bean, sweet corn, iron cowpea, millet, winter oats, peanuts, sorghum or wheat. Truckers who also raise poultry may find it practical to have their birds transferred to these sick areas for two to three years.

ROOT GALLS OF ROSES

CARNATIONS FROM THE FIELD TO THE HOUSE.

By Mrs. C. W. Ward, of the "Horticulture" staff.

The tops of carnations in a wide bed at and have been suffering repeatedly. For some of you it is no doubt "thread bare."

We plant out the young plants from pots to the field as early in May as we can, in rows twenty inches apart and eleven inches in the row, cultivating them with a hand harrow after every rain, and in dry season keep the harrow moving.

The topping in the field can not be done too carefully, not waiting until a great number are ready. There may be in the first topping only a few hundred. All season we are trying to keep the plants down, never allowing them to get too high, as we find the high leggy plants (as we may term them) are more liable to be hard wooded and have more dead foliage.

Of course these high topped plants look larger (when they really are not) because they have less side shoots. Again you all know different varieties must be topped accordingly, but never allowed to get too high.

In preparing the houses for planting in time, which with us is the last week of August, we clean out all the soil and give the houses a thorough cleaning, whitewashing the sides of benches, the bottom boards are taken out, swept clean and then floated in lime water, then are carried by forks on tracks to dry in the sun. After they are dry we place as many on a pile as a man can readily carry. Next they are again taken back to their places and put on piles of four each. In that way they do not warp as they would if spread over the benches. We leave them on piles until we are ready to fill in the soil.

In placing the bottom boards we allow a small space between each board, using excelsior to cover over cracks to keep the manure from falling through. The benches are then ready for the soil. I can say here that by treating the bench boards in this way we have been using a great many of the same boards ever since I have been in business, which is fourteen years.

We do not sieve or screen the soil as we once did, but by handling it over two or three times and watching the clods when loading the barrows we get it in good shape. By screening your soil if you are not very careful you will find a great deal of your best soil and manure wasted. I know it was so in our case.

After the benches are filled with soil we water them just enough for nice planting. Before planting we shade the houses, and after planting three or four hundred we water them and keep watering over and over to be sure the soil is saturated through, after that only giving them a light spraying two or three times a day, depending very much on the kind of weather we are having at the time, ever trying to get the soil back to its normal condition, yet never allowing the plants to get too dry until they are well established, being very careful not to let drafts of air blow over them, for if they are once wilted it will take some time to get them back to their normal condition again.

We take all the buds off when planting them in, and in fact for some time after they are housed.

Beacon for one will start a great many buds very soon after housing with very short stems. I must say right here Beacon truly is a grand carnation, a free bloomer, fine habit of growth and carries out to the end of the season with me, which last season was to the end of July. And so long as it does that for us we surely will not drop it. My argument is you are only taxing your plants when you allow them to bloom right after housing, as you are only getting flowers on very short stems and receiving very little money for them.

Get your plants in good healthy condition and well established, then they will be ready for work when the flowers bring you more money. Just as soon as the plants are established we put on the first wire and tie. I really think the carnation loses time if not kept tied up properly, and the less you handle them the better they like it.

The new varieties we are growing this season are Gorgeous, Matchless and Philadelphia. Gorgeous with us is a wonderful stem maker and fine habit of growth and has every promise of being a fine carnation. Matchless up to the present time has done very well. It too is a vigorous grower. If there is anything we could criticise it would be the shortness of its stems. Philadelphia is a wonderful plant maker and a very clean grower. With us so far it has been a bit slow, but at present is full of buds.

My experience has been that after growing the new varieties the second year they prove themselves so much better from the first that I think we do them an injustice in being too severe in our criticisms. For instance the first year we grew Mrs. C. W. Ward it was very short in stems and very uneven on the benches. In fact we were not very much pleased with it excepting the form and color of the flowers. Today its habit of growth and length of stem class it among our best.

In addition to the older varieties we are growing Supreme, Pink Delight, Benora and White Perfection which are all doing well. We will drop Perfection another season because of its tendency to give so many split flowers and grow Matchless instead. Up to this time we have not cut one split flower from Matchless of which we have one thousand. Supreme we shall retain and drop the others by reason of having too many varieties in this color.

BOON FOR A LIBRARY.

The following letter has been received at this office and speaks for itself:

Gentlemen: I have nearly or quite complete files of the "Horticulture" and other trade papers for many years back. These are getting so bulky that I have to file them away in such shape that they are not available for reference. I shall be glad to give these to some educational institution or library if sure that they will be made available for reference. Will you not publish a notice to this effect.

THE BREAD LINE.

That Horticultural Hall flower show is all right in its way, but for real luxury good bread flour or nice pastry ditto, fairly surpass orchids and hyacinths, however rare, as an exhibit.—Boston Record.

The Good Book says "Man shall not live by bread alone." The writer of the above lines evidently agrees and he selects pie as his limit. The Record should pick a different breed when selecting reviewers on the subject of flower shows. His place is at the trough.

ON EASTER DAY

We light the Easter fire, and the Easter lamps we trim,
And lilacs bear their chalice cups in churches rich and dim,
And chapel low and minister high the same triumphant strains
In city and in village raise, and on the lonely plains.

"Life" is the strain, and "endless life" the chiming bells repeat—
A word of victory over death, a word of promise sweet;
And as the great good clasps the less, the sun a myriad rays,
So do a hundred thoughts of joy cling round our Easter days.

And one, which seems at times the best and dearest of them all,
Is this: that all the many dead in ages past recall,
With the friends who died so long ago that memory seeks in vain
To call the vanished faces back, and make them live again;

And those so lately gone from us that still they seem to be Beside our path, beside our board, in viewless company
A light for all our weary hours, a glory by the way
All, all the dead, the near, the far, take part in Easter day.

PRUNING PHILADELPHIA RAMBLERS.

Dear Sir: Would you please describe the best way to prune Philadelphia Rambler? This is the third year since they were planted out. Each plant has about ten canes, some of them about six feet long. The plants are six feet apart and growing on a wire trellis. They are planted, every other one red and white. The white ones have made much stronger wood and more of it. Would you please advise me on the best time to prune them; also, if I should thin out the surplus wood.

A SUBSCRIBER.

Mass.

In reply to your inquiry, I find the best way to prune Philadelphia Rambler is just merely cutting the tips of last year's shoots. The third year of planting out should have produced blooms last summer. There are too many canes to a plant; ten canes are too many for each plant. Four canes would be plenty.

It would be well to tie down the ends of the shoots until they begin to break. This will cause more lateral shoots and nearer the base of the plants.

The Philadelphia Rambler with me is not a very profuse bloomer, producing only a few flowers on the tips of the previous year's growth. They should be pruned at once and the surplus shoots removed, as above stated.

Henry Frost is superintendent of these parks, which seem to be satisfactorily filling their place as recreation grounds for the public.

The Page Company's list of fiction has been increased by one more book by Eleanor H. Porter. Any one who has read "Pollyanna, The Glad Book," will rejoice to know that this gifted author has come again with another production of the same kind. "Pollyanna Grows Up; The Second Glad Book," has just appeared and is destined, we believe, to meet with the same welcome here and abroad which was accorded its predecessor. The first Glad Book reached a circulation of 250,000. Like it, the second Glad Book is charming in style, natural in its character drawing and filled with the spirit of optimism and irresistible goor cheer and we hope to see it equal or exceed the remarkable record of success scored by the first Glad Book. Quoting in part from its lines, "The instrument it plays on is the great heart of the world and its music will draw a response of smiles and happy tears." Published by the Page Company, Boston. Price $1.25 net; $1.40 carriage paid.

BRITISH HORTICULTURE.

Big Prizes for Vegetables.

The Royal Horticultural Society has done its best to educate the British public on the subject, and to give the best possible advice. Now the "Daily Mail," which a few years ago created a sensation by offering record prizes for sweet peas, has come forward with a unique offer to vegetable growers. This enterprising newspaper is devoting £1,000 as prizes at a great exhibition of vegetables which will be competed for in a show to be held at the end of the summer. The Royal Horticultural Society is supporting the project. The Society's experts will be responsible for the staging and judging of the exhibits. It is a matter for regret that both the National Potato Society and the National Vegetable Society, which could materially aid this branch, have come to a premature end.

Jottings.

Great sympathy has been expressed for Mr. J. S. Brunton, the editor of the Horticultural Trades Journal, and an active worker in the Perpetual Flowering Carnation Society, in the sad loss he has lately experienced by the death of his son, Pte. J. W. Brunton, who succumbed to an attack of spinal meningitis after a week's illness. The deceased, prior to responding to the country's call, was a member of the staff of Dobbie & Co., seedsmen, Edinburgh, and was highly respected by all with whom he was brought in contact....The Narcissus Committee of the Royal Horticultural Society has issued through its secretary, C. H. Curtis, a supplementary list of daffodils registered since the previous list was published last year. This list includes 352 registered since the beginning of last year....British horticulturists have learned with the deepest regret of the sad plight which has befallen the Belgian florists and seedsmen, as one of the effects of the terrible war. According to the "Gardeners' Chronicle," horticulture is in many places in Belgium disorganized and ruined. Attempts on the part of Belgian growers to "carry on" are difficult or impossible. The cost of transport over the Belgian railways has been rendered prohibitive. Many growers are ruined, and almost all are in financial difficulties.

W. H. ADSETT.

Enclosed is post office order to pay for HORTICULTURE two years more. I like HORTICULTURE very much and hope to read it many more years.

Of Interest to Retail FloristsTHE PROTECTION OF CREDIT.

A superlatively liberal credit has been a characteristic of the florist trade, and during the last few years it has been the source of many evils. This credit extended in good faith to retailers, has been much abused, several wholesalers suffering big losses. Some cities have taken this matter in hand and have somewhat controlled the situation.

The trade in Boston has been rather unfortunate in this respect and all attempts at co-operation have thus far failed. There has been opposition from the very men whom it would certainly benefit most. A new organization under the name of The Flower Growers' Protective Association has just been formed by a small number of growers and wholesalers. There are many up-to-date retailers who welcome this society and believe it to be for the general good of the trade. The best retail florists of the city have been accustomed to buy their stock on a cash basis, paying on the tenth of the month. These men heartily support the new association in Boston, which should have been organized several years ago. Every retailer of this class ought to join in protecting the producers and wholesalers as well as his own business from unscrupulous "mushroom" florists who, by their abuse of the credit system, injure the ability of producers to serve their customers, the retailers.

The retail florist who knows his business and who has always dealt fairly with the wholesalers will not need to fear this measure. The co-operative spirit should prevail among all branches of the trade, from grower to retailer. Innovations, and in many cases radical changes, must be expected in a business which has not yet reached its full development. The flower industry is young, immature and in a state of perpetual flux—forward. Advance has been rapid. Co-operation is an absolute necessity if we are to keep up with the procession. Yet there are florists who still see nothing in co-operative legislation, trade papers, co-operative advertising, telegraph delivery or credit associations. The opposing selfish spirit is very clearly expressed in the remark we overheard the other day. It was a discussion between two florists about a certain competitor who undoubtedly leads his city in advertising and in the volume of business due to that advertising policy. "Oh, well, H— does enough advertising to stimulate trade for every other florist in town."

NEWS ITEMS FROM EVERYWHERE

BOSTON.

Charles E. Paine, of Holliston, Mass., has been elected gold of the season by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society for this week.

Superb Cattleya grown by W. D. Hayward, of Malden, Mass., who won further reputation for his Silver Plant at the New York Show.

We are pleased to report that N. M. Silverman, of 56 Winter street, is recovered from his severe attack of grip, which kept him confined for three weeks.

The firm of Southworth & Greene, of W. Stoughton, has been dissolved. Mr. S. Greene is now in the Boston Flower Exchange, engaged in selling the products of several growers.

Cattleya Trianae is now being replaced by Cattleya Schroederiae in the markets. F. J. Dolansky states that it hardly sells as well as C. Labiata or C. Trianae. He will have C. Mossiae for Easter.

Harry Quint has a brilliant display of plants in front of his store on Boylston street. The front of the building, for over sixty feet, is lined with flowering plants. This display is a small show in itself.

Some specialties noted this week are candidum lilies from Mann Bros., Randolph; carnation Pink Delight from J. A. Nelson, Framingham; Bougainvilleas from Thos. Roland of Nahant, and jonquils from Paine Bros., Randolph.

City florists have gone heavily into plants this week. Several college students have been put on by Penn the Florist as extra help—an experiment in the psychology of employees, in which Henry Penn is deeply interested.

Spring plant auction sales will begin early this month at the N. F. McCarthy & Co. auction rooms. These will take place every Tuesday and Friday until June. The first sale will be held on Friday, April 9. This is one week later than the customary date but this is unavoidable. Owing to the danger from the mine fields the steamship companies have been holding back and refused to accept goods for shipment at usual time and the first arrivals were on Wednesday of this week. The stock opens up well and we advise those who wish to secure the goods to get busy at this first sale as the future is uncertain.

SAN FRANCISCO NOTES.

Preparations are being concluded by the town of San Leandro, in San Mateo county, for its second annual flower show, to be held April 9 and 10.

W. Vortriede, gardener of the California State Capitol grounds at Sacramento, has completed a plan for landscape work on the grounds of the new Willows, Cal., high school.

A new flower shop has recently been opened at 1422 Haight street by Navaret Bros., who formerly conducted the new Rosarie at Divisadero and California streets. They are now operating as the Sunset Floral Company.

PHILADELPHIA.

Byron Bragg has succeeded Stuart H. Miller as foreman at Edward Reid's, 1619-21 Ranstead street. Mr. Bragg has had six years' experience in the wholesale commission business with various houses, including Lilly & Upton, Berger Bros. and The Phila. Cut Flower Co. He impresses the casual visitor as a very nice boy.

The new ever-blooming pelargonium "Easter Greeting," rose pink with dark purple blotch, is a feature in the Easter plant offerings of the Pennock-Meehan Co. Shapely little plants in 4-inch pots, about 9 inches high in bloom and coming on, sell readily at 35 cents. They make an elegant window or conservatory plant and bloom all summer if planted out-of-doors. One of the best novelties of the season.

Seizo Suzuki, of the Yokohama Nursery Co., leaves New York for Europe on the Lusitania, Saturday, April 3. We had the pleasure of a visit from him in Philadelphia, March 30 and want to see more of him. He sounds reasonable to us—judging from our first meeting. Think can convince him that our alphabet of 26 letters would save them a lot of money over there in Japan. Has our slang down fine already. Does not believe for one thing in "standing too long on one leg." This is a new one on yours truly.

A grower has a fundamental right to market his product in such a way as appears to him best. He may sell wholesale or retail or consign to an agent. The commission man is the growers' agent, and all the rights and privileges of the grower accrue to him. If a grower makes a contract with a retailer, or anybody else, and fails to live up to the contract, the retailers' recourse is obvious. But it is certainly futile to write a letter to the Ledger about it. It is certainly high time for the retailers to stop trying to make the grower a doormat for all their troubles. That is—some retailers.

We learn that Robert Kift finds fault with us for spelling our name in full in that New York show story. That long-hand signature was only to show our appreciation of the importance of the subject. Our usual way is George C. Watson which is a real "parting in the middle." Spelling it in full is not. Also, we wish to call attention to Robert. He can't part his in the middle because he hasn't any middle. Bald-headed men without any middle should be careful how they meddle with folks who can part it any old way! If we were in a dudish mood we could even part it on the side like this:

G. COOPER WATSON.

Robert, you are barking up the wrong tree. There are lots of more important things to occupy your time and ability than

GEORGE COOPER WATSON.

CHICAGO.

Frank Oechslein was practically sold out of plants ten days before Easter.

Miss Miriam Hancock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Hancock, won a gold watch in a recent newspaper contest.

Mr. and Mrs. C. W. McKellar are back from an early vacation which they took to the exposition at San Francisco.

Chas. Samuelson has returned from a trip to the northwest and comes back satisfied with the apple outlook there.

Frank Potocki is no longer with the Frank Floral Co., that firm having changed to the Miller & Musser Co., Wabash avenue and Lake street.

The Amling Co. and the A. L. Randall Co. are now occupying their new homes in the Le Moyne block which is one of the finest in the loop. Both florists have carbonic gas cooling systems, operated by Kroeschell ice machines, and the elimination of the services of the ice men means much toward the keeping of the store clean. Any temperature can be secured. The machine of the Amling Co. is in the basement and the gas is carried up into cooling tanks containing brine, through which the gas is carried by means of coils.

Each year sees one or more of the State street department stores enter the field for plants and cut flowers. A trip to these places would be a revelation in prices and often in quality, both being often low, but not always so. Easter week, the lowest prices quoted on lily plants with two or three blooms, was 15c. per plant. The plants were mostly short, but the blossoms fairly good and thousands were sold. No florist could compete with these prices, for they could not handle the quantity of stock to secure them at a low enough figure. Very good hyacinth plants were offered at one department store for ten cents each. It would make interesting reading could the number of dollars be given that are now turned to these stores that once went to the retail florists. In the seed and nursery departments of these stores, where clerks are unfamiliar with the character of bulbs which they sell, illustrations from seed catalogues are used to supply the needed information.

WASHINGTON.

The monthly meeting of the Florists' Club of Washington, D. C., scheduled for April 6, has been postponed one week because of the nearness of that date to Easter Sunday. President Cooke states that there will be a number of interesting features which will probably be ready for Tuesday evening, April 13.

It is reported that the police are becoming very active with respect to moving along the street men who peddle flowers. The competition offered by these itinerant merchants has long been a source of complaint on the part of the storekeepers, and it is said that on Saturday last what was almost a general raid took place and a number of the vendors were haled before the Police Court.

Gude Bros. have installed a very novel display in a window on Ninth street, by which the Florists' Telegraph Delivery is given a big boost. Telegraph poles, wires and tables equipped with sending and receiving instruments supposedly operated by dolls, shipping tags and labels bearing the names of florists in every state of the Union, illustrate the widespread use of the service. The background is made up of plants and cut flowers and show cards tell the meaning of the display. Gude Bros. have secured two stores on Twelfth and Thirteenth streets for Easter overflow.

PITTSBURGH.

A. L. Griffith, secretary and treasurer of the Ray J. Daschbach Co. is confined to his home with an attack of la grippe.

Supt. William Allen of Homewood Cemetery is beginning to convalesce from an accident of three weeks ago. Just as he was leaving his house Mr. Allen slipped on an icy step, fracturing his right ankle in two places.

The Joseph Horne Company, which has a floral department in the basement from the middle of March until the first of June under the supervision of F. C. Campen, will have a special sale of dormant stock next week.

Handsome plant baskets are a feature of Mrs. Williams' Easter window. There are Tausendschoen roses, baskets of lilacs, and azaleas caught with wide ribbons in the Dresden shades and, as an artistic onlooker remarked, "There is not a discordant note."

Mrs. Harry Darlington, who has just returned from Palm Beach, is following her semi-annual custom of remembering the many little patients in the wards of the Allegheny General Hospital. Each is the recipient of a little potted azalea, which shelters a downy chick, from Mrs. E. A. Williams' greenhouses at Knoxville.

With the exception of carnations, there has been a sufficiency of stock during the week. The wholesale moguls attribute the scarcity of carnations to the unusual bloom early in the season, continuing until the end of February. Owing to the extreme cold, unusual care in packing has been necessary for so late in the season.

With the wooded heights of Squirrel Hill on one side, and the beautiful Homewood Cemetery on another, C. Philipps of Forbes and Dallas avenue, undoubtedly has the most picturesque situation of any florist hereabouts. Although only two months in business, having the only flower shop in this residence section, his future seems assured. Mr. Philipps has the advantage of exceptional cosmopolitan experience, here and in Europe. He has been about eight years in Pittsburgh, serving as landscape gardener for H. J. Heinz and Mrs. Sarah B. Cochran. In connection with his shop Philipps has a landscape department.

Another interesting German landscape gardener is Ernest Guter Guter, who since coming from St. Louis thirteen years ago, has been with Richard Beatty Mellon. Although, figuratively speaking, a landscape architect "pressed the button," Mr. Mellon and Mr. Guter are, together, largely responsible for the splendid ten-acre estate, which is by far the most pretentious in the city limits. In keeping the greenhouse range, Italian garden, cold frames and house conservatory in the quintessence of order, Mr. Guter employs a force of from six to eight men.

Owing to a premature notice, which appeared last Saturday. Supt. James Moore of North Side Parks had the first of his Easter visitors—and many of them, big and little—on Palm Sunday. Their objective point was what was intended as the "Kindergarten department," otherwise the aquatic house temporarily converted into a "Country Gentlemen's Place," for the especial benefit of Mr. Moore's many little friends and admirers. Nothing is lacking even to the various rabbits and farm yard fowls. Their caretaker is a diminutive man in overalls with a lawn mower in whom, however, vital breath is lacking. The French hydrangea and Dutch bulb displays are exceptionally fine.

Traendly & Schenck will move to a new location on Sixth avenue, near W. 26th street.

Bedford, Mass.—Only the prompt work of the local fire department prevented a serious fire at the New England Nurseries at Shady Hill in the west part of this town, last Saturday afternoon, when a large pile of moss used in packing caught fire outside the packing house, and set fire to the packing shed. A high wind spread the blaze, which was threatening the entire huge nursery plant when the firemen arrived. The damage to material and the building will not exceed $500. The officials at the nurseries believe the fire was set by a spark from a train, although the fire authorities are of the belief that it was caused from a cigarette carelessly thrown down by a workman.

A forest blaze in the south part of the town burned over nearly half a dozen acres of woodland, owned by Charles W. Jenks. The fire was set by a spark from a passing locomotive.

The editor of one of our esteemed contemporaries recently received from a subscriber a postal card reading as follows:

"Please send me a few copies of your paper containing the obituary notice of my aunt. Also publish the clipping about the marriage of my niece who lives in Texas. When I was in your town last week I called at your office and chatted with you over an hour and yet you made no mention of it in your paper the week following. Why was this? Also, I wish you would mention in your columns (provided it doesn't cost anything) that I have two bull-calves for sale. I might add in conclusion that as my subscription has expired you may please stop my paper. Times are too bad to waste money on newspapers."

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON The wholesale cut flower market is still in uncertain condition as we go to press. The advance orders that four or five years ago were wont to presage brisk business are not forthcoming and retailers are holding off on flower purchases. They are stocking up heavily in plants of all kinds, although Easter lilies prevail. Splendid specimens of bougainvilleas and acacias are to be seen in the big stores. Although at present the volume of sales in cut flowers is far from satisfactory, nevertheless there is a slight advance in the prices of many items of stock. Prices of violets have doubled. Beauty roses are in medium supply but are not in special demand. The supply of tea roses of nearly all varieties is large, top grade blooms selling for only fair prices. Carnations are of excellent quality, the regular demand a trifle larger than last week. Cattleya Schroederiae is abundant and selling well. There are a few C. Mossiae. Longiflorum lilies flooded the stalls this week and were bought in large quantities. Potted lilies are in great demand, most of the growers having been sold out since the middle of last week. There is the usual large line of miscellaneous offerings such as callas, mignonette, pansies, antirrhinums, wall flowers, daisies, jonquils, etc. These are selling fairly well, but not at top-notch figures. Sweet peas are of good quality, Spencers being called for mostly.

For the past two weeks BUFFALO business has been rather uneven, some good days and some bad ones. There has been one item on the very scarce side, though at times there existed a shortage on carnations. Roses have been in moderate supply, also Beauties, lilies and callas. Peas of the orchid type have had good sales, also the ordinary have cleaned up pretty well. At this writing, March 29, we are having a heavy snow storm, in fact the mercury got down to 16 above zero.

Trade has been dull the CHICAGO past week. This is so often the case before a holiday only that which is absolutely necessary being bought. The latter part of the week saw a little gain as Palm Sunday drew near, that day meaning a demand for white and light pink flowers, mostly carnations, of which there were none too many. Monday and Tuesday of Easter week have seen the market fairly cleaned of carnations, American Beauties and medium roses. Extra fine stock is not sought for as a rule. Lilies are in evidence everywhere but the feeling prevails that a fair price will be maintained and that few will remain unsold after Easter. There is a good crop of roses. Sunburst is at its best and the stock is extra. Russell keeps on leading the rose market. Whether in medium or long stems this favorite is constantly gaining friends. Its form, color and keeping qualities seem to be all that can be desired. Other roses are in good supply. Bulbous stock is abundant. Lily of the valley, sweet peas, stock, snapdragon, forget-me-not and many other flowers give good variety. There is plenty of smilax, asparagus, etc.

The outlook is that NEW YORK there will be a tremendous business done at Easter this year. There will be no scarcity of anything, with the possible exception of orchids, which, on account of the very limited supply at present have made a sharp jump in market prices. Quality of stock is superb in all lines. But at this writing we can only talk in future tense while our readers will have no interest in futures by the time they find opportunity to peruse it so we may as well drop the subject here and wait until next week, when we can give the Easter story in its reality. So we close with best wishes that the Easter business of 1915 may overtop the most sanguine hopes of growers, wholesalers, retailers and all others who are interested in the outcome of the big spring floral event.

There is nothing PHILADELPHIA much new to report. Business continues on a fairly even keel. Rather more good stock in all lines than can be used to advantage. Carnations, if anything, are an exception to this. These are selling up pretty well and few good ones are left over. But roses are plentiful indeed and prices distinctly in the buyers' favor. American Beauty, Richmond, Russell, Killarney and all the staples show up in excellent form. The double pink Killarney is the only one that can be called a little off as to color. Snapdragon is very fine, the usual spring showing both as to quality and quantity being very much in evidence. In sweet peas, gardenias, violets, lily of the valley, orchids, there are abundant supplies at very moderate prices. Advance orders for Easter show up well as compared with last year at this time, and the trade seems to have a very hopeful feeling as to the outlook. In the Easter plant end, the growers report a good demand, and from all accounts there promises to be very little surplus of good stock. It looks to us as if lilies were rather redundant, but you never can tell. The quality certainly shows up very good this year all along the line. Much better than last year on the average.

SAN FRANCISCO

There is little change in local market conditions since last week. Some varieties of flowers suffered to a certain extent from the sudden change from cool to hot weather and back again, but nothing was affected very seriously. Violets were probably the hardest hit, but the season was nearing a close anyway and the supply for shipment had already become rather scarce. The new offerings of gardenias are a little smaller as a result of the three days' high temperature and the quality of some other lines will no doubt show some effect later on. Final preparations for Easter are demanding principal attention at present, and there is every reason to expect ample supplies and fairly heavy business. Lilies are plentiful and the season is opening well. The leading retail stores are displaying fine specimens of lilacs, both white and purple, French hydrangeas, peonies, rambler roses and other seasonables, while the late daffodils, Darwin tulips, freesias, narcissus and other bulbous stock are in fair quantity and of fair quality. Sweet peas are coming in freely with a normal demand, and a little better call is noted for carnations. Lots of fruit blossoms are being used for decorative work.

ST. LOUIS

The past week trade was slow, stock plentiful and prices low. Roses and carnations, violets and sweet peas are in abundance and will be this week. Easter lilies and callas are enough to go around for all demands, as is also all other bulb stock, and Easter prices are going to be low.

WASHINGTON

Potted plants of many kinds are being shipped into this market in exceptionally large quantities, for not in recent years has stock been so plentiful. Single violets which are the best sellers in this locality, are a shortage and dealers have had to rely upon the New York doubles. Sweet peas are over-plentiful and selling low. Cut Easter lilies have been moving well at $12.50, and it is expected that this price will prevail for worth-while stock. Killarney roses are not moving very well. Snapdragon, with enormous stems, are in fine favor. The white and pink Pearl rhododendrons offered for Easter are said to be the finest seen here in years, and one firm has sent in three hundred in full bloom. Orchids are quite scarce but there will be enough to meet a limited demand.

Obituary

Henry Murphy.

Henry Murphy, a well known Brooklyn florist, died March 24th, at his home, 511 53d street. He is survived by his wife and three daughters.

Andrew J. Freeman.

Andrew J. Freeman of Malden, Mass., for the past eleven years secretary of the Board of Park Commissioners, died suddenly, Tuesday evening, of heart disease, while on his way home from a meeting of the board. Mr. Freeman was 70 years of age and was one of the best known men in the city, having held many public offices. Funeral was Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock from his late residence, 110 Laurel street.

Andrew Hawkins.

Andrew Hawkins, aged 89, horticulturist of international repute and resident of Niagara Falls, Ont., Canada, died Monday night, March 29, at his home, Niagara Falls, following a brief illness. People from all sections of Canada frequently came to Niagara Falls to see the flowers around the Hawkins homestead. Up to six months ago Hawkins was hale and hearty. He leaves five sons. Interment was Thursday, April 1, in Niagara Falls, Ont.

Mrs. H. G. Berning.

Mrs. Henry G. Berning, wife of the well-known wholesale florist, died on Sunday, March 28th, after a long illness of three years at her home, 4211 Westminster Place. Mrs. Berning was a member of the Ladies' Home Circle, also of the Ladies' S. A. F. She was born in Germany and is survived by her husband, brother, Otto Bruenig, and her sister, Emma Bruenig. Sympathy was expressed by their many friends in the trade. The funeral which took place March 30th at New St. Mark's Cemetery, was private.

George R. Frow.

George R. Frow, who was in business with his father Richard Frow, at Natural Bridge Road and Wabash in Normandy, died on Friday, March 26, after a short illness, at the age of 35 years. Mr. Frow was brought up in the business from boyhood and was a member of the St. Louis Florist Club.

He leaves a wife, mother, father, sister and brother to mourn his loss. The funeral took place March 29th from his late residence to St. Peter's Cemetery. Many beautiful floral pieces were sent by friends in the trade and the St. Louis Florist Club, many members of which attended the funeral.

Charles W. Yost.

C. W. Yost died on Wednesday morning, March 24, at the home of his daughter in Wakefield, R. I. in the 78th year of his age. He had been in failing health for several months. Mr. Yost was a native of Germany and came to this country when a young man. For many years he was employed as gardener on the Coates estate at Narragansett Pier. In 1884, he became gardener for George V. Cresson and had charge of his "Stone Lea" grounds, on the "Rocks" until after Mr. Cresson's death. About three years ago Mr. Yost came to live with his daughter in Peace Dale and within a year moved to the house in Wakefield where he died. He was a great lover of flowers and had been the judge at the annual chrysanthemum show in Peace Dale almost every year. The many friends of "Charlie" will miss him. He was a man of pleasant ways and well liked.

NITROGEN TRAPS FOR THE FARM.

Robert L. Brady, Professor of Geology, University of Southern California.

Nitrates are expensive and a cry goes up from the gardens of the Atlantic to the orchards of the Pacific for more nitrates—cheaper nitrates, if possible, but cheap or not, we must have them.

Our Government has men out searching the deserts of the West for possible supplies, and manufacturers of fertilizers are racking their brains for means of obtaining cheaper supplies.

It is a matter of national importance, for well tilled productive farms make for prosperity and a decrease in the productiveness of the soil is inevitably followed by a corresponding ebb in the tide of prosperity.

It is time that everyone realized the fact that there are millions of tons of nitrogen resting on every acre of land, and that it can be trapped and used. All that is necessary is to use some explosives to open up the soil so that the air can penetrate it deeply, and then set out a few million little traps attached to some plant roots and trap all the nitrogen you want into the soil.

Nitrogen.

This element is a colorless, odorless, tasteless, inert gas that refuses to join with anything else under ordinary conditions, and is seemingly neither harmful nor beneficial; yet it is really the Proteus of the elements, the harlequin of the laboratory. In one form it may be neutral, in another a helpful friend, or it may be a powerful, dangerous enemy. Breathed in as part of the air it is not noticed. Inhaled in ammonia its pungency is appreciated. Used as nitric acid its vigor is realized. Fired as nitroglycerine its disruptive qualities are respected. Its use in medicine fills a large space in the indexes. It is useful in all the arts and sciences, but in none is it of greater value to mankind than in agriculture, for in some form or other it is an essential constituent of animals and plants, animals getting their supply from plants.

The atmosphere consists essentially of a mixture—not a combination—of oxygen and nitrogen in the proportion of 79 volumes of nitrogen to 21 volumes of oxygen, or by weight, of 77 per cent. of nitrogen to 23 per cent. of oxygen. In the air it is inert, neither burning nor supporting combustion, but serving the useful purpose of diluting the oxygen.

An Inexhaustible Supply.

The atmosphere gives us a great reservoir to draw from, an inexhaustible supply, for all that is drawn from it, in time, returns to it in the cycles of plant and animal life. It has been estimated that if the population of the earth was 1000 million it would take 3800 years for their respiration to use up 1 per cent. of the oxygen of the air if none was returned to the air in the meantime; and there is about four times as much nitrogen to draw from as there is oxygen. This nitrogen in the air is pressing down upon the soil demanding entrance, the atmospheric pressure being nearly 15 pounds to the square inch, or more than a ton to the square foot.

Ordinary sources of nitrogen are found in nitrate of soda, Chile salt-peter—which contains 15 to 16 per cent.; dried blood containing 12 to 14 per cent.; sulphate of ammonia 20; and cotton-seed meal 7 per cent. of nitrogen. Some of the other sources are hoof meal, dry ground fish, guano, meat meal, linseed meal and castor pomace. It is also obtained commercially from the air. Stable manure contains ordinarily only about one-half of 1 per cent.; while legumes inoculated with the nitrogen-producing bacteria yield 8 per cent. or more.

The use of chemicals is not an unmixed blessing, for there are certain objectionable features that must not be overlooked. Nitrate of soda leaches out rapidly and cannot be applied very long before the date when the plants need it most, and its application at such a time may be difficult, expensive and at least very inconvenient. It at best only a temporary expedient and does not add nitrogen to the soil for succeeding crops. An excess of chemical nitrates may prove injurious, producing an excessive leaf and branch growth at the expense of the fruit. Continued use of the Chile salt-peter, as the plant uses only the nitrogen, may in some soils cause an accumulation of the soda, creating an alkali condition.

Nitrogen Traps.

While most crops exhaust the nitrogen in the soil, it has been known ever since the days of Rheme that the pod-bearing beans, peas, lupines and other legumes actually increase it, leaving supplies of it in the soil ready for the next crop. Now it is known that the nodules or wart-like growths on the roots of the legumes are nitrogen traps. They are the tenement houses inhabited by myriads of certain bacteria that are specialists in chemistry. They devote their lives to taking nitrogen out of the soil atmosphere, out of the air, and of storing it in their nodular laboratories in a form that the host plant can use.

Nitrogen Bacteria.

Bacteria are the smallest living organisms known. Thousands of them could rest comfortably together on the head of a pin, and a single nodule. One tiny nitrogen trap is big enough to contain more inhabitants than there are in one of our largest cities. They occupy the border line between the animal and vegetable kingdom. The names of the individual numbers of the tribes is legion. Many are useful some are neutral or harmless, and some are belligerent and dangerous. They multiply by cell division with wonderful rapidity and also form resting spores which serve to tide the species over a period of drought, famine or unsuitable temperature, and to preserve alive in a hostile environment enough individuals to provide against extinction. In this stage they may be dormant for years. These nitrogen bacteria go into partnership with the host plant, the legume supplying sugar and the salts upon which the bacteria live, and the bacteria pay for their board and lodgings by supplying the plants with the nitrogen they need.

Nitrification is one of the most interesting phases of soil life, for when any animal or vegetable matter dies and decomposes there is a seething caldron of chemical changes set in action from which finally emerge simple bodies like carbon dioxide and ammonia. The ammonia is oxidized into nitrites by one form of bacteria, and another form oxidizes these still farther into soluble nitrates, in which form the plants can use it.

The vast importance of these home-made nitrogen traps will be better appreciated if we remember that while nitrogen is absolutely essential, yet it is not a part of the minerals composing the soil, that it is the most expensive to supply in chemical form and is the most difficult to retain in the soil if in the form of soluble chemicals. With these simple traps the growing crop is supplied with all the nitrates it needs and large quantities are left in the decaying roots for following crops.

The different species of nitrogen bacteria are strikingly different in size and shape, and each legume has its own pet bacteria with which it works in heartiest co-operation and grows to best advantage. About thirty varieties are now cultivated and bred. Beans should be inoculated with bean bacteria, alfalfa must have alfalfa bacteria and vetch its own kind.

If the correct bacteria are not already in the soil, it becomes necessary to add them. This may be done in the form of commercial cultures added to the seed or soil, or by adding soil from a field that is known to have them in large amounts, to the soil and harrowing it immediately. Other things being equal, the better the inoculation, the better the crop, the richer the land in nitrates, and the broader the smile of the man who shatters his soil to sufficient depths and sets the traps.

Benefits.

Nitrates are used by the plants in forming a variety of compounds, mostly of the nature of proteids, like the gluten of wheat and legumen of peas. These proteids are the great muscle-building foods of animal life. The use of these nitrogen traps often increases the proteid contents of a crop 25 per cent. The distribution of nitrogen through a plant is shown by an analysis of a peach, the pulp, containing .08 per cent. of nitrogen, the stones .27 per cent., the leaves .9, and the new wood .43 per cent. Nitrogen promotes the growth of leaves and stem, and deepens the color of the leaves; while a lack of this food often shows itself in paleness of leaf, lack of gloss, scanty foliage, and an apparent lack of vigor. Inoculated plants give quicker growth, earlier maturity and an increased food value; enrich the soil for future crops, and call for less labor and expense. Legume roots go deep and bring up potash and phosphorus from the depths below. By inoculating the seed of the soil the baby roots are supplied from the first and do not have to search for nitrogen, while the tops have to wait until the supplies begin to arrive. Legumes not inoculated are great soil robbers, and alfalfa exhausts instead of improving the ground.

Explosives Necessary.

The process is one of oxidation, and air must penetrate the soil and go down deep into the subsoil. The ground must be cracked and the particles loosened or separated, and the subsoil should not be mixed with the top soil. The ground should be well drained, without destroying the capillarity. Only explosives will do this work deep enough so that the roots of the legumes will go down 4, 6 or more feet, leaving nitrogen in the ground, forming humus from the decay

HAMMOND'S THRIP JUICE No. 2

Hammond's Paint & Slug Shot Works, Beacon, N. Y.

Dear Sirs: After trying Thrip Juice No. 2 for two seasons, I can say it is the best article I ever used for thrip on roses or carnations, also for white fly. The latter was the worst pest we had to contend with, but after three applications, about four (4) days apart, we were practically free from it. I find it is advisable to apply in the evening, and with a good, strong force pump, proportion one to forty.

SCOTCH SOOT

Where there is a house that is just full of buds almost ready to show color, nothing will turn better color into the flowers than a little soot, that can be scattered over the benches before watering. The amount applied should not be excessive, as the soot is very strong and may damage some of the foliage somewhat. Apply just enough to blacken the surface of the soil in the benches, and let it go at that. Better a little oftener than too much all at once.

We offer the genuine in original cwt. Sacks, at:
$4.00 per 112 lbs.; $17.50 per 560 lbs.

of the roots, dissolving out phosphorus and potash compounds and rendering them available. In brief this combination of deep plowing with explosives and trapping nitrogen is the quickest, cheapest and most efficient way known for converting the subsoil into soil.

Setting the Traps.

Inoculate the seed or soil according to the best practice. Plant the inoculated legume either alone or together with some other crop and plow under as much of the mature crop as possible. If necessary use 2000 to 4000 pounds of lime, not gypsum, per acre.

Why not trap nitrogen out of the free air, instead of hauling it out of a costly sack? This way requires you to draw on your brain a little, instead of on your pocketbook much.

IF YOU ONLY

KNEW what a good save the METROPOLITAN PATENT-ED is, you would see no other. It is made of cast iron and will not rust. That part of your greenhouse which in other constructions is the weakest becomes the strongest. Not this alone, it is ice-clearing and carries all the water of condensation from the inside, and it is so constructed that almost the entire end of the bar is exposed to the air, thereby preventing decay. Only one screw, about two inches from the end, is all that is necessary to secure the bars. For side stationary glass, wood headers are absolutely unnecessary, thereby causing no shade. Zinc glass stops are not necessary—the glass is made with a lug to prevent the glass from slipping. Let your next house be built with a Metropolitan Patented Iron Wall Construction. You will never regret it. Our price and service are right.

With an eye to enlarging, Mr. Bickley placed his houses in a level location, where a range 5 times the size of the present one can be economically built and operated.

The Milton H. Bickley Range at Chester, Pa.

A MAN of many and varied interests is Mr. Bickley. The policeman I asked, said he "was a druggist." The cab driver said he "owned the largest iron works in the city." The girl in the flower shop on the corner said he "grew flowers for a living." The man on a load of hay said "Milt Bickley is a farmer sure enough, but you will most likely find him at his drug store." And so I did. But he wasn't selling Castoria. He was directing a force of men who were remodeling the store interior, with the idea of making it one of the finest in the State. But what has all this to do with Hitchings greenhouses, you ask. It has everything to do with them; to make it show what a keen business man Mr. Bickley must be, to be so early a success of so many different lines.

Glimper in 'mum house as it was latter part of last November.

As you already have imagined, he is what you would call "a careful buyer." The way he analyzed our construction, in every little detail, you would have thought he had been buying greenhouses all his life, instead of these houses being his very first. His farm is called Bickmore, and so the greenhouses are called Bickmore. There are three of them. One, 308 ft. x 30 ft. Two, 150 ft. x 24 ft. All of them Iron Frame. We did the entire work, including the masonry and the Kewanee water supply. If the kind of house we build; are the kind of price we build it for; are satisfactory to Mr. Bickley, we have a notion it will be satisfactory to you. Beyond all doubt, you can depend on depending on Hitchings. And we go anywhere for business. (Or to talk business.

IF YOU ARE LOOKING FOR HARDY PERENNIALS

"Get them at Dreer's"

We offer here only a few of the most important recent introductions. For a complete list of new varieties as well as all the good old sorts worth planting, see DREER'S GARDEN BOOK and our current WHOLESALE PRICE LIST

THE NEW ANCHUSAS.

The Improved Varieties of Italian Aikenet or Bugloss.

These wonderfully improved Anchusas have proven most valuable additions to our limited list of blue flowering hardy perennials, and particularly so as they flower from May to July, a time when this color is only sparingly represented in the hardy border.

The habit of the plants while strong and vigorous is not at all coarse, they form many branched specimens from 3 to 5 feet high, each branch of which is terminated by a large, graceful pyramidal spike of blue daisies.

Dropmore Variety. Rich gentian-blue.

Opal. A splendid lustrous light blue.

$1.50 per doz.; $10 per 100.

THREE CHOICE ANEMONE JAPONICA.

Alice. Large semi-double, silvery rose suffused with carmine.

Kriemhilde. Nearly four inches in diameter, semi-double rose-pink.

Loreley. Cup-shaped flowers, three inches in diameter, light mauve-pink.

$1.50 per doz.; $12 per 100.

ARTEMESIA LACTIFLORA.

An introduction from China and a most effective flowering plant, growing 3½ to 4 ft. high, with large panicles of Hawthorn-scented, creamy-white Spiræa-like light and graceful flowers during August and September.

$1.50 per doz.; $10 per 100.

ASTILBE ARENDSII.

This new type is of very vigorous growth, producing many-branched feathery heads of flowers, 2½ to 3 feet high.

Ceres. Delicate, light rose with silvery sheen.

Juno. Strong upright plumes of deep violet rose.

Salmon Queen. Beautiful salmon pink.

Venus. Deep violet rose.

Vesta. Light lilac rose.

White Pearl. Dense pyramidal plumes of silvery white.

30 cts. each; $3.00 per doz.

Choicest Mixed Varieties 5¢ above, $2.00 per doz.; $15.00 per 100.

NEW HARDY ASTER NOVI BELGII CLIMAX.

Novi Belgii Climax. One of the most important additions to the Michaelmas Daisies, and we believe the forerunner of a new type. The plant is of strong, vigorous habit of growth, over 5 feet high; fully one-half of this consists of much branched pyramidal shaped flower stems which are filled with lively light lavender-blue flowers fully 1½ inches in diameter. The plant is in flower from the latter part of August to the middle of October. 35 cts. each; $3.50 per doz.; $25.00 per 100.

THREE IMPORTANT DELPHINIUMS.

King of Delphiniums. One of the most distinct yet introduced; the plant is of remarkably strong growth, with flowers of gigantic size, semi-double and of a deep blue color, with large white eye. 35 cts. each; $3.50 per doz.

Moerheimi. This is the first really white hybrid Delphinium introduced, and is a decided acquisition. The plant is of strong, vigorous growth, 5 feet high, the lateral or side shoots 2½ feet high. The flowers are of purest white, without the slightest shading; a free and continuous bloomer from June till frost. 20 cts. each; $2.00 per doz.; $15.00 per 100.

Rev. E. Lascelles (new). One of the finest varieties yet introduced. Plant very strong, grows six feet high. Flowers very double of a deep purple-blue, with clear white centre and of greatest size. $1.00 each.

GYPHOPHILA (Baby's Breath).

Paniculata Flore Plena. This double flowering Gypsophila is one of the most important hardy plants for cutting purposes.

We guarantee our stock, every plant to be the true double form. Seedlings are sometimes offered very cheap, but only a very small percentage come double. Our plants are all either grafted, or grown from cuttings. Strong flowering plants $2.00 per doz.; $15.00 per 100.

NEW HEMEROCALIS QUEEN OF MAY.

A splendid new hybrid, flower stems from 3 to 5 feet high, terminated with from 12 to 18 flowers of largest size of a rich Indian-yellow. The flowers begin to develop in May and continue for nearly two months; perfectly hardy. 25 cts. each; $2.50 per doz.; $18.00 per 100.

NEW GIANT-FLOWERING MARSHMALLOWS (Hibiscus).

A wonderfully improved form of our greatly admired native Marshmallow or Rosemallow, in which not only the colors have been greatly intensified but in which flowers of enormous size, frequently 10 to 12 inches in diameter, have been developed.

These plants can be highly recommended for all kinds of plantings, they appear to be equally at home in all positions, having the same vigor in dry and wet ground and are perfectly hardy, they grow from 5 to 8 feet high and are very floriferous, blooming from early July to late in Autumn. We offer three distinct colors, Red, Pink and White in strong two year old roots. 30 cts. each; $3.00 per doz.; $20.00 per 100.

LUPINUS (Lupine).

Polyphyllus Moerheimi. The most beautiful variety yet introduced; a combination of light and dark shades of pink. $2.50 per doz.; $18.00 per 100.

LYTHRUM ROSEUM PERRY'S VARIETY.

A splendid improvement on the common Loosestrife, with much larger flowers, larger spikes and of glistening cherry-red colors. $2.50 per doz.; $18.00 per 100.

NEW ORIENTAL POPPY "PERRY'S WHITE."

A sterling novelty and the most distinct break that has yet been made in Oriental Poppies, it being a pure satiny-white with a bold crimson blotch at the base of each petal; this is undoubtedly the most important addition to our list of hardy perennial plants this season. 35 cts. each; $3.50 per doz.; $25.00 per 100.

THREE SPLENDID NEW HARDY PHLOX.

Rheinlander. A beautiful salmon-pink with flowers and trusses of immense size, the color of the flower is intensified by a very decided eye of a deep claret-red. $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.

Riverton Jewel. One of our own introductions which it gives us great pleasure to recommend, a lively shade of mauve-rose illuminated by a carmine-red eye, a splendid improvement on the popular variety Asia. 50 cts. each; $2.50 per doz.; $18.00 per 100.

Thor. A most beautiful and lively shade of deep salmon-pink suffused and overlaid with a scarlet glow and a light almost white halo around its aniline-red eye. This variety will undoubtedly hold the same place among deep salmon colors that Elizabeth Campbell holds among the light salmon-pinks. $2.00 per doz.; $15.00 per 100.

PERRY'S WHITE ORIENTAL POPPY.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Dege.

Care of Ferns

Shading should now be increased but not too heavy—just enough to prevent burning or taking the coloring out of the foliage. Ferns will not do well where there is not plenty of moisture, so dampen down two or three times a day, and see that they have plenty of air without causing cold drafts. The general run of ferns will do well in about 60 degrees at night with 10 to 15 degrees higher with sun. Ferns that are pot-bound can be materially assisted by moderate doses of liquid manure once a week. Be sure that none of them become dry at the root.

Callas

Callas should now be generously fed, not only with liquid manure, but good top-dressings of a rich mulch on all those grown in benches. By this time the working roots will have used up the best part of the available food from the soil so an occasional top-dressing worked over the surface lightly will greatly benefit. Keep the temperature up to at least 60 degrees at night. Give plenty of water at the roots and keep up a vigorous syringing every day to keep the plants clean of thrips and red spider. Callas will want to be fumigated once a week from this out as flies and thrips increase very fast at this time of the year. The one thing to be borne in mind is to ventilate on all possible occasions.

Bedding Plants

Propagation of bedding stock by cuttings and seed should have attention. Geraniums that were shifted into 4-inch pots three or four weeks ago will be much in need of spacing. Seedling annuals, particularly asters, will need to be transplanted into other flats, one inch apart and when doing this do not forget to insert the little plants down to the seed leaf in the new soil. The cannas which were started in flats are now five or six inches high. They must be lifted and potted at once. A 4-inch pot is large enough to make a good bedding plant. The big Caladium esculentum started in flats three weeks ago is already wanting a 5-inch pot.

Next week—Care of Chrysanthemums; Ericas; Nephrolepis; Ramblers for Next Easter; Propagating Stock in Frames

Orchids

Move cattleyas in flower into a cool, airy and well-shaded house. In order to keep down the temperature, rolling lath blinds are preferable to whitewash on the glass. Give Oncidium Rogersii plenty of air at all times during the summer months and wet down the benches, paths and walks three or four times daily during very hot and dry days. These orchids from now on should have sufficient shade to help keep down the temperature, but without excluding the indirect sun. All Brazilian orchids will enjoy plenty of diffused sunlight. In applying shade for the Miltonias care should be taken not to overdo it. For this month it should be only enough to produce a light clouded streak over the glass.

Adiantums

Large plants can be divided, but these divided portions do not give as satisfactory returns as younger plants potted on. While the adiantums take kindly to soil containing considerable leaf-mold and this is particularly good for young stock, larger plants want something heavier, and good pasture loam with some thoroughly decomposed manure added, and a good dash of sand will grow excellent plants. Where pot adiantums have been resting for a few weeks they can now be overhauled and where necessary, repotted. Large sized plants will carry for several years in the same pots if occasionally fed with liquid manure, but smaller sizes are liable to become starved if not shifted, and furthermore there is more or less danger of their drying out and losing much of their foliage. One severe drying off is generally sufficient to ruin the appearance of any adiantums and this is most liable to occur with the smaller plants. Be careful in watering for a few weeks and keep them in a rather close and humid atmosphere and they will soon start off anew.

Ripening Freesia Bulbs

When freesia bulbs are through flowering keep giving them water for a while, but withholding gradually. When the tops have died down, they can be shaken out and stored away until the season comes for planting again.

A wicked storm

The weather man has handed out some pretty harsh treatment to the flower people occasionally in the past, but Easter Saturday's experience in the Atlantic Coast section in the year 1915 will long be remembered as one of the most vicious flings on record. Preceded and succeeded by ideal days, it could not have been deliberately planned for greater intentional mischief and was on the order of that wicked knock-out blow at Boston last August which so completely blasted the anticipations of hosts and guests for the crowning day of the

S. A. F. Convention. It is in order to mention also, as in the case of the great convention disappointment, the admirable manner in which those most affected took their punishment and the general absence of complaint or bemoaning on the part of those upon whom the resultant financial loss must have fallen with crushing weight. All departments of the trade and allied interests are more or less concerned in the aftermath of reduced resources, and the possible curtailment of enterprise for the coming season which can hardly be avoided. The recuperative power and stability of commercial horticulture in the face of untoward circumstances and conditions has been repeatedly and impressively demonstrated heretofore, however, and we have no doubt that the present set-back, regrettable as it is, will show no exception to the excellent record of plucky recovery.

The growing disposition of the retail florist trade to imitate other lines of business in the use of the advertising columns of the local newspapers for the purpose of increasing their trade, appears to meet with a generous and most gratifying response and recognition in the reading columns of these publications. Never before have horticultural and floral matters been given the space and prominence publicly accorded them this season, and never before has the material thus spread before the public been freer from exaggeration and misleading information. Newspapers, as a rule, are disposed to liberality in excess of any apparent compensating return to themselves to a much greater degree than we find in other industries, but there must necessarily be a limit to this sort of generosity. The ceaseless demand for "something for nothing" is the Nemesis forever following the newspaper man, imposing upon his altruistic temper of mind and rudely jostling his sense of fairness. Now that the flower trade is inclined to meet the newspaper man half-way he will find that gentleman overjoyed and ready to devote his best abilities to a proper presentation of the most attractive side of the florists' avocation.

The pen and the hoe

It is in the power of the newspapers and magazines to do inestimable service for this country by calling the attention of the people to the possibilities of intensive cultivation of the land in small patches for garden crops. Conditions abroad at the present time furnish a salutary object lesson in this respect and it is well to use all available means to keep the facts constantly before the people and to impress upon them a fuller realization of the health and wealth that would accrue from more rational habits of living than at present prevail. There is a wholesome truth in the New York Journal's remark that "War-stricken Europe would today be starving were it not for the wonderful knowledge of gardening possessed by its people who can make a few acres yield enough to keep a family in food for a year." It is an encouraging sign that the newspapers are disposed to give so much space and attention to this sort of reading matter. They should have all possible help from the seed trade especially, and should never be permitted to run short of useful material such as the intelligent seedsman and plant grower are able to supply but which they apparently seldom think of extending beyond the pages of their own catalogues.

BRITISH HORTICULTURE.

Spring Flower Show.

The interior of the Royal Horticultural Hall, in London, was gay with the blooms of forced bulbs, on Tuesday, March 16th. Several of the firms made excellent displays in beds on the ground level. Carter & Sons had an artistic arrangement of beds of snowdrops, bordered by golden crocuses, whilst the level turf sparkled with bright blooms. Sutton & Sons made a brilliant display with 1,000 hyacinths, the rich tints forming a charming color scheme. This was awarded a gold medal. The blooms have since been adding a touch of brightness to two of the principal hospitals where wounded soldiers are under treatment.

A Sweet Pea Selection.

With the multiplicity of sweet peas contained in the seedmen's lists it is not surprising that the ordinary buyer is usually bewildered at this season in making his selection. The National Sweet Pea Society, with a view to simplifying matters, sometime ago recommended the following as the best Spencer varieties for garden decoration: Edith Taylor, Duplex Spencer, Mrs. Cuthbertson, Mrs. H. Sykes, Marchioness Tweedale, Nora Unwin, Nubian, R. F. Felton, Rosabelle, Sunproof Crimson (or Maud Holmes), Thomas Stevenson and Queen of Norway.

Floral Isles.

The French flower season is drawing to a close. There has been considerable interruption and delay in the delivery of the packages from the south of France, consequent on the war. When the fertile gardens of southern France have yielded their lavish array of fragrant blossom the market florists turn their attention to the many aced gardens of the Scilly Isles. These floral isles are situated in the Atlantic, some 25 miles southwest of Cornwall. Here acres of golden daffodils and delicate narcissi form a natural carpet of indescribable charm. Formerly early potatoes proved a profitable crop for the Scillonians, until a former proprietor of the islands sent an experimental basket of the wild narcissi to market, with a result so encouraging that other islanders followed his example. In the season there is now a regular service of boats conveying the floral freights to Penzance, whence the consignments are sent to London and the principal provincial markets. The flower harvest has brought prosperity to a thrifty race who inhabit these verdant isles set in the broad Atlantic.

W. H. ADSELL.

FENCES AND GARDENS.

In the old New England village where the editor was brought up, every house was once separated from the street by a fence or a hedge, and the space between this fence or hedge and the dwelling was often a riot of old fashioned "posies." How well we can recall the mossy brick path which led from the yellow gateway of the Appleton house to the Doric porch one hundred feet away—a path lined on both sides with delphiniums five feet tall. Little Miss Appleton, in black, used always to be coming down or going up this path, snipping with a huge pair of shears, when you peeped through the gate on your way home from school or market. It was a quaint, intimate, pretty revelation, glimpsed through the Appleton gate.

But the Appleton house was merely one of many which peeped over its hedge or fence, and looked down into a quiet garden in the space between. Even very small and humble houses had their fences, their screen of shrubbery, and boasted at least nasturtiums and portulaca along the front path. Nobody had to go out behind his house for privacy. No passer along the streets had to stare at the naked revelation of unguarded and unadorned house-fronts. Each dwelling was decently screened and suggested domestic privacy and garden charm.

We should hardly care to return to that village today. It has been "improved."

From this point, we shall quote from an article in "Art and Progress," written by Martha B. Hutcheson, and sent to us by a subscriber to "Stockbridge."

"But the pendulum of change had to swing . . . and today we find one old garden where formerly there were hundreds. Practically every fence every hedge has disappeared; the flower borders and the plum trees and quinces have gone too and a lawn with a few mis-servants shrubs has taken their places. Woe to the day that the so-called 'village improvement' spirit swept over so many of our New England towns! . . . It spoiled more lovely New England spots than any of us can imagine, and, worst of all, it set a hideous and stupid example of treatment it will take the efforts of decades to undo. It also taught the lack of privacy. . . . 'The new fashion was two fold in it devastation. It robbed the home not only of its garden but of its privacy, and it robbed the highway of its most valuable lines of margin and perspective. . . . If the property line is not marked, and if what should make the final enclosure or frame to the street scheme has been taken away, the whole formality of the margin of the street, from an esthetic view, has been lost.

"Let New England wake up and set an example, taking as her guide all the sense of poetry and beauty that belongs to the tradition of her old time gardens, and apply them to the homes of today. . . . Everyone owning even an eighth of an acre should feel that to beautify it is expected of him. If a man can own a house he surely can afford a hedge between it and the street, some flowers in his dooryard, vines on the porch, and shade trees. . . . Beauty is not always in proportion to elaboration."

Stockbridge did not escape the "improving" which Mrs. Hutcheson complains of so bitterly. Privacy here was ruthlessly swept away, and the door yard gardens disappeared. There isn't one left on the whole length of Main street, and few enough anywhere in town. The loss was great, far greater than any fancied gain. The street looks no better, if as well, and the houses lose in individuality, in charm, in home-like feeling.

But there are distinct signs that we, in common with other communities, are returning slowly to a saner ideal. The tendency now is undoubtedly to erect fences rather than to tear them down (though they are sometimes pretty ugly fences), and to treat at least the front walk as a garden feature. Some day we shall realize that the bare lawn running down to the street line, leaving the house naked and exposed, belongs to the same era of taste as black walnut bureaus with marble tops, and a head of Minerva over the mirror.

—Stockbridge.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

NEW YORK FLORISTS' CLUB.

The next regular meeting of the New York Florists' Club will be held in the Grand Opera House Building, Eighth Avenue and Twenty-third Street, Monday, April 12th, at 7.30 o'clock P. M. This will be Sweet Pea and Orchid Night and exhibits of sweet peas and orchids are invited. The members should make a special effort to see that the display of these flowers excels in quality the display of roses made at the last meeting.

It is expected that a preliminary report regarding the recent Flower Show, showing the receipts and disbursements, will be made at this time. At present the indications are that this report will be very favorable.

Mr. Robert Pyle will be the essayist of the evening. His subject: "Among the Roses at Home and Abroad," illustrated by a superb lot of lantern slides made direct in natural colors by the Lumiere process.

The following letter has been sent to all members:

"A meeting of the Transportation Committee will be held at the office of R. J. Irwin, 108 West 28th Street, at 3.00 P. M., April 12. The object of this meeting is to decide on a route to the S. A. F. & O. H. Convention to be held in San Francisco, August 17 to 19. All members of the New York Florists' Club who contemplate going to the Convention are cordially invited to attend this meeting and express their views as to which route they would prefer.

There will be at the meeting a representative railroad man who will be pleased to answer all questions and explain to us the different routes which may be taken to San Francisco and the time and cost of each. He will be glad to give each member individual attention and lay out their route coming back, as probably the members will return by different routes. It is a long journey from New York to San Francisco and we want to secure all the comforts we can to help make the journey a pleasant one. By all going together, these comforts can be secured and individuals receive better attention. A special train with special attendants is a possibility.

The Committee desires all who can, to attend the meeting in person. If you cannot come, send in your preference as to route, and how many of you and your family or friends are going. Come to the meeting if possible. If not, write a letter to Roman J. Irwin, 108 West 28th Street, New York City.

The photographs an description of the Panama Exhibition so far published, has established the fact that it is far ahead of anything of its kind the world has ever seen. Those who have already seen it are most enthusiastic over it and say that the photos but feebly express the beauty and charm of the Exhibition. The Florists of the West are planning to give the Florists of the East a Royal Welcome. Don't fail to attend the meeting or express your preference as to route.

Yours very truly,
Thos. B. de Forest, Chairman
Transportation Committee."

FLORISTS' CLUB OF PHILADELPHIA.

The regular monthly meeting was held on the 6th inst. It was a very dull and uninteresting function and consisted mostly of routine matters. The only little bit of ginger in it was when the commodore got up and wanted to know about this flower show the S. A. F. is to hold in Philadelphia in 1916. John is an ardent lover of this old burg and hates the idea of its (the burg) being given a black eye. His feeling now, seems to be well expressed in one of W. S. Gilberts' gems:

Oh, it be watted away,
That old black Auldland of sorrow
With the dust of an earthly today
Is the earth of a dusty tomorrow."

Among the new members elected it gives us pleasure to record the name of Stuart H. Miller, our latest and most hustling recruit to the ranks of the commission men.

NORTH SHORE HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The North Shore Horticultural Society held its regular semi-monthly meeting April 2nd at Manchester, Mass. R. H. Wilkins of the Essex Co. Agricultural School gave a very instructive lecture on poultry, speaking chiefly on breeding for egg production. The sum of fifty dollars was appropriated to be given as prizes to the school children among the North Shore for the best exhibits of vegetables and flowers at the annual exhibition. The show committee awarded a bronze medal to Alfred E. Parsons for seedling schizanthus, a vote of thanks to P. Maillard for radishes and to Ernest Townsend for gardenias and Darwin tulips. At the next meeting, April 16th, S. J. Connolly will lecture on the Panama Canal.

AMERICAN GLADIOLUS SOCIETY.

The Nomenclature Committee of the American Gladiolus Society has approved the application of John H. Umpleby, Lake View, N. Y., to register Gladiolus Mrs. A. C. Beal.

Mrs. A. C. Beal (Umpleby's 385). Color rosy white, blotched Lincoln red, and with the median line shading to old carmine red. A fine color and an attractive blotch. The buds are quite salmony when they first open. Stamen filaments pinkish. Anthers light lavender. The flowers are well arranged. Bloom large, tube curved medium slender, medium long. Segments unequal, connivent, the upper horizontal and broad, the lower reflexed and narrower. Season early. Spike tall, erect often curved; two or three to a corn, and producing a good number of flowers. Growth vigorous, well furnished with medium broad leaves. Corms large. Originated by John H. Umpleby, Lake View, N. Y.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

The Cincinnati Florist Society's regular meeting will be held on Monday evening, April 12.

A public meeting of the Society for the Protection of Native Plants will be held on Saturday, April 17, at 10.30 A. M., in the Lecture Room of the Boston Society of Natural History, 234 Berkeley Street. Prof. Merritt L. Fernald of Harvard University will speak on "Some Reasons Why Our Indigenous Plants Need Protection." Officers for the ensuing year will be elected, and other business transacted.

The April meeting of the Lewiston and Auburn (Me.) Gardeners' Union was held at the rooms of the Lewiston Chamber of Commerce April 2, with a large attendance. The greater part of the time was taken up in a discussion of the plans for the spring flower exhibition, the fall exhibition, children's gardens and publicity. The next meeting will be held at the Auburn municipal court room, Friday, May 7.

A meeting of the New Bedford, Mass., Horticultural Society was held in the Public Library building on the evening of April 5. President Roy being absent, F. C. Barrows presided. The entertainment committee reported that all arrangements had been made for the annual banquet to be given April 8. The flowers for the occasion are to be furnished by James Garthley and Post & Gray. The schedule committee reported having arranged for four shows. For these a few changes have been made in favor of amateurs. There are to be cups, cash prizes and stock.

PITTSBURGH EASTER SHOWS.

The twentieth Easter display of the Phipps Conservatory, Schenley Park, is one of surpassing loveliness, which, throughout the week has been as a shrine for worshippers of the beautiful. While all the exhibits were exceptionally fine, the exquisitely massed lilies, roses, orchids and French hydrangeas were perhaps the more appealing from the artistic point of view. In the House of Lilies one could almost have imagined oneself in the beautiful graveyard of Maeterlinck's "Blue Bird," where the gravestones are transformed into lilies, and little Tytltyl reverently utters, "There are no dead." However, to the masses of visitors, the special attractions were the miniature and Holland gardens. In the former bloomed the old-fashioned columbine, Star of Bethlehem, Crown Imperial, Glory of the Snow and other favorites of long ago, surrounding a typical gentleman's country place, complete even to a tiny pond in which sported a young "September Morn." In the Holland garden, which fronted a Dutch thatched cottage on which saucily perched the traditional stork, was a gorgeous showing of tulips. To view this Easter display, "free to the public," one is almost convinced of a Gospel of Nature and Art with Superintendent George W. Burke, of the Bureau of Parks, and Foreman John W. Jones, of the Phipps Conservatory, as missionaries.

The crowds of visitors to the North Side Park Conservatory which (as described last week), prematurely commenced on Palm Sunday, continued throughout the week, viewing the fine display supervised by Superintendent James Moore.

The H. J. Heinz conservatory at "Greenlawn" was another center of attraction in the East End. For this occasion, the show house proper, which was completed only last year, was converted into a sunken garden effect, with an electric fountain playing in the center and a rockery at one end. In addition to quantities of Holland bulbs, orchids, sweet peas, genistas and other hothouse flowers, A. A. Leach, the young supervisor, has potted cherries, apples, pears and plums in flower.

PRIMULA OBCONICA.

No species of plants has shown more rapid and substantial improvement in so brief a period than has Primula obconica. The form and size of flower and truss have been developed up from the little pale lavender flower of a few years ago until now we have in P. obconica a worthy rival for the advanced strains of P. sinensis. The intercrossing with P. sinensis and other species has probably greatly reduced the reputed poisonous character of the foliage of P. obconica as we hear very little about it in that way of late. The neat style of growth of the improved form is well shown in our cover illustration, the photograph for which was kindly loaned by R. & J. Farquhar & Co.

THE CONTROL OF THE SAN JOSE SCALE.

Weapons the Orchardist May Use Against This Destructive Pest.

Detailed instructions for the use of various spray in controlling the San Jose scale are given in a new publication of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Farmers' Bulletin 650, "The San Jose Scale and Its Control." In the absence of proper treatment, this widespread pest will bring about the death of most fruit trees and of many ornamental and shade trees. Its discovery, therefore, should be followed by prompt measures of control, whether it be found in commercial orchards or in private grounds. Private individuals, however, will scarcely feel disposed to equip with such expensive apparatus as orchardists may find profitable. The bulletin, therefore, describes washes and spraying apparatus suitable for varying conditions.

Where only a few plants are infested, it is probably better for the owner to use some of the prepared washes. In fact many commercial orchardists prefer to use these in preference to making them at home. These consist of compounds of sulphur in a highly concentrated condition, or powders, to which it is only necessary to add a sufficient quantity of water. The powders which have but recently appeared on the market are much more convenient to handle and store than the commercial lime-sulphur concentrates. The latter, however, are still largely used by orchardists who do not care to incur the expense of constructing the cooking plant to make their own lime-sulphur washes.

Prepared in one way or another, some form of lime-sulphur wash is the most common agent for controlling this scale. A formula much in use some years ago was:

Stone Lime..... 20 pounds
Sulphur (Flour or Flowers)..... 15 pounds
Water to make..... 50 gallons

In preparing this wash, about 1-3 of the total quantity of water required is heated in a cooking barrel or vessel; the lime then added, and the sulphur immediately afterwards. The sulphur should previously, however, have been made into a thick paste with water. After the lime has slaked, about another third of the water should be added and the cooking continued for an hour, when the rest of the water is put in. During the time of cooking, stirring is necessary if the wash is cooked in kettles. It must also be strained as it is run into the spray tank.

Comparatively few fruit growers now employ this method, because this wash must be applied immediately after it is cooked—otherwise there is crystallization of the sulphur and hardening of the sediment upon cooling.

The cooking is also inconvenient. It is for these reasons that manufacturers put on the market concentrated solutions of lime-sulphur already mentioned, and which, when used at proper strength, are quite as satisfactory as the old time formula. When lime sulphur concentrates are made at home, the so-called 50-100-50 formula is frequently used. This is composed of 50 pounds of lime, 100 pounds of sulphur, and water to make 50 gallons, the respective ingredients being boiled together for from 50 minutes to an hour, while the mixture is vigorously stirred either by hand or by a mechanical agitator. As soon as the cooking is over, the solution should be drawn off and run through a 30-mesh strainer into barrels, the agitation being continued all this time in order to effect an equal distribution of the sludge. When properly stirred this solution can be kept for a year or more before being used. Such concentrates vary considerably in strength, and it is important that they be tested with a hydrometer. The new bulletin contains a table giving the quantities of lime-sulphur concentrates of various strengths necessary to make 50 gallons of the spray solution. The number ranges from 1¼ gallons for a summer application with a strong concentrate, to 11½ gallons for a winter application with a weaker one.

In controlling the scale, it is always advisable to spray the trees while in a dormant condition, for at this time the wash may be used much stronger than would be safe to use on foliage. Spraying may be done in the fall, in mild climates during the winter, or preferably in early spring before the buds push out. For small plants, low trees, ornamental hedges, etc., a bucket pump or a knapsack pump will provide all the apparatus necessary. For orchards of some size, as 5 to 10 acres, a barrel or hand power pump will prove more satisfactory, and for large commercial orchards gasoline outfits are usually employed.

In addition to the lime-sulphur washes, kerosene and crude petroleum, either pure or in emulsions, are used. The Department does not recommend, however, the use of these oils in a pure condition, and while there is no question as to their efficacy in destroying the insects, their employment is likely to cause serious injury to the trees. Kerosene and crude petroleum may be readily emulsified in soap and the oil thus used at any desired strength. The so-called "Miscible oils," however, which are commercial preparations, are now largely used by those requiring oil sprays in preference to the home-made emulsions. Treatment with these oils is particularly desirable when the infestation is very severe and experience has shown that the scale will not be controlled by lime-sulphur sprays. Soap washes made from fishoil soap are also used to some extent at the rate of two pounds to the gallon of water, and always on trees in a dormant condition.

[In connection with the foregoing information which is supplied by the Department of Agriculture we take occasion to call attention here to the new Indestructible Sprayer advertised now for the first time by George N. Barrie in this paper. At the low price at which it is offered this implement will fill a long-felt want.—Ed.]

PUPILS TO AID SAVING TREES.

The school children of four cities and 18 towns are contesting for four silver cups offered by the Massachusetts State Board of Agriculture to the cities and towns whose children collected before May 1 the largest number of egg clusters of the tent caterpillar. A first and second prize will be awarded in each section and shall become the property of the public schools of the winning towns and cities. The prizes will be awarded on the basis of total number of egg masses collected, each egg mass to be counted as one.

The pupil will report to the teacher the number collected and the teacher will make weekly returns to the superintendent in whose district the town or city lies. The certified count will be forwarded to the secretary of the Board of Agriculture not later than on Tuesday, May 1.

Entries have been received from the following cities and towns:

Over 5000 population—Braintree, Easton, Framingham, Natick, Needham, Revere, Rockland, Springfield, Waltham, Ware, Whitman, Winchendon and Worcester.

Under 5000—Acton, Ayer, Dana, Erving, Hadley, Hubbardston, Hancock, Lanesboro, Lee, Lenox, Medfield, Millis, Medway, Petersham, Stockbridge, Warren, Wendell, Wenham and Milton.

LICENSE TO PEDDLE.

Editor of HORTICULTURE:

Do you know of any law that gives any city in Massachusetts the right to demand a tax or license of $5.00 from anyone selling plants, vegetables and other farm produce, raised by themselves outside of that city in adjoining towns?

If so, I should be pleased to have you state case in paper. The city of Haverhill, Mass., so demands from us a license of $5.00.

I personally called up the City Clerk and told him I would not pay it, and that I would be in his city at 1:30 P. M. with a load of plants and would sell them. I also called up the Mayor of the city and told him. He told me the City Clerk was right and that I would have to pay or not sell. I called this bluff and delivered the goods, and I will continue till they prevent me.

I would like your opinion or any reader of paper.

Yours truly,

CHARLES F. NEWELL.

We should advise the writer of the foregoing communication to peacefully hand over his five dollars. Every city has the right to make its own rules as to the use of its streets for the selling of any sort of goods and to demand such license fee as it sees fit to exact from those seeking to use its streets for such purpose.

CORRECTION.

Although we lay no claims to infallibility, yet we do feel a bit "mussed up" over having permitted a picture of Cypripedium acaule to get by under the name of C. spectabile in our issue of last week. We hardly need to say that we know better, but there is no danger of stones being thrown at our "glass house" by anyone who has ever done proof-reading, for we all get caught sooner or later.

ADDRESS OF PRESIDENT WALLACE R. PIERSON BEFORE THE AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY AT BOSTON.

On the morning of April 10, the annual meeting of our American Rose Society, I made the formal address with much of feeling of satisfaction and regret. It is gratifying to me to think that, in the two years during which I have served as your president, much has been accomplished to carry out the principles which the American Rose Society established as its aim when framing its constitution. It is to be regretted that the work has not been carried nearer to completion, but the foundation has been laid and the advancement of the society is certain.

As a society our aim has been to foster the love of Roses, whether as cut flowers or as blooming plants; to stimulate that love of roses for the specimen, trained and brought to perfection by artificial heat; and to kindle in the heart of its admirers a love for the rose in the garden, whether it be the hybrid tea with its continuity of bloom, or the climbing roses which make beautiful the gardens of our country for a few short weeks.

To reach the people we must go outside the ranks of professional rosarians, and this is what we have attempted to do. We who have labored hard to achieve the desired end are gratified to state that the Syracuse Rose Society, the Newport Garden Club, and the Newport Garden Association are now affiliated with us and we are hoping that similar societies may be added to this list to aid us in the work. Our Bulletin goes to each member of these organizations, and that Bulletin, greatly improved this year, can and must be made of greater assistance to the amateur. Our medals go to these societies to be awarded at their exhibitions. This must be an inspiration to the individuals who compete for them, and the giving of these medals is one of the finest tributes that the American Rose Society can pay to the skill and success of a Rose lover.

The shows of these amateurs are of roses grown out of doors, and they are successful. Do they not show us the way to fulfill the obligations of our constitution? For, gentlemen, we plainly state in our constitution, that a show shall be given at a date later than March, to recognize the garden rose. Such an exhibition can be held and be a credit to our society, and I should suggest that in the event of such a show being held, premiums for professionals in the form of cash be dispensed with and that all awards be of medals and ribbons. Those who use our American Rose Society's exhibition for advertising, showing flowers grown in the open ground, are not sacrificing great commercial values such as are represented by the March shows, and the advertising is ample to repay the effort. For the amateur, cash premiums would seem advisable.

In the way of advancing interest in garden roses, the work of the American Rose Society, in conjunction with the Department of Agriculture and Cornell University, in forming the two large trial gardens, is highly commendable. You have read the reports of these gardens in the annual Bulletin. They are the beginning, and in leaving the position with which you have honored me, I commend to my successor the importance of the rose trial gardens. That these gardens may become the beacons of light along the path of the amateur and a consistent and dependable guide to those of us who deal in garden roses, is my most earnest desire. Let them determine for us and for the people the intrinsic values of the different varieties. Let them give us the relative values of plants on their own roots, budded or grafted on Manetti, Briar, or other stock. Let them tell us how they stand the cold northern winters and they will have served us well, but they will also serve us by being an inspiration to the thousands who will visit these gardens annually. Let us give our assistance in every possible way and leave no stone unturned to make these gardens a grand success and a credit to the American Rose Society, to the United States of America, and to the State of New York whose co-operation has made them possible.

The work of the Central Rose Garden Committee should be in a measure concentrated on the introduction into these gardens of the novelties of Europe as well as of America. I would suggest that any firm buying foreign roses impress upon these firms the importance of sending their novelties, giving the American public and rose men the chance to buy upon proved merit instead of printed descriptions.

Grading of Cut Roses.

I wish to call to your attention that the action of our society upon the classification and grading of cut roses would be a worthy procedure. Our society settled upon uniform grades at the 1910 meeting, but because these grades were not designated by names they have not been recognized by the commercial growers.

We are invited by the National Flower Show Committee to meet in Philadelphia in 1916. In my opinion it will be wise to accept this invitation. Rochester is starting plans to have us with them in 1917. We are wanted because we bring with us a show that is a credit to the society that invites us and a credit to ourselves.

This is the end of my term of office. I appreciate the honor with which you favored me and am grateful for the loyalty shown by the executive committee. I trust my interest and loyalty can be depended upon and I shall be always ready and willing to help the American Rose Society carry forward the slogan: "A Rose for every home, a bush for every garden."

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION

Officers—President, Lester L. Morae, San Francisco, Calif.; First Vice-President, J. M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I.; Second Vice-President, F. C. Dungan, Philadelphia, Pa.; Secretary and Treasurer, C. E. Wendel, Cleveland, O.; Assistant Secretary, S. L. Willard, Jr., Cleveland, O.

Alfalfa Growers Elect.

At the Rhode Island Alfalfa Growers' meeting the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, B. K. Harris; Vice-President, S. C. Damon; Secretary, M. A. Hawkins; Treasurer, H. W. Tinkham; Executive Committee, J. J. Dunn, E. F. Green, and Alfred Perregeaux.

Plan for Better Seed Corn.

At the Rhode Island Corn Growers' Association meeting which was also held in connection with the institute, it was decided to accept a plan for securing better seed corn proposed by a committee appointed at the annual meeting in January. A set of regulations for the growing of seed corn will be adopted. All growers that follow these regulations will be designated as approved seed corn growers and will be granted a certificate and recommended by the Corn Growers' Association.

The chief provisions of the plan relate to a system of breeding seed corn, with certain requirements in regard to selecting and storing. Within a few weeks an outline of the plan in detail will be furnished to all members of the association.

A similar plan has been tried in some of the western states and in Canada and has worked very successfully, but it is the first attempt in this direction here in the East.

Value of importations of horticultural materials into New York, for week ending March 27 is given as follows:

Manure salt, $8,386; fertilizer, $1,867; clover seed, $127,196; grass seed, $17,428; sugar beet seed, $261; trees and plants, $35,890.

"FLOWERS BY TELEGRAPH"Of Interest to Retail Florists*THE RETAILERS' BUSINESS CALENDAR.

April 10, Saturday. It's wonderful how great is the power of pluck. Every man who has conquered success, in whatever calling, has possessed it. He has been full of the courage to do, and the pluck and nerve to hang on until it is done. Of course, you may get knocked out for a time. The best of men do—but it doesn't count as long as you do not stay out. Get up again, take a fresh hold, and go at it harder than ever, with renewed energy and determination. Disappointments and discouragements are necessary to the highest development of our powers. It often requires some great disaster, some overwhelming opposition, to discover our real strength and resources.

April 11, Sunday. There are still hundreds of florists who believe that it is for their best interests to keep open shop on Sunday. Why should the flower shop be on the level of the cigar or the candy and ice cream store, which are the only places opened on Sunday throughout the greater portion of our country? We have heard a prominent retailer remark that if florists' experienced employees only realized how necessary they are to the business, and took organized action, they could command shorter hours, better pay, etc.

April 12, Monday. The man who makes a habit of cutting prices is much more dangerous to himself than he is to the trade at large. Generally speaking, he is offering his goods at cut rates because he doesn't know better. Such a person can handle just about so much; the best plan is to let him alone and pay no attention to his reduced prices.

April 13, Tuesday. Is your store a warm store, heart-heated; where the clerks act as if they were glad to see customers? We like to enter a store that invites us in by an attractive window display. The windows very seldom misrepresent the quality of the store. They are silent salesmen.

April 14, Wednesday. Customers love enthusiasm, steady sincere enthusiasm as much as you do. They will catch your spirit about the flowers, and your love for them. They will take home not simply your good goods, but also your good spirit about them. And every day will be a day of appreciation of satisfied customers and of personal pleasure in your business.

April 15, Thursday. It is not too early to consider advertising co-operatively for Mothers' Day or Memorial Day. Call up the advertising manager of the best newspaper in your town and suggest to him that he circulate the idea among the leading florists. It may take all the time before these days come around to convince some of them that they ought to come in on a full page advertisement.

April 16, Friday. How many homes are there in your town that don't need a few shrubs and flowering plants to beautify the immediate surroundings? Every florist who knows his business can be the local landscape gardener if he will only go after the work systematically.

NEWS ITEMS FROM EVERYWHERE

BOSTON.

SAVING A CORNER. The corner of the street, had the flowers decorated for four of the largest and most prominent churches in the city.

Thos. J. Clark, of Boylston street, opened up Doyle's old store for Easter in conjunction with the Mass. General Hospital, which was selling the pottery made by crippled patients.

Filene's Flower Shop doubled their space for Easter week. It certainly must have been worth while, as this store covers what is probably some of the most valuable land in the city.

The Boston Rose Co. had some splendid Hadley roses April 2 from the Montgomery Co. Their quick sale showed the desirability of this rose, which came originally from the Montgomery Co., of Hadley, Mass.

The Mrs. Charles Russell rose easily led all other varieties last week. The Waban Rose Conservatories are indeed fortunate in being the originators of this beautiful variety, which has found such favor with the public east and west.

The dire necessity of an efficient local credit association certainly made itself felt this week through the bankruptcy of Wm. P. Pierce, of New Bedford. H. M. Robinson & Co. and B. A. Snyder & Co. are among the biggest sufferers.

McAlpine & McDonald did a big business in roses Easter week, especially for out-of-town orders. The entire basement below the Co-operative Market is now occupied by this growing firm, which just a year ago April 1 started business as wholesale florists.

Penn the Florist did not feel the effects of Saturday's storm as badly as some of the other local retailers. An advertising campaign, which included a half-page advertisement in one of Boston's biggest dailies, helped out wonderfully to keep up business to last year's record.

Mayor Curley has informed all the heads of departments that they are expected to donate 5 per cent of their salaries to a conscience fund because of the city's poverty. The total proceeds of this assessment, amounting altogether to about $4000 will be expended in the development of the Convention Garden in the Fenway.

Saturday's storm worked havoc with the "mushroom" stores downtown. These ephemeral business establishments are necessarily dependent on transient trade, and with the coming of the snow storm this decreased rapidly on Saturday. These shops proved a good outlet for the cheaper plants and flowers Thursday and Friday.

John Cummings, of Woburn, cleaned up his last batch of violets Saturday.

Cucumbers will be planted in their place. Violet growers generally have not had a very good year, an overabundance of flowers at the wrong time bringing prices down to ridiculously low figures. Early in the season too much foliage was thrown to secure a satisfactory pick of blooms.

The Breck-Robinson Nursery Co., of Lexington made a very effective window display for the Archway Book Store this week. It represented the sandy cove of a lake. Back of the beach was a thick planting of beautiful little evergreens. Drawn up on the sand could be seen a birch bark canoe. A clear mirror made a neat substitute for the water of the lake. This little landscape attracted many admirers.

The storm did not affect the big wholesale houses as badly as it did the retailers. N. F. McCarthy & Co. were practically through with shipping orders by Friday night, and except for a little local trade that was lost Saturday the season was fairly good. Welch Bros. stated that if the storm had not occurred the Easter of 1915 would have passed all previous records. Several big orders from retailers were cancelled Saturday.

WASHINGTON.

George Gould, who was formerly with the Washington Florists' Company, has accepted a position with George C. Shaffer. He has been succeeded at his former place of employment by Walter Gordon, who is well known among the trade.

Record breaking crowds were to be seen at the Botanical Gardens during the Easter period and for the benefit of the thousands of people who are now visiting the city on the many tours being made by the various railroads, Superintendent George W. Hess has been making a special exhibition of orchids and other rare plants.

The next regular meeting of the Florists' Club of Washington, D. C., will be held at 1214 F street, northwest, Tuesday evening, April 13. A moving picture exhibition of the latest happenings in the European war zone and other instructive pictures will be the feature of the evening. Plans will also be discussed for the giving of the annual banquet during the month of May.

The Brookland Rose Society is actively engaged in the completion of its plans for the annual rose exhibition to be held May 20 and 21. Franklin T. Howe is chairman of the exhibition committee, while E. C. Saltzman is chairman of the finance committee. Two committees have been appointed, as follows: Medal Committee, Franklin T. Howe, J. E. Eastlack, and E. C. Saltzman; committee on rose record cards, Dr. William Turn, Dr. Alphones Patton and Dr. Parker. Attractive medals are to be presented to the winners in the several classes.

PHILADELPHIA.

Some interesting new roses were shown at Pennock-Meehan's during the past week. Among them were Augustus Hartman, a fine light crimson with pink reverse by Stephen Mortensen; and three seedlings of Edward Towill, two of them pink of the La France type, and one yellow. All of these seem promising and will probably be heard from later.

Easter Plant Trade.

The big plant growers, like Craig and others who advertise and do a country-wide trade, report a very satisfactory Easter business. The smaller growers who depend on local trade suffered severely from the blizzard which came on their best day—Easter Saturday. Their case was certainly a heart-breaking one and it is not only the many thousands of dollars lost but that it fell on the shoulders of those least able to bear it. Among the big retail stores the demand was mostly for the lower priced plants—the leftovers being the expensive specimens at $7, $10, $15 and upwards. Of course this class of trade did not suffer much from the storm. It was the out-of-door men who got the worst of it in that respect. There was nothing particularly new to be seen in the plant line. The stock consisted of the usual staples with which we are all familiar.

Flower Competition.

After all is said, maybe it is a good thing to have the unemployed. It keeps down the wages. If there were no unemployed, wages would go up. And then where would the employer be in the cost of production? So we may apply the same rule to flower trade competition. It we did not have too much product the grower would be likely to get too grasping; and the retailer would then get it "in the neck!"

A. B. Cartledge, of Pennock Bros., sized it up well when we talked to him at retail for Easter lilies doesn't worry on Good Friday. "Nine cents a bloom us. We give service. The fakir, the ten cent store, or the department store can't touch us. Of course, at holidays there are multitudes that have to be satisfied with inferior service and inferior quality, but that has always been since the world began. So we never worry about that. We could not handle all of it, anyway, so what's the use of getting worried about the trade we don't want. We get our share and we get it on different lines and we are satisfied."

Bart is a philosopher!

The greenhouse builders appear to be "angels in disguise" after all.

NOTES.

Utica, N. Y. — Milton Williams and Louis Weider have purchased the greenhouses of Frank McGowan at $08 Sunset avenue and will hereafter conduct them, doing both a wholesale and retail florist business. About 20,000 feet of glass cover the greenhouses. Both Mr. Williams and Mr. Weider have had experience in the florist business, having been connected with A. & J. Williams, florists for a number of years. They are energetic, hustling young men and deserve to succeed.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—O. J. Parker, of Scobie & Parker, is anticipating his annual visit to his son, O. J. Parker, of Los Angeles, Cal., during the summer.

Ralph Franklin Pinner, who has charge of the landscape department for the A. W. Smith Company, is designing and laying out 20 acres of the 700-acre estate of James Ward, Jr., in the Fifteenth ward; and the estate of James E. Hindman, of East Wilkinsburg, and George Wittmer, Jr., of Wildwood.

Manchester, Mass.—James Satter, for the past fourteen years gardener to Mr. Philip Dexter, has been appointed instructor in vegetable growing at the Essex Co. Mass. Agricultural School. Members of the North Shore Horticultural Society gave him a pleasant surprise party on the evening of March 30, presenting him with a handsome clock as a token of their esteem and a memento of their friendship for him. The good wishes of the entire community go with him to his new home. W. T.

Braintree, Mass.—The mystery of the disappearance of Carl Waldecker, of the firm of Waldecker Brothers, florists, a few days ago, who had not been heard from since last July, was cleared up when his brother, Herman Waldecker, received a letter from him stating that he is with the 14th German Army Corps, and for five months past has been in Arras, France, living most of the time in trenches nine feet underground. Waldecker is not an American citizen, and he makes no complaint of being forced into military service. He expresses the hope of being able to return to Braintree when the war is over.

Bridgeport, Conn.—Sunday was expected to be a record-breaking day. It was, but not in the manner expected. Instead of delivering flowers and plants under ideal Easter conditions, they had to be sent to their owners under the same conditions that prevail at Christmas. Automobiles had to be heated for their conveyance. John Reck & Son state that they suffered the loss of many hundreds of dollars through the weather. Seven automobiles delivering flowers had to be towed in, one of them injured through an accident, and one of the horses was hurt. Subsequently all the horses had to be called in.

EASTER FLOWER MARKET REPORTS

Easter business was generally good, especially considering the very unexpected snow storm that held the city in its grip all day Saturday. The early part of the week was rather quiet, the usual apathy just before a holiday rush. Thursday morning things began to move with the activity that gave promise of a successful Easter, which indeed it was. Friday's business came up to the most sanguine expectations and this was the biggest day of the week. Although the sudden snow flurry on Saturday undoubtedly decreased the number of transient sales, it did not prevent the day from being highly satisfactory. All reports from local retailers mention the storm as being the cause of much inconvenience in packing and deliveries. They were but little prepared for it, and thus delays in deliveries necessarily occurred, which to some extent marred the success of the season. There was a splendid business in blooming plants, not only in lilies, but in azaleas, ramblers roses, bonganvilleas, etc. The lily item formed a big part of the week's sales, but from local reports we gather that it did not command the prominence that has been its wont in former years. There was just as much, if not a greater demand for rambler roses and azaleas. Roses and violets were the principal factors in the cut flower situation. Roses were abundant in all grades and varieties, Killarneys, pink and white, being in great demand. There was also a good supply of Hadley, Russell, Ward and Hillingdon. American Beauties were sold in limited quantities at only average prices. Carnations sold better in the early part of the week than they did on Friday and Saturday, colored kinds going better than the whites. Callas were fairly plentiful and were in good demand at $1.50 per dozen. Lily of the valley sold well, also daffodils. Orchids and gardenias did not receive so great a call as might be expected. Taken as a whole the Easter business was quite satisfactory, and judging from the reports of wholesalers the plantsmen reaped the greater share of the harvest. At present prices are the same as for the week before Easter and there is an abundance of all kinds of flowers.

The week preceding Easter was not a bad one in the general line of trade and the volume of business was materially increased through the sale of plants. Easter week was opened with a snow storm, the temperature falling as low as 18, but the end of the week saw a moderation in the climate and plants were delivered unwrapped. The Easter lily, as usual, had the heaviest sales. The supply was as good as in other years, but by Saturday morning there were no more to be had as the growers and wholesalers were cleaned up. There was a good lot of rose bushes, ramblers, genistas, azaleas, heathers, etc., and an enormous supply of tulips. The cut flower line was good although prices may have been less on some lines than in previous years. The supply of carnations was not as heavy, the quality was better and prices 5 per cent. higher. Rose shipments arrived in good shape and the outlet was good. Richmonds were a little scarce but the supply of Beauties was excellent and cleaned up satisfactorily. Cut lilies and callas sold well and a heavy supply of violets and sweet peas were disposed of. Lily of the valley sold out and everything along the line had a fair demand. It was a good Easter and by all indications the retailers did as well as in previous years.

Reports from the leading florists in Chicago indicate that the Easter florist business this year was the heaviest ever experienced. There were various reasons for this. First, the weather Easter week was ideal, being clear and pleasant, Saturday being especially favorable, a great contrast from the blizzard reported from the East. Easter prices were lower than usual, but the volume of business was very much heavier and more than made up for the lower prices. Plants seem to be still growing in popular favor and there was not enough good medium-priced stock to supply the demand, the growers all being cleaned out and the retailers say they could have sold more if it were possible to get the stock. Good tall lilies were in very of a lily plant in blossom sold well, but at very low prices. After lilies the demand was for bulb stock, azaleas, baby and rambler roses, rhododendrons, hydrangeas and, in fact, for anything in bloom. Cut flowers on the whole were of excellent quality and, with the exception of a few items, in abundant supply, the exception being Beauties and red and yellow roses. Beauties were extremely scarce and not of the very best quality. Some very choice long-stemmed stock was offered, but, of the shorter lengths a large proportion could only be classed as fair. But everything good, bad or indifferent found a ready sale. The cut of Richmond and Milady was rather light, and many late orders for these as well as for Wards and Sunburst could not be filled. Killarney, both pink and white, was abundant and about equal to demand. Some very fine Shawyer, Bulgarie and Killarney Brilliant were offered and readily sold at good prices. There was a brisk call for Ophelia but the offerings of this popular rose were rather limited for the reason that nearly all the growers have been using all the available wood for propagating. Carnations were plenty and of very good quality. There was less pickled stock on the market than has been noted at any previous Easter. Bulbous stock was varied and plentiful in every line. It looked at one time, in the middle of the week, that the market would be swamped with stock but contrary to expectations there was very little carried over. The lily was one of the items that was rather in over supply. The demand was heavier than ever, but the supply being still heavier than the demand, stock was left in the wholesalers' refrigerators. Sweet peas enjoyed an excellent demand. The offerings although large were not quite large enough for the demand and on Sunday morning quiet a number of dealers looked in vain for stock to fill orders. Violets sold well and with the exception of some eastern doubles, the stock was of good quality for this season of the year. Home-grown singles had the preference. In miscellaneous stock we noted some fine snapdragon, stocks, calendulas, spiraea, pansies, etc. Owing to the continued cool weather and the early date of Easter there was an enormous quantity of southern jonquils dumped on the market but at the prices offered—50 to 65c. per 100, in case lots—they sold readily.

The reports of all the wholesale

Easter Market Reports

firms agree that the shipping demand was up to and in some instances exceeded that of any previous Easter notwithstanding the general depression of trade in most other lines. And as stated above the market was well cleaned up on Friday night without practically any break in quotation prices. The local demand, however, on Saturday was rather disappointing and not up to the usual standard, and in consequence values dropped on some lines, particularly lilies. Carnations also felt the effect of a slow demand and declined in price. Roses held up well and comparatively small amounts were left unsold by Sunday noon.

Easter business was CINCINNATI excellent. At first it started rather slowly but the close was brisk and turned what was apparently an ordinary holiday business into a good one. All varieties of flowers had a very active demand and sold well with the exception of the choice American Beauties and orchids. Both of these seemed to be too high priced for the average Easter flower buyers. Shipping business and the business in green goods were both of them very good. On Monday of this week the market was very tight owing to the general clearance for the holiday, but on Tuesday receipts were heavier and by the time the middle of the week has passed the supply will undoubtedly be up to normal.

The Easter trade NEW BEDFORD promised well. A good deal of business was done by most of the local florists Thursday and Friday, but the storm of Saturday pretty effectually stopped all trade. Telephone communication was in many cases cut off and electric light wires were down making great difficulty in preparing orders for early delivery Sunday morning. The ground being covered with snow, with occasional drifts, made cemetery work entirely out of the question. It was impossible to make prompt delivery in many cases. Competition was very sharp. Charity sales and the public market took much of the business usually handled by local dealers. Especially was this the case with the church work, into which they cut very largely. Numerous orders for cut flowers were cancelled on Sunday on account of the weather, causing additional loss. Lilies brought less than usual. Carnations were scarce. Roses were about as usual. Sweet peas and violets were in great demand. Bulb stock brought about the usual prices. Fredk. Reynolds had space in a drug store for the week at the corner of William and Pleasant streets. Joseph V. Peirce had an attractive display in the window of Lawton's drug store. Post & Gray showed unusually fine flowers in the newly completed part of the Steiger, Dudgeon Co.'s large department store on Purchase street. All suffered more or less from the storm.

An Easter which up NEW YORK to Saturday morning promised to be the best ever experienced in New York was turned into an orgie of the elements which overturned all calculations and brought loss and disappoint-

M. on Saturday tiny flakes began to whirl about and it was not long until they were driving thick and fast before a squally wind which later became a howling gale and drove the fast-falling snow into great soggy drifts, making a scene of winter desolation such as New York has never before seen on an April day. Twenty-eighth street, where all preparations had been made for a record Easter cut flower sale, was aghast and dumb-founded at the situation and the outlook. "Spring has arrived" was the announcement displayed that morning in Harry Bunyard's seed store window, but that gentleman "had another guess coming!" Transportation was nearly at a standstill—cars, wagons and autos obstructed and stalled. F. R. Pierson told of one delivery motor car sent out at 2 P. M. Saturday which got stuck in the drifts at Tarrytown until 11 A. M. on Sunday. The flower stores with their glowing banks of azaleas, lilies, rhododendrons and genistas stood deserted at the time when ordinarily they would have been thronged with customers. At only one place did we see anything like a genuine Easter crowd on that long-to-be-remembered night, and that was at the big department store on East 59th street where C. C. Trepel has given so many object lessons on the art of plant and flower distribution to the multitude: There was a small army of helpers and they were kept on the hustle until late Sunday afternoon. Easter Market Reports this resourceful operator the loss to growers and dealers on plants and flowers would have been much larger than it was.

There was more than enough of practically everything in the entire list of flowers, even if the weather had been ideal for transient trade, and also no end to the variety of things forced into bloom for the Easter buyer—even to sunflowers, lupines and larkspurs. On carnations there was just a suggestion of short supply Saturday morning but, as one wholesaler expressed it—"All we have to do is to put the price up a cent and they'll then stand still." American Beauty roses of the higher grades were unsaleable. Cattleya Schroederiae was in the same straits. There were many more lilies than could be disposed of and these, in plant form or cut, crowded most of the florists' windows on the Monday following. All the stores wholesale and retail, kept open through Saturday night. Towards morning and through Sunday forenoon when it became evident that Sunday was to be an ideal day, there was more or less activity especially on flowers for street wear. For this purpose violets, lily of the valley, gardenias, orchids and roses seemed to be most popular, in the order named. Very few sweet peas and no carnations whatever were seen on the fashionable Easter parade on Fifth avenue on Sunday afternoon.

The most abundant plant was the azalea. Among the most popular was the Tausendschoen rose. Large plants were the exception in all lines and the large baskets of mixed plants so much in vogue in other years in the more pretentious stores were conspicuously absent. Retrenchment and moderate display were on all sides, the manifestation of the wave of economy which the exigencies of this relentless season has forced upon all classes.

Easter week of

PHILADELPHIA 1915 in this city was all right until the blizzard struck us on Easter

Saturday. If it had not been for that, cut flowers would have cleaned up in good shape. As it was, a good many were left unsold, and that makes a big difference on the average for the week's returns. Prices this year were very reasonable on all lines, there being but a very moderate advance over regular rates. The growers and their representatives—the commission men—had evidently adjusted the balance between supply and demand with excellent judgment, so that they neither overshot nor undershot the mark. Supplies were large on almost everything and as a rule the quality was never better. Cattleyas were about the only scarce item on the list, especially the dark shades. A few choice dark cattleyas brought as high as a dollar each, although six to nine dollars a dozen was about the regular market. American Beauty roses were in fine form and popular, but as the supply was large prices ruled moderate. And such Shawyers! Never have we had such perfection in this one before at this date. The Hadley was also very fine indeed—color, form, fragrance, all perfect. A glorified Gen. Jacqueminot it truly is in color, but that is the only comparison. Some of the Killarneys were a little pale, but as a rule they held their own very well. Carnations good and lower in price than usual. The idea seemed to be to sell clean, and not to crowd the price to the limit. The bulk of the sweet pea crop was of medium grade and sold very well. Violets were in better demand than expected, and the supply being curtailed from previous experience, better prices were obtained. There were a good many cut Easter lilies left over and more coming.

PITTSBURGH

The Easter season here was successful far beyond anticipation, and if the comparative Christmas and Easter sales have any significance as to general conditions, the three months intervening show a decided improvement in trade. The same strain of optimism is noticeable in the fashionable shops and in the market house stands, which are a big factor in supplying the flower lovers of Pittsburgh.

ST. LOUIS The Easter business with the St. Louis florists was as good as any Easter and in some respects even better. This is taken from the various reports from the leading retailers in all parts of the city, who say that the plant trade grows heavier each year. On an inspection trip throughout the West End, one could see the great preparations made along this line. Easter lilies, which were reported short in supply, ten days ago were much in evidence at all stores and seemed to have the call over other plants. These were followed in demand by azaleas, hydrangeas, rhododendrons, crimson ramblers, spiraeas, Dutch hyacinths and tulips. All these seem to have had an excellent demand. As to cut flowers, the sale was as great as in any year, with bulbous stock in great favor. Violets and sweet peas sold well at all times, but roses and carnations did not have the call of other cut flowers. Easter demand at the wholesale markets was very brisk on Friday and Saturday, and between the five wholesale houses they had an immense stock. The local retail trade bought heavily this year, as prices were reasonable and quality extra good. Roses were in quite heavy and cleaned up well. Snapdragons and daisies sold well and all of this stock was of high quality. Taking all the reports of the Easter business, it must have been a good Easter for growers, wholesalers and retailers all together.

WASHINGTON Local florists enjoyed what was perhaps the most successful Easter business in recent years regardless of the fact that an enormous quantity of stock, particularly of potted plants, was left over after the rush had been taken care of, although the miniature blizzard made deliveries very difficult. The stores in the uptown sections did exceptionally well and this is accounted for on the ground that the snowstorm prevented the people to a large extent from going into the shopping district to make purchases. There was plenty of everything with the possible exception of single violets, the place of which was taken by the Rhinebeck variety, and orchids. There was little demand for the latter and their absence from the market was hardly noticed. Nor was there an over supply of choice roses and the crops of many of the nearby growers will not mature for a week or more. There was the usual advance in prices, although there were plenty of flowers of the cheaper grades for those who wanted cheap goods. Another feature of the year, much commented on by the store keepers, was the very few street vendors, for the storm made it impossible for them to do business and HORTICULTURE's correspondent saw but two or three where had it had been a fair day there would have been probably several hundred.

Hammond's Paint & Slug Shot Works, Beacon, N. Y.

Dear Sirs: After trying Thrip Juice No. 2 for two seasons, I can say it is the best article I ever used for thrip on roses or carnations, also for white fly. The latter was the worst pest we had to contend with, but after three applications, about four (4) days apart, we were practically free from it. I find it is advisable to apply in the evening, and with a good, strong force pump, proportion one to forty.

SCOTCH SOOT

We offer the genuine in original cwt. Sacks, at:
$4.00 per 112 lbs.; $17.50 per 560 lbs.

A RAPIDLY GROWING INDUSTRY.

There is estimated to be ten millions of dollars invested in greenhouses, in Chicago and vicinity, and each year this enormous sum grows larger. Going east from this great central city, flashes of light on ranges of glass, more or less extensive catch the eye at every little town and hamlet, with big broad expanses of glass in the larger towns and cities, showing that flowers are everywhere a part of commercial life. But leaving Chicago over any of the west bound lines, you note a difference. You are soon beyond the circle that feeds into the Chicago market, and hundreds of miles are traversed without catching sight of a greenhouse. On into the great State of Iowa, its fertile fields seemingly never to end and its productiveness the boast of the middle west, and you will see neither a greenhouse nor a nursery. Just as you have given up looking for them you reach Ames and the Agricultural College buildings come into view, and there gleam in the sunshine the beautiful houses just erected by the Foley Greenhouse Manufacturing Co. The obliging trainman call your attention to this institution, of which Iowa is justly proud and here is being trained a class of men who are to give the growing of flowers and plants its place here in this big state in a very few years. In the extreme western part of this state, in a city named for the Sioux Indians, the business has a foothold but nothing compared to the size that is needed to supply the surrounding country. Just beyond this lies Nebraska. The northwestern part is a beautiful rolling country where plenty abounds and nature is unstinting in its rewards to industry. One of the State Normal Schools is located here at Wayne, a

A Repeat Ad.

And Why We Repeat It

A week or so ago, we published an Ad. entitled "Our Service—How and Why It Wins."

Some of you were so busy with your Easter work that you hadn't time to read it.

It tells so many vitally important things about the way our free Service helps your bank account, that we are repeating the Ad. for your benefit.

Here it is, word for word, just as published.

WHEN you go to a store and ask for exactly what you want, and get it: that's buying.

When a man comes to you to buy some one thing, and because of your good salesmanship, he goes away with several other things besides, that's selling.

Suppose, however, you want to build a greenhouse and ask us to give you a figure. Instead of simply giving you a price, suppose that we look carefully into your proposition and, because of our good half a century's experience in building, are able to suggest changes that not only will be of great advantage now, but vitally affect the greater success of your proposed future houses. Suppose we find that the soil conditions in your chosen location are not right, and suggest one on your ground that is. Suppose we dissuade you from building a 55-foot house, and show you the economies of one 72 feet wide. Suppose we prove to you that your proposed bench arrangement will not give you the greatest returns from your house, and show you one that will. Suppose we point out defects in the heating you had planned to use, and show you one that will save you many tons of coal each year. Suppose that when you tell us you have figures from other concerns, on other constructions, we are so thoroughly posted on them all, that we can point out to you, point by point, their weak points; and show you common sense reasons just why our construction is actually the best. Suppose then you buy our house. What is that?

Is it buying?

Is it selling?

No, it's service, with some buying and some selling mixed in.

But it's mostly service.

This service is of great value to you. It's really expert advice. And you know expert advice generally comes high.

But for this service of ours we make no charge. It is yours for the asking.

It's part of the full measure and running over value you get when you deal with us.

It's based on a longer experience than that of any other builder, and on the building and equipping of hundreds and hundreds of houses. If you are ready to talk building and want to take advantage of our service say when and where and we'll be there.

IF YOU ARE LOOKING FOR HARDY PERENNIALS

"Get them at Dreer's"

We offer here only a few of the most important recent introductions. For a complete list of new varieties as well as all the good old sorts worth planting, see DREER'S GARDEN BOOK and our current WHOLESALE PRICE LIST

THE NEW ANCHUSAS.

The Improved Varieties of Italian Alkanet or Bugloss.

These wonderfully improved Anchusas have proven most valuable additions to our list of blue flowering hardy perennials and particularly so as they flower from May to July, a time when this color is very sparingly represented in the hardy border.

The habit of the plants while strong and vigorous is not at all coarse, they form very branched specimens from 3 to 5 feet high, each branch of which is terminated by a large, graceful pyramidal spike of blue flow.

Dropmore Variety. Rich gentian-blue.

Opal. A splendid lustrous light blue.

$1.50 per doz.; $10 per 100.

THREE CHOICE ANEMONE JAPONICA.

Allee. Large semi-double, silvery-rose suffused with scarlet.

Kriemhilde. Nearly four inches in diameter, semi-double rose-pink.

Loreley. Cup-shaped flowers, three inches in diameter, light mauvepink.

$1.50 per doz.; $12 per 100.

ARTEMESIA LACTIFLORA.

An introduction from China and a most effective flowering plant, growing 3½ to 4 ft. high, with large panicles of Hawthorn scented, creamy-white Spiraea-like light and graceful flowers during August and September.

$1.50 per doz.; $10 per 100.

ASTILBE ARENDSI.

This new type is of very vigorous growth, producing many-branched feathery heads of flowers. 2½ to 3 feet high.

Ceres. Delicate, light rose with silvery sheen.

June. Strong upright plumes of deep violet

rose.

Salmon Queen. Beautiful

salmon pink.

Venus. Deep violet rose.

Vesta. Light lilac rose.

White Pearl. Dense pyramidal plumes of silvery white.

30 cts. each; $3.00 per doz.

Choicest Mixed Varieties of above, $2.00 per doz;

$15.00 per 100.

NEW HARDY ASTER NOVI BELGII CLIMAX.

Novi Belgii Climax. One of the most important additions to the Michauxias Division and we believe the forerunner of a new type. The plant is of strong, vigorous habit of growth, over 5 feet high; fully one-half of this consists of much branched pyramidal shaped flower stems which are filled with lively light lavender-blue flowers fully 1½ inches in diameter. The plant is in flower from the latter part of August to the middle of October. 35 cts. each; $3.50 per doz.; $25.00 per 100.

THREE IMPORTANT DELPHINIUMS.

King of Delphiniums. One of the most distinct yet introduced; the plant is of remarkably strong growth, with flowers of gigantic size, semi-double and of a deep blue color, with large white eye. 25 cts. each; $2.50 per doz.

Moerhelmi. This is the first really white hybrid Delphinium introduced and a decided acquisition. The plant is of strong, vigorous growth, 3 feet high, the lateral or side shoots 2½ feet high. The flowers are of purest white, without the slightest shading; a free and continuous bloomer from June till frost. 20 cts. each; $2.00 per doz.; $15.00 per 100.

Rev. E. Lascelles (new). One of the finest varieties yet introduced. Plant very strong, grows six feet high. Flowers very double of a deep purple-blue, with clear white centre and of greatest size. $1.00 each.

GYPHOPHILA (Baby's Breath)

Paniculata Flore Plena. This double flowering Gypsophila is among the most important hardy plants for cutting purposes.

We guarantee our stock, every plant to be the true double form. Seedlings are sometimes offered very cheap, but only a very small percentage come double. Our plants are all either grafted or grown from cuttings. Strong flowering plants $2.00 per doz.; $15.00 per 100.

NEW HEMEROCALIS QUEEN OF MAY.

A splendid new hybrid, flower stems from 3 to 5 feet high, terminated with from 12 to 18 flowers of largest size of a rich Indian-yellow. The flowers begin to develop in May and continue for nearly two months; perfectly hardy. 26 cts. each; $2.50 per doz.; $18.00 per 100.

NEW GIANT-FLOWERING MARSHMALLOWS (Hibiscus).

A wonderfully improved form of our greatly admired native Marshmallow or Rosemallow, in which not only the colors have been greatly intensified but in which flowers of enormous size, frequently 10 to 12 inches in diameter, have been developed.

These plants can be highly recommended for all kinds of plantings, they appear to be equally at home in all positions, having the same vigor in dry and wet ground and are perfectly hardy, they grow from 5 to 8 feet high and are very floriferous, blooming from early July to late in Autumn. We offer three distinct colors, Red, Pink and White in strong two year old roots. 30 cts. each; $3.00 per doz.; $20.00 per 100.

LUPINUS (Lupine).

Polyphyllus Moerhelmi.

The most beautiful variety yet introduced; a combination of light and dark shades of pink. $2.50 per doz.; $18.00 per 100.

LYTHRUM ROSEUM PERRY'S VARIETY.

A splendid improvement on the common Loosestrife, with much larger flowers, larger spikes and of glistering cherry-red colors. $2.50 per doz.; $18.00 per 100.

NEW ORIENTAL POPPY "PERRY'S WHITE."

A sterling novelty and the most distinct break that has yet been made in Oriental Poppies, it being a pure satiny-white with a bold crimson blotch at the base of each petal; this is undoubtedly the most important addition to our list of hardy perennial plants this season. 35 cts. each; $3.50 per doz.; $25.00 per 100.

THREE SPLENDID NEW HARDY PHLOX.

Rheinlander. A beautiful salmon-pink with flowers and trusses of immense size, the color of the flower is intensified by a very decided eye of a deep claret-red. $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.

Riverton Jewel. One of our own introductions which it gives us great pleasure to recommend, a lively shade of mauve-rose illuminated by a carmine-red eye, a splendid improvement on the popular variety Asla. 30 cts. each; $2.50 per doz.; $18.00 per 100.

Thor. A most beautiful and lively shade of deep salmon-pink suffused and overlaid with a scarlet glow and a light almost white halo around its aniline-red eye. This variety will undoubtedly hold the same place among deep salmon colors that Elizabeth Campbell holds among the light salmon-pinks. $2.00 per doz.; $15.00 per 100.

PERRY'S WHITE ORIENTAL POPPY.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—P. p.

Chrysanthemums

Chrysanthemums being grown for exhibition purposes must not be knocked around as some stock is allowed to do. They will want shifting along before they become too pot-bound. There is no better place for them at the present time than a cold frame, for here they can have plenty of ventilation. Make it a point to give them a syringing every bright morning and watch the pots that they do not dry out too much. Keep them clean of fly by either sprayings of some good insecticide or weekly fumigation. At all their shifts see that they have a rich compost using as a foundation sod that was cut last fall and piled up with about one-third well rotted cow manure added.

Ericas

Those that are unsold and past their bloom should be cut in just enough to give them a good shape. Ericas that are perfectly healthy can go into a pot one size larger, while specimens that look sickly will be improved and frequently restored to vigor by repotting into a pot of the same size as the one previously occupied. Now is the time to start in order to have well-balanced plants for next year. The soil for potting should be fibrous peat and loam with about one-third of silver sand. All heaths like plenty of drainage. The ball of earth should be loosened with a piece of pointed wood, and the outer soil shaken off. Should the inner part of the ball be dry, which is very often found to be the case, they should be dipped for some time into a tub before repotting. In potting care should be taken to set them a little too high rather than too deep. Be sure that the soil is well firmed around their roots. When it is time for them to be placed outside they will be benefited by the shifting shade of some large trees during the hottest hours of the day. The pots should be sunk to their rims into some loose material such as hay or leaves, anything that will allow the air to pass through.

Nephrolepis

A spare bench can be put to good use by planting with some of the varieties of nephrolepis. These ferns are not fastidious as to soil. If some of the carnations are not doing well put them out and replace with a planting of these ferns. Give the soil a coat of well decayed manure and if it is heavy add a little sand. Give water around the ball at first and as the roots begin to run you can give the whole surface a watering. Pay attention to syringing during all bright days. They will need some shade, but only enough to keep them in good color as too heavy a shade tends to make their growth soft and straggly. Temperature should be held at about 60 degrees during the night.

Ramblers for Next Easter

We can start now with dormant plants from the field. It is all in the first six weeks' management. Cut them down very low and place in a cool house or pit for the first two weeks. In two weeks they will have broken at many eyes. Rub off all but five or six breaks or growths. Place in a house at about 50 degrees at night. They should be given careful watering with frequent spraying and in a short time they will make numerous shoots which should be reduced to four or five to a plant. The next three weeks is the critical time. Don't take them from the pit or warm house and slam them into a cool draughty house, especially near an open door. Give them ten degrees higher temperature, full light and frequent syringing or light spraying. When the young growths are two or three inches long rub off the weakest for these canes are all you want to make the best furnished plant. As they grow keep them tied up to stakes until July, when they can be plunged outside to help ripen up the wood.

Time to Propagate

As the season advances there will be more sun heat, with the temperature of the houses higher, and less fire heat, with the sand of the propagating bed cooler. This is the reverse of favorable conditions for propagating nearly all soft-wooded plants. Those who wisely managed their propagation already have the main part of this work done. There is ample time yet for the growing of good plants of most varieties of that class that may enter into the spring trade. They must have more shading from this out and a greater amount of water to keep the sand moist, and they should have a couple of sprayings overhead every day. When they begin to make roots gradually reduce the shading. Do not leave them too long in the sand when rooted, but pot off just as soon as well rooted.

Stock in Frames

All kinds of stock now in frames will need plenty of attention from this out. See that they have ventilation in the morning before they become warm and shut down early enough in the afternoon so as to keep warm enough during the night. Attend carefully to watering. On warm days the sashes can be removed altogether.

Next Week: Cattleys; Cibotium Schledel; Gloxinias; Propagating Crotons; Plants for Vases, etc.; Shading.

The storm's aftermath

The storm of Easter Saturday, which broke in so ferociously on the prosperity of the florist trade of the eastern section of the country and shattered the hopes for a record breaking Easter, left behind it a trail of trouble for the entire week following the disaster. All classes of flower dealers suffered to a greater or less extent but those that were hit the hardest were the itinerant dealers who had ensconced themselves in every available empty store or vacant space and stocked up heavily from the abundant supply of bulbous material, azaleas, etc., which existed on all sides. These people got an awful blow wherever they had paid for the goods. Where they had not paid the grower has to take most of the punishment in all probability. But the greatest handicap to the general business of the week following Easter was the enormous stock of plants and flowers left on the hands of the retailers and the wholesalers, which blocked the way for the fresh product, a condition which has reacted disastrously on the growers and slaughtered market prices for everything. Special sac-rific sales of left over Easter plants have been held in many places during the week.

A safe business

While there are yet remaining a few of the best business weeks of the season, so called, the time has so far progressed that most of us can now make a fairly good estimate of the 1914-15 season as to whether we have found it a profitable one, as to how it compares with previous years, and what new outlay or investment its results would seem to justify for the immediate future. While there are undoubtedly some of our readers who have enjoyed an increase in the amount of their business over that of last year and who are well satisfied with conditions as they have met them, yet in the case of many others the reverse is true. The question is an all-important one, especially for those who have made large investments in greenhouse property in the anticipation of immediate returns, equal to those of previous seasons on a similar outlay, and it will be answered variously as to how much of future enlargement the results in each case now seem to warrant. Yet every one must agree that the floricultural industries have suffered much less than might reasonably have been feared in a year so tempest-tossed commercially as the one we have been passing through. Again, we believe it will be further admitted that these industries, when carried on progressively and in accordance with modern business thoroughness, have yet a long way to go before they have reached the danger line of risky investment. Few avocations, indeed, hold out more reasonable assurance of a fair return for capital and industry than those concerned with the cultivation of plants and flowers.

The advancement of the rose

When one attempts to count up the list of new forcing roses which are to be found in greater or less quantities in the wholesale cut flower markets at the present time the number proves to be astonishingly large and brings home forcibly and impressively the remarkable progress now being made in this branch of commercial floriculture. There were many years during which the same roses—about half a dozen all told—held the floor invariably year in and year out, while in the meantime the carnationists were industriously focusing public attention on a constant succession of new carnation varieties. Interest in the rose was at a low ebb and there was very meagre encouragement to anyone to make the effort to work up something better than the old staples in the rose line. Now we have in the running in addition to a lengthy list of well established favorites, such sterling new sorts as Mrs. Russell, Prince d' Arenberg, Hadley, Francis Scott Key, Mrs. Storey, Ophelia, Jonckeer Mock, Lady Stanley, Radiance, as well as others of local repute in various places, while in the way of wide variation we have the little sparklers of the Mignon, Elgar and Fire Flame type opening up a new and promising field for enterprise. At the April meeting of the Horticultural Club of Boston, E. H. Wilson entertained and instructed the members and guests with the story of the rose as it was in its beginnings—the originals from which, through various evolutions from remote antiquity, the rose as we know it to day had its development. It was one of the most remarkable discourses on the subject of the rose ever delivered in this country. It served not only to excite wonder over the past but some faint realization of the possibilities of the future, especially when attention was called to the fact that of the many beautiful native American roses, but one had yet been made use of by the hybridist.

Alexander Haig.

Alexander Haig, aged 35 years, son of John and the late Mary Haig passed away at the residence of his father, 1511 N. Clarion St., Phila., April 8. Mr. Haig was a respected and trusted employee of the Pennock-Meehan Co., off and on, for the past twelve years; previous to which he was with Charles Fox. He had been in poor health for some years back, but continued at work up to about two weeks ago. Charles E. Meehan of the firm in speaking of him voiced the sentiment of all his associates when he said—"Alek was a good boy and stuck right on his job whether he was sick or well. He was kind, considerate and obliging and nothing was too much trouble for him. He will be much missed and long remembered."

Mrs. John B. Nugent.

On Saturday night, April 10, after a week of intense suffering, from pneumonia, Sabery Dorsell Nugent wife of John B. Nugent, of New York City passed away. The sympathy of everyone in the florist trade, wherever Mr. Nugent and his beautiful wife are known, is extended him in this great bereavement.

Mrs. Nugent was universally beloved. Her friends were innumerable. Especially was she esteemed by the members of the New York Florist Club, of which her husband was president in 1911. She was a lady of rare attainments, her musical ability giving her a national reputation. There was no limit to the generous use of her talents in behalf of others. The sunlight of her smile was a perpetual delight in her home, and wherever she was known. For years her wonderful voice was heard at the Florists' Club's banquets, and its memory will ever remain an inspiration to those who heard it. As a public singer her career was at its zenith. She had just completed a contract to sing in opera at Washington when stricken. Hope for her recovery was felt up to the end. Mrs. Nugent was 33 years of age.

Funeral services were held at 10.30 on Tuesday morning at the Broadway Tabernacle, 56th street and Broadway. The floral offerings from Mr. Nugent's many friends were innumerable. Nearly every florist of note in the city manifested by his presence at the funeral the high esteem felt for the departed. Interment was at Woodlawn.

W. S. Sisson.

Mr. Winfield Scott Sisson, treasurer of the Broadway Hardware Company and a well known grower of dahlias, died at his home on Bliss Road, Newport, R. I., Friday afternoon. Stricken with apoplexy Friday morning, he died in the afternoon, without recovering consciousness. Mr. Sisson was born in 1862 in Portsmouth. For a number of years as a young man he was engaged in farming on Union street, Portsmouth, but more recently was connected with the George A. Weaver Company, and on the organization by the employees of that establishment of the Broadway Hardware Company was made treasurer. He devoted much time to the growing of dahlias and other flowers and in connection with Parker Thurston was a frequent and successful exhibitor of dahlias in the flower shows of Newport and Providence where their entries won many prizes. He was for many years a member of the Newport Horticultural Society. Mr. Sisson was a man of quiet tastes and pleasant disposition and had many friends in the community. His love of flowers led him to grow them for the sake of their variety and beauty and made him a valuable member of the Horticultural Society, where his advice, always unostentatiously given was held in high esteem.

A FORMAL GARDEN AT SOUTH BRAINTREE, MASS.

Our cover illustration this week depicts a garden of formal design on the estate of Ellis Hollingsworth, South Braintree, Mass. This estate comprises between three and four hundred acres, woodland largely. The highly cultivated portion about the residence covers about ten acres, of which the garden here shown is the central feature. The material used is principally hardy perennials, with American arbovitae and buxus placed at regular intervals and the borders filled in with brilliant flowering annuals from seed, for spring and fall display especially. The pergola is garlanded with wisterias and rambler roses. The conservatory, which is partially shown in the picture, is of Lord & Burnham construction, 18x200 ft. A. Carlson has been in charge of this place for the past ten years and he has made it the leading show place of the Braintree section.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

NEW YORK FLORISTS' CLUB.

The meeting of the New York Florists' Club was held on Monday, April 12, but was not so fully attended as the previous meetings have been and the exhibits at the meeting were not as extensive as formerly. John Birnie has promised to make an exhibit of spring stock and bedding plants at the next meeting to be held in May, on the same lines as conducted by his father, the late John Birnie. Chairman Charles Schenck rendered his report of the banquet committee, showing a deficit of $172.86, which was ordered paid. F. W. Armitage, chairman of the outing committee "reported progress." Chairman Weathered of the committee in charge of the booth at the Flower Show, reported that the appropriation of $200 had been used up for the purpose for which the appropriation was made. Mr. Traendly gave a preliminary report of the recent flower show showing receipts and disbursements up to date. After the final settlement is made, it is expected that $5,000 will be divided equally between the Horticultural Society of New York and the New York Florists' Club. The president was instructed to appoint a committee of seven to confer with the Horticultural Society of New York regarding the holding of another show in 1916, this committee being vested with power to act. Chairman De Forest of the transportation committee reported that sixteen had already signified their intentions of going to the convention in San Francisco and upon motion, following out their recommendation, the club endorsed their routes selected;—The New York Central to Chicago and the Canadian-Pacific from Chicago to San Francisco. George W. Cobb, Greenlawn, L. I.; Wm. F. Leary, New Rochelle, N. Y.; Samuel A. Woodrow, 39 W. 28th street, New York City; Louis T. Rodman, 43 Conway street, Brooklyn, N. Y., and Peter Wenk of Ozone Park, N. Y., were elected members of the club and there were five names proposed for membership. A letter from W. H. Siebrecht, Jr., Secretary of the New York and New Jersey Plant Growers' Association, was read urging all florists purchasing bulbs in Europe to buy them f. o. b. New York. This communication was turned over to the legislative committee.

J. Austin Shaw, Alexander J. Guttman, and Frank M. Duggan were appointed a committee to prepare suitable resolutions on the death of Mrs. J. B. Nugent. W. F. Sheridan, John Donaldson and Julius Chevalley were appointed a committee to prepare resolutions on the death of Frank Niquet's son. J. H. Pepper, Emil Schloss and Charles Schenck to prepare resolutions on the death of Simon Rodh. J. Austin Shaw, W. F. Sheridan and A. T. Bunvard a committee to prepare resolutions on the death of the daughter of J. J. Gunther, who died a couple of weeks ago.

The lecture by Robert Pyle of West Grove, Pa., on Roses at Home and Abroad was a splendid effort enjoyed to the limit. Lumiere lantern slides added to the interest.

The committee on awards made the following report:

Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J. Collection of cut orchids in variety, among them quite a number of rarities such as Odontioda Bradshawiae, Odon. Loiseae and Odon. ardentissimum. Award highly commended.

Louis Strauss, Brooklyn, N. Y. Androbium thyrsiflorum. Extra well flowered plant. Award cultural certificate.

Geo. Schlegel, gard. S. G. Milosy, Bay Ridge, N. Y. Oncidium ampliatum majus. Fine well-flowered plant. Award cultural certificate.

W. A. Manda, Inc., So. Orange, N. J. Brasso-Cattleya and Laelio-Cattleya hybrids. Award certificate of merit.

Herman Mamitsch, Englewood, N. J. Orchid-flowering sweet peas, Yates Yarrowa, Yates Concord hybrids. Award vote of thanks.

At the May meeting, Monday, May 10, E. H. Wilson, of the Arnold Arboretum will give an illustrated talk on the Gardens and Flora of Japan.

FIELD MEETINGS AT THE ARNOLD ARBORETUM.

Under the management of the Committee on Gardens of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society a series of outdoor meetings will be held at the Arnold Arboretum, Jamaica Plain, Mass., beginning Thursday, April 22, at 3 o'clock p. m., and continuing every Thursday at the same hour until July 1, if the interest warrants. John G. Jack, of the Arboretum staff, will conduct the party, giving information on the various trees and shrubs as they come into their flowering season, and answering questions that may be asked concerning the plants under observation.

The meetings are intended for the members of the society exclusively, with their personal friends, and will occupy about two hours. Should any Thursday prove decidedly stormy the meeting will be postponed until the next day (Friday).

The assembly place will be at the Forest Hills entrance to the Arboretum, about five minutes' walk from Forest Hills Station, reached by elevated, subway, or surface cars, and the meetings will furnish a rare opportunity to become familiar with the plant treasures of this great collection.

GARDENERS' & FLORISTS' CLUB OF BOSTON.

The next regular monthly meeting of the club will be held at Horticultural Hall, Boston, on Tuesday evening, April 20, 1915, at 8 o'clock. H. Howard Pepper of the Industrial Trust Co., Providence, R. I., will speak on "Tales of a Teller," and "Some Facts Every Florist Should Know About Banking," illustrated by forms in every day use in a large bank. This lecture should be found valuable. The exhibition tables will contain a splendid display of roses, orchids, bulbous flowers, hydrangeas and sweet peas, which should interest every member.

W. N. CRAIG, Sec'y.

A PLEASING FLOWER BASKET.

Progressive florists are constantly striving to keep out of the ruts which so many get into in their floral work and in the material used. Beautiful as a well-arranged basket of roses, carnations, violets or other staple florists' flowers may be, yet the use of the same things continuously soon becomes monotonous and the public are always disposed to favor anything out of the ordinary as a change. The basket shown in our illustration is from a photograph kindly loaned to HORTICULTURE by Max Schling. It has the pleasing quality of uniqueness combined with simplicity which is characteristic of so much of that artist's work. Ixias, clivias and adiantum are the material used and it is to be presumed that the color of the basket and the handle ribbon were in proper harmony with the tints of the flowers used. How fine it would be if we only could reproduce these floral pictures in their natural colors, for color combination is in many cases their strongest feature. The ingenuity and taste exercised by the manufacturers of flower baskets in recent years and the enterprise of the dealers in such supplies have been a great help to the florist, furnishing him with the wherewithal for the production of artistic effects that otherwise would be practically impossible.

NORTH SHORE HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

This society held its regular meeting on Friday evening, April 9, at Lee's Hall, Manchester, Mass. In the absence of the president, Eric H. Wetterslow presided. The schedule of prizes for the annual exhibition August 4th and 5th was approved. Among the list of officers given on the front page are the names of four of the leading society ladies of the North Shore summer colony. As they are all active and earnest workers for the society, and will be under the leadership of Mrs. W. Scott-Pitz, the summer show is already an assured success. A. Leuthy of Roslindale was the speaker for the evening and gave a very interesting and instructive lecture on the growing of palms, ferns and other decorative greenhouse plants. He considered the areca the best of all palms now in commerce. After the lecture a general discussion followed led by Mr. Mulliard and participated in by Messrs. Salter, Sanborn and Parsons.

Ernest Townsend exhibited a vase of his new winter-flowering lupins, which are selections from many crosses between Farquhar's Pink and the Hartwegii varieties. He was awarded a silver medal. The spikes exhibited were about three feet high and ranged in tints from daybreak pink and most delicate blues to pure white. It is the consensus of opinion that these lupins will supersede the snapdragon as a winter flowering crop. It is a great cropper, has pleasing fragrance and is a good keeper.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF GARDENERS.

The Essay Committee of the National Association has selected the following subjects for the contest for President Everitt's prize for the best written essay on Horticulture:

Class 1—Prize, $5 gold. Subject—Horticulture as a profession from the standpoint of a gardener.

Class 2—Prize, $25 gold. Subject—The proper grouping and culture of trees, shrubs, perennials and annual bedding plants in the ornamentation of private grounds.

Class 3—Prize, $20 gold. Subject—Preparation of ground for and general treatment of hardy herbaceous perennials. Naming a list of species (limited to one hundred) providing a succession of flowers throughout the entire season.

Class 4—Prize, $20 gold. Subject—How to secure a year's vegetable supply with the aid of cold frames or hotbeds (but no greenhouses), including soil preparation.

The contest is open to professional gardeners, who are engaged in the capacities of superintendents, head gardeners or assistant gardeners. The contest closes on October 1. The judges, consisting of three gardeners and two representatives of the horticultural press, appointed by the Essay Committee, will report their decision at the next convention, which will occur the first week of December. Full particulars will be furnished by William H. Waite, Chairman Essay Committee, National Association of Gardeners, P. O. Box 290, Madison, N. J., to whom all inquiries should be addressed.

At the meeting of the Executive Board, held in New York recently, it was voted, in response to an invitation from William Kleinheinz, chairman of committee to secure private growers' exhibits for the Fourth National Flower Show, to be held in Philadelphia, March, 1916, to co-operate with the Society of American Florists to make the show a success.

President Everitt has appointed a committee on Protection of Native Birds, which includes the following members: L. P. Jensen, St. Louis, Mo., chairman; David F. Roy, Marion, Mass.; Lester E. Ortis, Bernardsville, N. J.; Robert Williamson, Greenwich, Conn.; Frank R. Kuehne, Lake Forest, Ill. Chairman Jensen reports that the committee has secured the co-operation of Dr. H. W. Henshaw, Chief of the United States Bureau of Biological Survey, in its work on bird preservation.

Members of the National Association of Gardeners will join the American Association of Park Superintendents in its trip to San Francisco, to attend the N. A. G. summer meeting, which will be held in that city during the third week of August.

WESTCHESTER AND FAIRFIELD HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

At the meeting of this society April 9th, Henry Wild read a paper on "Perennial Gardens," and Oscar Addor read one of his inimitable accounts of the "Conquest of Rye," a very clever satirical allusion to the various efforts for supremacy among the members at the annual outing, the monthly competitions, etc., all of which is supposed

WINDOW BOXES.

No part of the florists' business is so far behind its opportunities as that of which the accompanying illustration is an example. As has been repeatedly said, every city in this country is away behind those of Europe, where the use of growing plants for exterior adornment of business houses as well as residences is very general. This lack is not entirely due to the florist. If the public should come forward with a demand for more of this sort of work the florist would undoubtedly respond with alacrity. The point we wish to emphasize is that the florist can and should increase his business in this department by a special campaign and persistent publicity work in the proper season. There is nothing unreasonable in the proposition that ten times the quantity of window box and veranda stock now sold might be disposed of to advantage by the exercise of due enterprise on the part of the dealers in such material.

to have happened in the 15th century. There was a very large attendance.

The following members were appointed as the Summer Show Committee: Robert Williamson, Alfred Nichols, Robert Grunnert, P. H. Flaherty, William Whittin, all of Greenwich, Conn. William Smith of Portchester, manager. Fall Show Committee: Anton S. Peterson, James Foster; A. Wynne, John S. Burns, Owen A. Hunnick, Alex. Geddes, all of Stanford, Conn. Henry Wild, manager. Liberal prizes have been offered by A. N. Pierson Co., for a group of cut flowers, of chrysanthemums, any or all types arranged for effect. In the writer's opinion this idea could be worked out to be a very attractive and decorative feature, and attract more attention than the old stereotyped arrangement in glasses and bottles. The competition for the prize offered by A. L. Rickards of the Stump & Walter Co., for the best exhibit at this meeting, caused a remarkably fine display. The prize was awarded to Robert Williamson for a splendid specimen of Coelogyne cristata. The awards of the judges were: Adiantum Williamsii, from James Foster, honorable mention; Robert Williamson, for specimen pelargonium, vote of thanks; antirrhinums from Alex. Geddes, honorable mention; Robert Grunnert for Carnation Benora and Rose Sunburst, vote of thanks; specimen azalea from Louis Wittman, vote of thanks; P. W. Popp, Rhododendron Pink Pearl, honorable mention; tulips from Emil Leonore, vote of thanks. Geo. E. Baldwin Co. received honorable mention for Dendrobium thrysiflorum; Celsia cretica from John Andrew, vote of thanks; stocks from Peter Cruse, honorable mention. A paper on Dahlia Culture by P. W. Popp, will be read at the next meeting, May 14th.

FOR A NATIONAL DAHLIA SOCIETY.

Richard Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., announces that he expects to organize a National Dahlia Society in New York City on Monday, May 10th, when a meeting will be called at 2 P. M. at the Hotel Earlington, 57 West 27th street. This will be on the afternoon of the regular meeting of the New York Florists' Club, which meets in the evening and the time has been selected for the convenience of those who may wish to attend both meetings. Among the gentlemen and firms who have signified their intention of supporting the movement are J. K. Alexander, W. W. Wilmore, George L. Stillman, Thomas W. Head, John Lewis Childs, Geo. W. Kerr, Hugo Kind, H. A. Dreer, C. Betscher and others.

Mr. Vincent solicits suggestions and views from any and all who are interested in this endeavor to establish an organization which shall worthily represent the interests of the dahlia. HORTICULTURE extends best wishes for the success of the project.

HORTICULTURE INDISPENSABLE

The following examples of many approving letters received at the office of HORTICULTURE during the past few weeks, show why HORTICULTURE is so valuable as an advertising medium. Intensive circulation is HORTICULTURE'S best quality and practically every reader is a possible customer for the advertiser.

Gentlemen:—Last week's HORTICULTURE is not received. Have you scratched me off your list, or what is the matter? Appreciate your paper more than any of half a dozen I am receiving, and don't want to miss any copies. Will you please investigate?

Yours truly,
Missouri. A. B. K.

Gentlemen:—It is getting late in the season and we wish to discontinue the advertisements which we carry in your paper. We would say that the advertisements which we have carried in your paper have brought us good results, and we feel that the money so expended was well invested.

Yours truly,

Kindly discontinue my advertisement in the classified advertisement section of HORTICULTURE, rendering bill to date.

Yours is a very good advertising medium. We have rid ourselves of practically all our surplus stock, and are therefore obliged to discontinue.

ST. LOUIS FLORISTS' PETITION.

We, the undersigned florists and landscape architects of St. Louis, in view of the great success in other important cities of the plan of appointing a landscape architect to the office of park commissioner, and especially in view of the city's present crippled finances, which denied Park Commissioner Davis the assistance of a landscape architect during the latter part of his term, do hereby urgently request that the next park commissioner of St. Louis be a landscape architect and do recommend heartily for that important office Mr. Henry C. Muskopf.

THE S. A. F. AS A BUSINESS HELP.

A florists' supply house has written the following to Secretary Young of the S. A. F.

"Kindly credit this check for dues and forward button at the earliest possible date, as the writer expects to go on the road shortly and he expects the little button to open the door in many places. We have found this button has really meant something to us in associating and identifying us with the florists."

A word to the wise should be sufficient. It costs money and business to stay out of the S. A. F. today.

PORTLAND FLORISTS TO ORGANIZE.

The efforts that have been made by the florists of Portland, Me., and vicinity to form an organization for their mutual benefit will culminate in a meeting to be held at Stroudwater Grange Hall next Monday night, when there will be a banquet, social session, election of officers and the adoption of by-laws and regulations governing the new association. The committee which has charge of arrangements is composed of Mrs. Lizzie Bennett, Miss Marion McGunigle, Ernest Conant and Alex Skillin.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

E. H. Wilson, of the Arnold Arboretum, Boston, will be the speaker before the next meeting of the New York Florists' Club, Monday, May 10. Mr. Wilson's subject will be "Gardens and Flora of Japan," illustrated by lantern slides.

The Albemarle Garden Club, composed of ladies of Charlottesville, Va., will have a discussion on Roses, proper soil, location, varieties and diseases and a talk on the trial rose gardens at Arlington on Friday, April 23. Any of our readers interested should communicate with Mrs. Russell Bradford, secretary of the club.

At the meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Society on Monday evening, R. Witterstaetter showed his new climbing rose, a dark pink sport of Tausendschoen. The florists present were greatly impressed by its general excellence. A communication from the St. Louis Florist Club relative to the American Carnation Society meeting in St. Louis next year was read.

The New London (Conn.) Horticultural Society met in the Council Chamber of the Municipal Building on the 8th inst. After the minutes had been read, members who attended the New York show told what they had seen and their opinion of the show in general. Prof. E. H. Jenkins, director of the New Haven Experiment Station, then spoke on Fertilizers for the Orchard. Cut flowers were shown by Alfred Flowers, and schizanthus and stock plants by John Malona and Stanley Jordan. H. E. L.

Dr. Robert Huey will give an illustrated lecture on Roses before the Lansdowne Natural History Club on the evening of Tuesday, April 27th. As is well known Dr. Huey is one of our greatest living authorities on the merits of the different varieties of outdoor roses suitable for this climate. The meeting will be held in the hall of the Twentieth Century Club, adjoining Lansdowne station, P. R. R., seven miles from Broad street. Admission free. George L. Pennock, president of the club, will act as chairman of the meeting.

The St. Louis Florist Club meeting on Thursday, April 8th, was rather poorly attended and very little business was transacted. President Bourdet appointed C. Bergestermann on the Annemann committee in place of R. J. Windler, resigned. Mr. Windler also announced that he had resigned as state vice-president of the S. A. F., owing to the fact that he is about to leave the city. A committee was appointed to draw up resolutions on the death of Geo. R. Frow. After this a general talk on the Easter business was taken up. A discussion of questions for the box brought the meeting to a close.

The regular annual meeting of the New Jersey Horticultural Society was held in Orange on April 5. Joseph A. Manda offered a prize of $5.00 to be used at the fall show. Letters were read from Stump & Walter Co., offering cup; Henry A. Dreer, offering a prize of $5.00; also the Bon Arbor Chemical Co. A vote of thanks was tendered to all. Awards for the evening were as follows: Max Schneider, carnations, 75 points; sweet peas, 70 points; stocks, 95 points; Cineraria stellata, 90 points; Emil Panuska, cinerarias, 78 points; Arthur Jackson, violets, 70 points.

GEORGE M. STRANGE, Sec.

At the meeting of the Connecticut Horticultural Society in the county building, Hartford, last Friday evening, after the routine business was transacted, the members were entertained by John F. Huss, who told what he saw at the New York flower show in March. He gave a minute description of the different exhibits, speaking particularly of the rose gardens of F. R. Pierson of Tarrytown-on-Hudson and A. N. Pierson, of Cromwell, and the exhibit of orchids by Julius Roehrs of New Jersey. John Gerard of New Britain, who has made a side line of flower seeds for many years, especially pansy seeds, said he should advise all to save their own seed this year. While last year he handled several thousand dollars' worth of pansy seed, this year, on account of the war, he could not get a single seed.

DURING RECESS.New Bedford Horticultural Society.

The annual banquet of the New Bedford Horticultural Society was held at the Parker House on the evening of April 8th. Seventy-seven members and their friends were present. Congressman Walsh was the guest of honor and made a few appropriate remarks. These were followed by short timely remarks by President Roy and Chairman Barrows of the entertainment committee. The profusion of flowers, decorative plants and their artistic arrangement was a notable feature. President Roy contributed a few very fine plants. Others were furnished by Post & Gray, James Garthley and others.

When dinner had been completed a most enjoyable musical program was rendered. There were many selections upon a Victrola and solos by Miss Mabel E. Roy, Miss A. M. Murphy, John P. Rooney, and Louis W. Macy. Harry Wooley gave entertaining recitations. Miss Grace Peirce and Miss A. E. Rooney accompanied the soloists upon the piano.

Mr. Barrows, William M. Post and James McVickar were the entertainment committee.

LICENSE TO PEDDLE.

In our issue of last week, page 494, under the above heading, we published a communication from a subscriber asking if the city of Haverhill had the right to ask a fee for the privilege of selling plants, vegetables and other farm produce raised by himself. We advised the writer to conform to the ordinance of the city regulating the same, which brings forth the following query:

Fall River, Mass., April 13, 1915.

Editor of HORTICULTURE:

In regard to "License to Peddle," I have an impression (Is it correct?) that a Massachusetts law provides for free and unobstructed sale of all products of the soil of the State. If I am correct, has a town or city a right to pass an ordinance in any way abridging this right given by State law?

FRANK BUFFINTON.

In answer to above we quote an extract from Chapter 65 of the revised laws of the State of Massachusetts as amended up to the present time:

Section 15. [As amended by chapter 377, Acts of 1905, and chapter 345, Acts of 1906.] Hawkers and pedlars may sell without a license books, newspapers, pamphlets, fuel, provisions, ice, live animals, brooms, agricultural implements, hand tools used in making boots and shoes, and the products of their own labor or of the labor of their families, including among such products fruits and agricultural products, if such sale is not made in violation of an ordinance or by-law of the city or town. Cities and towns, may by ordinance or by-law not inconsistent with the provisions of this chapter regulate the sale and exposing for sale by hawkers and pedlars of said articles, and may fix penalties for the violation of such regulations; and may require hawkers and pedlars of fruit and vegetables to be licensed, provided that the license fee does not exceed that prescribed by section nineteen of chapter sixty-five of the Revised Laws for a license embracing the same territorial limits. But a person engaged in the pursuit of agriculture who peddles fruits and vegetables shall not be deemed a hawker or pedlar under the provisions of this chapter.

It would seem from the foregoing that while a farmer has the right to peddle his own products such as fruit and vegetables without a license the sale of plants is not mentioned in the act, and from the best legal advice obtainable any one desiring to peddle plants, etc. would come within the jurisdiction of the ordinance or by-law, regulating the sale of same, in the city or town in which he desired to peddle them.

SEED TRADE

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION

Officers—President, Lester L. Morse, San Francisco, Calif.; First Vice President, J. M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I.; Second Vice President, F. C. Dungan, Philadelphia, Pa.; Secretary and Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.; Assistant Secretary, S. I. Willard, Jr., Cleveland, O.

Don't Miss San Francisco.

The warm weather of the past week has had a marked effect on the retail seed business and center trade has been in full swing for almost the entire week. It seems to be the judgment that trade will continue until late in the season because of its late start. No doubt it will continue somewhat later than some seasons, but it will be a more or less scattering business that will come to the seedsmen after June 1st, and it should not be an effective excuse to prevent anyone from going to the Convention at San Francisco. We all know that if we want an excuse for not doing a thing, how readily one comes to hand and already certain seedsmen are offering this matter of late June business as the reason why they will not be able to go to the coast. It might be well to say just a word with reference to the special train which S. F. Leonard is endeavoring to secure over the Santa Fe Railroad. We understand that if Mr. Leonard can sell 125 tickets that the Santa Fe will grant the seedsmen a special, in all essential respects a duplicate of their famous Santa Fe Limited. It would certainly be very desirable if this could be done.

The Itinerary.

We are a little late in publishing the train schedule and itinerary of the trip, but will endeavor to give this information as fully as possible in this issue and in succeeding issues should changes be made. We quote from letter of March 4th to the Chairman of the Transportation Committee, American Seed Trade Association:

THE ATCHISON, TOPEKA AND SANTA FE RAILWAY SYSTEM.

Dear Sir: Referring to conversation today with our Mr. Moriarty regarding proposed trip of members of above Association from Chgo. to San Francisco.

I am enclosing herewith an itinerary covering the trip with stops as suggested. For this special train we will provide following equipment which is a duplicate of the Santa Fe California Limited: Observation Pullman, Group Buffet and Drawing Rooms as well as special sleepers. Dinner on Santa Fe lines for the trip. Library Club car.

The railway fares are as follows going via one direct line, or as per itinerary and returning any other direct line, the return via Portland will be $17.50 additional. The side trip, Williams to the Grand Canyon and return, is $7.50 additional.

Cautious Contracting.

Contracting of future requirements by the trade, according to the reports of growers is somewhat below other years. Whether the seed trade is becoming affected by the general fear of business depression or for other reasons it is difficult to say but the facts speak for themselves. Many of the items which dealers have been expecting from Europe have been very late in arriving, many too late to be of use in this year's business. They are liable to prove very useful another season, however, and while the trade was somewhat embarrassed this year by the non-arrival of goods which they urgently needed, they are generally quite reconciled to carry them over into another year as the sentiment generally is that these items will be much scarcer and higher in price than at present.

Seed Potatoes and Onion Sets.

Seed potatoes and onion sets are two items that are worrying the trade who deal largely in them considerably at the present time. Both have experienced a severe sinking spell in the matter of prices, and it looks very much as if the bottom had dropped out, especially of onion sets. On the other hand there has been quite a stiffening in the price of large onions and select stock is bringing from 75c. to $1.00 per barrel more than a few weeks ago. The effect of this has been promptly shown by an increase in the demand for onion seed, and the trade has been active in this item for the past two weeks. This change has been somewhat of an agreeable surprise to the trade, and as there have been very few pleasant surprises this year, it is all the more appreciated.

Chicago Seed Notes.

The Leonard Seed Co., looking at the season just closing from the standpoint of a big wholesale establishment, regards the past season as one of very fair returns. Prices have been normal and sales along all lines have moved the stock steadily. Onion sets were practically closed out the first week in April. The few left in this market are selling now at $1.50 per bushel for white, and $1.25 for red and yellow. Some of the growers have small lots left, enough to supply a limited quantity for any shortage that may develop in the local retail trade.

Counter trade is a little slow in starting in Chicago owing to the lack of the warm days usually interspersed with the cold ones. While trees and shrubs are about up to date in leaf

"FLOWERS BY TELEGRAPH"

Of Interest to Retail FloristsGLUTS.

Much has been prated about this chronic disease of the flower industry and as yet but little improvement has been effected. Undoubtedly the grower bears the brunt of an excessive surplus, it being but little in his power to alleviate the condition. A liberal co-operation between the retailer and grower is evidently the best foundation for a cure. If for no other reason than that of material advantage to himself, the retail florist ought to pay some attention to this problem. An over-supply of roses, carnations or some other flower should make it easy to put on a special sale. That portion of the public which buys flowers only at the holiday seasons hardly realizes that prices are lower at other times of the year and are thus reluctant to enter a florist shop for fear of the high prices which they imagine exist at all times. The best way to increase the demand during a state of "glut" is to take your public into your confidence and clearly explain to them the condition of the market. Otherwise an advertised sale of flowers is liable to convey the impression of a cheaper quality being sold. I do not believe in selling flowers at cut-prices or bargain sales all the time, but there are seasons in the year when market prices are so low that the retailer can sell his stock cheaply and still make a fair profit. Every person who is induced to buy flowers for the first time because of the low prices will some day be a complete convert to their use. So the streetboy who sells violets at 25c. a bunch and roses at 2c. each is really a factor in the floral education of the public.

ONE WAY TO ADVERTISE.

It is a good thing to carry the spirit of one's establishment right into the home. A printed slip containing directions how to care for the flowers and inserted in every box is much appreciated by the recipient and gives an impression of thoughtfulness and a desire to serve. Many florists also make a practice of pasting on the inside cover of every box a note explaining the telegraph delivery system, which even at this late day remains a mystery to thousands of flower buyers.
Make every recipient of your flowers your customer in this way.

NEWS ITEMS FROM EVERYWHERE

BOSTON.

Henry Penn is formulating plans for a trip across the continent to San Francisco.

Some fine orange blossoms are being cut by B. P. Winch of Framingham. When orange blossoms are wanted they are wanted badly.

W. E. Ward of Quincy, who specializes to some extent on pansies, practically controls the local market, sending in over 5,000 blooms daily.

Carnation Morning Glow, from Ed. Winkler of Wakefield, is proving to be a fine keeper, well fitted for long distance shipments. It seems to be a very prolific bloomer.

The next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club comes April 20. An interesting lecture on "Some facts about banking that florists ought to know" is promised by H. Howard Pepper.

Philip L. Carbone enjoyed a very successful trip to the Pacific Coast, where he visited the World's Fair at San Francisco. He has just recently returned, in time to take part in the Easter hustle.

The special strain of "silver-pink" snapdragon grown by F. Southworth of Lynn has enjoyed a merited popularity in this market. Mr. Southworth specializes on snapdragon and is developing some promising strains.

Violets are still coming into the markets and are of surprisingly good quality, considering the lateness of the season. Kidder Bros. of Lincoln and Ed. Bingham of Dedham are picking singles that come very near to being mid-season grades.

Gov. Walsh has issued a proclamation designating Saturday, April 24, as Arbor Day. He urges all the citizens, old and young, to do their part to make the day, and all other days during the planting days, of advantage to the Commonwealth. In his proclamation he says:—

"To the first settlers the magnificent forests of New England were mainly a menace and an impediment—the lurking places of savage foes and cumberers of the lands needed for agriculture.

"By following generations the forests have been heedlessly exploited for immediate gain, with too little regard for consequences to soil and climate and to the rights of posterity.

"It is for us now to redeem as far as may be former errors, to re clothe stony and infertile wastes with valuable timber, to develop our unexcelled orchard resources, to beautify our landscapes, and to line our highways with a grateful shade."

SAN FRANCISCO

The regular monthly meeting of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society, usually held the first Saturday, was postponed one week because of the nearness of that date to Easter.

The Walla Walla Hothouse Co., of Walla Walla, Wash., of which F. E. Mojoiner is president, has leased quarters at East Main and Palouse streets and opened for business in that location.

Preparations are under way for converting the Richmond Fernery, 473 32d avenue, which has been operated as a wholesale growing place by Henry J. Kessel, into a retail plant yard. The change will necessitate the reconstruction of the establishment, the work to be done this summer.

B. M. Joseph, of Joseph's, on Grant avenue, says they are getting quite a bit of business, which can be attributed directly to the exposition. Besides decorative work in conjunction with exposition events, his house is delivering many orders for cut flowers to out-of-town visitors upon their arrival here. Mr. Joseph looks for the latter class of trade to increase rapidly with the beginning of heavy traffic from the East.

CHICAGO.

A Tragic Event.

The tragic ending of the life of the jovial William Weil at the close of Easter Day, was made still sadder when it was found that his murderers include two former employees, one of whom worked for him during the holidays. It seems that one of the three young men had a key to the store and according to the confession made by one of them, the store had been frequently searched for money during Mr. Weil's absence. This time they waited for his coming, believing that he had the money from his Easter sales still with him which was the case. The exact amount has not been determined. Mr. Weil had done business for many years at 421 W. Sixty-third street, where he also lived and was known for his generosity to churches and clubs. His store has been taken over temporarily by the Garfield Flower Shop who have a store at 211 E. Garfield Boulevard.

Harmony.

The Cook County Florists' Association is now of the past. At a meeting at the Bismarck Hotel on April 8, it formally disbanded after an existence of about three years. At a meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club, the same evening at the same place, former members of the Cook County Florists' Association, in good standing were voted into the Chicago Florists' Club in a body with dues paid to July 1. The money left in the treasury of the defunct organization, after obligations are met, will be used for a joint banquet probably in May.

Tree Planting.

Some definite work is being done to encourage tree planting this spring, especially where parkways are wide enough to afford space for water to reach the roots of the trees. Through the influence of J. H. Prost, of the Special Park Commission, trees were secured from the city nurseries, for free distribution in Irving Park. According to the agreement, trees must be planted in parkways only and ex-

Notes.

Two hundred vacant lots were assigned last week, to applicants for garden purposes. The demand for these lots is far ahead of the number to be offered. The small farms movement is getting under way and something definite will soon be arranged.

The incorporation of the Napierville Nurseries, April 1st, adds another to the long list in and about Chicago. Helen Von Oven, and Frederick and Emma Von Oven comprise the firm.

Fred Lautenschlager is expected home from the east about April 20th, where he has spent several weeks in the interests of Kroeschell Brothers, gathering in the orders. Two more boilers were added to the number already sent to England by this firm.

Miss Harper of the Bassett & Washburn office force had the misfortune to have her hand seriously injured on an elevated train, when the guard closed the door upon it. The slipping out of joint of one of the small bones near the wrist, saved breaking of the arm but it was extremely painful. No settlement has been made as yet by the railway company. To some it would have been fortunate that the left hand was the one injured, but to her it is unfortunate as she is left-handed.

WASHINGTON.

Mrs. J. A. Philipps, of the Flower Shop, has gone near Sycamore Island, in Virginia, for a short rest.

Fred H. Kramer can now boast of having in his employ a young man who can readily qualify as a good amateur boxer, for Wilbur I. Doty, his chauffeur, did valiant work recently in capturing a man giving his name as Joseph R. Rollins, whom he caught in the act of scaling the partition that encloses Mr. Kramer's private office. Another man, said to have been working with Rollins, was captured later.

of the Grand Army of the Republic are progressing in a very satisfactory manner and a large number of florists are on the various committees on which they hold important positions. It is expected that this will be the last encampment of the old soldiers that will ever be held. A number of veterans engaged in the florist business are expected to come with their old regiments.

Charles Scarborough, an employee of Gude Bros. Company, has gone to his father's place in Philadelphia to recuperate following a serious accident caused by being struck by a trolley car, in which it is feared that several of his ribs may have been fractured. Another of the employees of this firm who is unable to perform his usual duties is Earl Wilson who is suffering from a badly poisoned arm and hand due to handling American Beauty roses which had been sprayed with a poisonous liquid. He is in quite bad shape.

PITTSBURGH.

H. E. Graves, of the Zieger Company, has returned from a visit to his former home in Beloit, Ohio.

Ernest Guter, who has charge of the Richard Beatty Mellon estate on Fifth avenue and Beechwood boulevard, is seriously ill with pneumonia.

The usual reaction has followed Easter, and were it not for the unusual amount of funeral work, the week would have been "too dull for words." The wholesale houses have been fairly glutted with plants and cut flowers, "the finest in the land, too." One local house is shortly to begin some extensive additions to its nursery department, but not wanting to be flooded prematurely with agents, will make no announcement of the fact until absolutely necessary, which practically means until "the fact leaks out."

Superintendent William Allen, of the Homewood Cemetery, and J. Gerry Curtis, borough forester for Sewickley, Wilkinsburg and Dormont, who are largely responsible for the Vacant Lot movement, which is just assuming proportions in this city, have been appointed chairmen respectively of the two sub-committees of the Civic Club of Allegheny County in charge. Mr. Curtis is also now in charge of "Solidude," the Pittsburgh estate of the late George Westinghouse in Homewood, and, with his family, moved there the first of April. He came here from Boston a few years ago as assistant chairman of the Tree Planting Commission, which work was abolished by councils last year, and has offices in the Farmers' Bank Building. Mr. Curtis received his technical training at the Massachusetts Agricultural College at Amherst.

ST. LOUIS.

Arbor Day was celebrated by the city officials, who, headed by Mayor Kirl, planted 100 trees in Fair Ground Park Friday, April 9.

Otto G. Koenig, well known in trade circles, was elected alderman at an election held Tuesday, April 13. He went in with the rest of the big Republican victory.

Nelson Conliff, who was chief engineer of the City Park Department, was on April 10 appointed park commissioner to succeed Dwight F. Davis by Director of Public Welfare Tolkaez.

R. J. Windler, with his family, will leave St. Louis May 1 to make their home in Chicago, having leased one of the places owned by Adam Zender, his father-in-law, at Rodgers Park, where he will grow cut flowers for this market.

New York—The collapse of the steel underpinning supporting the sidewalk and building line in the new subway constructions in Broadway between 28th and 29th street late last Monday afternoon dropped the sidewalk four inches, caused a panic among the workmen under the street and spread an alarm among pedestrians. A score of policemen were kept busy stilling the cries of fear and blocking off the threatened section of the street. Fifty occupants in Oestreich Brothers' store at No. 1191 Broadway and in the florist shop of Warendorff at No. 1193 were conducted to places of safety. The ceilings of these offices were found to be cracked.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON The market is in a state of absolute stagnation at present. Roses and carnations are very plentiful and of good quality, but the demand has fallen off badly, leaving the flower market stalls piled high with stock several days old. Friday and Saturday of last week were fairly active. This week so far has been very dull. Violets are still to be seen and are of rather poor quality, nevertheless retailers are still finding a ready sale for these. Excellent pansies and daisies are being cut. They are moving faster than most other stock at present. Bulbous stock is showing signs of "petering out" and is moving but slowly. Hundreds of plants left over from Easter are still hanging on and find few buyers. In short—business is poor.

BUFFALO Easter Monday's business opened up quite brisk, receipts were not too heavy and there was a general call for about everything along the line, but during the week there were heavy receipts and business dropping off 50 per cent. Roses were in heavy supply. Beauties of all grades fell in price as did carnations. There were the usual after-Easter lily bargains and no let up on daffodils, tulips, and other bulbous stock. A big surplus was left at the end of each day's business. Floral work has been the lightest since the Lenten days began and ended.

CHICAGO The least said of this market the better. Such a complete cessation of business as has followed Easter has not been known by some of those longest in the trade, according to their statements. The reasons are not difficult to locate. Quite a few retailers had plants left over and naturally pushed their sales of these ahead of cut flowers. Bright sunshine and moderate temperature followed Easter Sunday and brought out a big supply just when there was the least demand for it and in two or three days ice boxes and counters were filled to overflowing. Department stores took advantage and bought at prices that can be imagined when they sold good roses of medium length for 12 cents per dozen. This worked off stock for the wholesalers but also put an end to any business by the downtown florists. The out-of-town orders have fallen off to such a degree as to indicate that trade is dull in the middle west generally. All kinds of stock is of excellent quality and trade will no doubt soon be normal again, but at this writing customers on the spot can buy at their own price. Thousand rates are quoted on both carnations and roses.

CINCINNATI The market is badly glutted with flowers. Every seasonable line is in an oversupply owing to the heavy receipts and a decided falling off in the demand for stock. Shipping business, however, is pretty fair. Roses of all kinds, carnations and lilies are to be had in quantities larger than at any previous time this year. Sweet peas continue in a heavy supply and are good, but they as well as the other offerings bring very small returns. The bulbous stock cut is large. Other offerings include lily of the valley, orchids, antirrhinum, callas and rubrum lilies. Smilax receipts are limited and hardly suffice for present needs.

NEW YORK There are no words that can describe adequately the market conditions here at the present time. We cannot mention anything that is not overplentiful and in which the supply does not exceed the demand. It is no longer a question of price asked as almost every commission house is compelled to sell out each morning the accumulation of carried-over stock in their ice boxes for a lump sum, and this lump sum is generally $25 and seldom exceeds $50. Carnations are plentiful at $10 per thousand. American Beauties, the very best grade, is selling at 5c., with 12c. the asking price for the very best. Lily of the valley, as a general rule, is of very poor quality and in many cases is unsaleable. Tulips, daffodils and jonquils are very plentiful. Southern daffodils and jonquils are arriving in huge quantities and cannot be sold for the express charges. Even all higher grade roses and novelties are accumulating and they suffer with other stock, as far as prices are concerned and are included in the "job lots." Gardenias are abundant and of excellent quality. One can easily realize the condition of the gardenia market when many street venders are seen on Fifth avenue selling the highest grade blooms for 5c. and 10c. each. Cattleyas, too, are plentiful, Schroderea selling from 15c. to 25c.; Mossiae, from 40c. to 75c., with a few exceptionally fine Gigas selling at $1. Trianea is selling from 40c. to 60c. Oncidium, 6c to 8c. Southern asparagus is arriving in large quantities, but is being affected much by the weather and drops very badly. Snapdragon of very fine quality is moving very slowly, 35c. per bunch. Sweet peas are almost as plentiful as in the summer season, the finest Spencers being sold 25c. to 75c. per dozen bunches. It is difficult to move sweet peas of the older types. Veterans in the business claim that they have never seen the market so dull and overstocked as at present. Easter lilies are seen everywhere, many houses still carrying over stock from Easter and it not unusual to see small lots sold as low as $1 per hundred.

PHILADELPHIA We regret to have to report one of the worst weeks on record for this city. Monday after Easter the retailers were stocked up with left-overs from the Saturday blizzard—and would not buy a cent's worth. The daily supplies came in as usual; no takers. Result—a glut for the week. And it still continues at the start of this new week and it looks as if we were in for another bad one. Enormous supplies of splendid flowers and not enough business to absorb one-half. We are not built right to write right on a painful subject, so we cut the painful story short. Spanish iris, ixias and gladioli are the latest newcomers.

SAN FRANCISCO The usual post-holiday condition of trade prevails here this week. There is no special activity in any line, but there is little inclination to complain, as Easter business on the whole was well up to expectations and a reaction is to be expected for a few days following holidays such as Easter when flowers are used in great abundance. Retailers bought rather conservatively and a little better than normal demand cleaned up their stocks almost entirely. The result was hardly so satisfactory for the wholesalers, though the surplus of good stock was not large as compared to last year. Rambler roses had a splendid call and the supply of potted lilies was barely sufficient to meet the demand, while a good many cut lilies were held over. All kinds of cut flowers are in good supply. Some fine specimens of American Beauties have appeared since Easter, also a good many short stems which are being sold at easy prices. Baby roses are being shown in abundance, and there is a little shading of prices, not to any extent, however, as the demand is fairly good. Cecile Brunner roses are more plentiful and prices are easier than they were a week ago. Tulips continue to bring good prices in face of bountiful supplies. Sweet peas and carnations are the weakest items at present, both being in ample supply, with only a moderate demand. The call for sweet peas is mostly for Spencers. Gardenias cleaned up well at Easter time and the supply has been limited since.

ST. LOUIS The market during the past week was in bad condition, demand slow, great quantities of everything, and prices lower than for the past six months. Prices were quoted in thousand lots on which the down town retailers could hardly resist if only bought for show. Roses at $10 per 1000—and good stock at that. Carnations $7.50 per 1000. Sweet peas $2 per 1000, and so on down the line. These conditions promise to continue this week from the looks of the market on this Monday morning, April 12.

WASHINGTON Florists are unanimous in the conviction that the Easter business of this year proved of greater success than for many preceding years regardless of all handicaps of competition and weather. Since Easter the mercury has been climbing and it is now like midsummer. This has caused an overproduction of flowers and added to the woes of this the public is demanding the use of the many spring blossoms such as forsythia and outdoor magnolias. There is absolutely no market for such flowers as American Beauty roses, snapdragon, and similar stock. Roses, carnations, sweet peas and bulbous flowers are absolutely without price, although some of the houses are endeavoring to keep the market more uniform. Lily of the valley holds its own, and this same applies to orchids and violets because of their scarcity, but aside from these, the bidder's offer is usually accepted.

CREDIT PROTECTION.

HORTICULTURE Publishing Company:

Have just been reading Henry Penn's very interesting article in your columns entitled "The protection of credit." If all the retail florists held the same liberal and fair attitude towards the growers that Mr. Penn does, there would certainly be a wonderful improvement in the florist business. The question of credit is one of the most pertinent ones we have to deal with today. It is certainly an outrage the way unscrupulous dealers have failed up, pay their creditors little or nothing, and then start in business again. Such men are the greatest menace to our business. I think every fair-minded person will agree with Mr. Penn that the honest retailer has nothing to fear from a protective organization of growers. There is plenty of competition in our business today, and a man has to be a skilful grower and hard worker to make his business a success. He can ill afford the losses caused by failures which we have all too frequently.

Yours very truly,

ERNEST BOROWSKI.

It presents an interesting record of the work of the society during 1914, gives valuable lists of varieties registered all over the world and includes a number of instructive papers by men of wide repute in the carnation field. The editor is J. S. Brunton.

Bulletin No. 12 of the American Association of Park Superintendents, on "Concessions and Privileges in Public Parks," gives a summary of methods in operation in various American cities, with comments by members. John C. Olmsted of Brookline, Mass., Theodore Wirth, Minneapolis, George Champion, Winnipeg, J. W. Duncan, Spokane, F. C. Alber, Cleveland, John McLaren, San Francisco, F. C. Steinhauer, Denver, E. T. Mische, Portland, Ore., and several others contribute interesting information.

RESERVOIR VASES.

M. D. Jones Co., of Boston, are making a specialty of "reservoir" vases for cemetery and lawn floral decorations. These vases are so constructed that after being once watered, the earth will keep moist a long time and yet the roots of the plants do not come in direct contact with the water underneath, while there is still abundant room for soil and roots, a condition which other reservoir vases do not always provide for. The accompanying picture shows one of many patterns and sizes, all of which are described in the M. D. Jones Co.'s catalogue which may be had for the asking.

A NEW PASTIME.

Following a trail of uprooted valuable young trees in Riverside Park extending from 143d street to 146th street, Christopher McGuire, the park keeper, last night found Joseph Blake about to weed out a group of the most highly prized Japanese shrubs along Riverside Drive.

"Hi, there, what are you doing?" called McGuire.

"Just exercising my back a little," replied Blake, giving a tug to a particularly well-rooted bush. McGuire led him to a foot-thick young ash tree and suggested he haul on that until Patrolman Ornstein of the West 152d street station arrived.

When he was arrested Blake gave his home as under the trees and his occupation as a horticultural engineer. He was locked up charged with malicious mischief and intoxication.

Investigation showed that Blake had uprooted nearly thirty trees and shrubs. The damage was estimated as more than $500. New York Press.

Hammond's Paint & Slug Shot Works, Beacon, N. Y.

Dear Sirs: After trying Thrip Juice No. 2 for two seasons, I can say it is the best article I ever used for thrip on roses or carnations, also for white fly. The latter was the worst pest we had to contend with, but after three applications, about four (4) days apart, we were practically free from it. I find it advisable to apply in the evening, and with a good, strong force pump, proportion one to forty.

WHITEWASHING TREES.

Special Park Commission pamphlet No. 6, edited by City Forester Prost, of Chicago says: "Never whitewash your tree trunks, it plugs up the evaporating pores, thus injuring the health of the tree, is very unsightly and has no beneficial qualities that I know of. It is a violation of the tree ordinance."

Twelve Reasons for Planting Trees.

Trees are beautiful in form and color, inspiring a constant appreciation of nature.

Trees enhance the beauty of architecture.

Trees create sentiment, love of country, state, city and home.

Trees have an educational influence upon citizens of all ages, especially children.

Trees encourage outdoor life.

Trees purify the air.

Trees cool the air in summer and radiate warmth in the winter.

Trees improve climate, conserve soil and moisture.

Trees furnish resting place and shelter for birds.

Trees increase the value of real estate.

Trees protect the pavement from the heat of the sun.

Trees counteract adverse conditions of city life.

DESTRUCTIVE INSECTS INTERCEPTED.

News Letter No. 17, of the Federal Horticultural Board reports the finding of egg masses of the gipsy moth (Porthetria dispar) on cedars from Japan by B. B. Whitney and D. P. T. Macdonald, of California. Cocoons of the dagger moth (Apatela auricoma), family Noctuidæ, have been detected on numerous occasions on miscellaneous nursery stock by inspectors of Ohio, North Carolina and Nebraska. This insect, the larvæ of which appear to be general feeders, is reported to have a very wide distribution in Europe. Some 1,466 pear seedlings from France were found to be infested with the European pear scale (Epidiaspis piricola) by S. C. Clapp, of North Carolina.

SCOTCH SOOT

We offer the genuine in original cwt. Sacks, at:
$4.00 per 112 lbs.; $17.50 per 560 lbs.

Alice Salomon, Mr. Roper's Prize Carnation

K NOW WE, as you growers do, the exceptional work Mr. A. Roper of Taunton, Mass., has done for so many years, in producing and developing new Carnations, you will agree that he is altogether too modest. On the other hand, in these days of modesty, you and we recognize one of the sure indications of this quality right to the enviable prominence he occupies in the carnation world.

For I, Alice Salomon, and everybody else, know that he is one of the finest pink producers in the world. He has won the medals it has been his privilege to win. They said more than ever I was a source of my own flower children.

That Swept the Deck at the Buffalo Show Was Grown in this Hitchings' House

And then Mr. Roper switched from carnations to greenhouse constructions. He spoke of how, after getting facts and figures from other firms on other constructions, he and his son went over to Montrose, Mass., to take a look at Mr. McCarthy's big house. It looked so undeniably good that they concluded then and there to give Hitchings the order.

If you are contemplating building, don't you think it would be a pretty safe thing to see one of our best horticulturists?

If you haven't seen one of our best constructed construction houses, you certainly are not yet ready to decide. Let us arrange with you to visit some of our houses.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Prope.

Cattleyas

Hotter weather will necessitate more ventilation. Give walks and under the benches a more frequent damping. Water whenever the compost appears dry and spray overhead on bright days. Do not keep the shading too dense. Where it is possible shade with lath or canvas so they will have the benefit of the early morning sun and the late afternoon sun, as well as having full light on all sunless days. Keep the plants free from thrips and scale by sponging occasionally with a solution of nicotine extract and also give them a light fumigating once a week. Do not allow them to become scale or bug-ridden before giving attention.

Cibotium Schiedeii

These handsome ferns should always be given an elevated position so as to retain the graceful sweep of their fronds. During the spring they will need lots of moisture both at the roots and in the house. Give them sufficient ventilation and do not keep the house too humid as it makes them very soft. While these ferns like shade they do not want it too heavy. Shading, nine times out of ten, is overdone with all kinds of ferns. Where cibotiums are quite pot-bound now is a good time to give them a weekly liquid feeding. There is nothing better than cow manure, using about a bushel of cow manure in a barrel that holds about fifty gallons of water. Let it stand for about two days and if too strong dilute it some. They can get this about once a week.

Gloxinias

Plants that are coming into bloom should have a temperature of 60 degrees at night with a rise of 10 degrees during the day, but when the flowers are well opened they can be kept 10 degrees cooler. This will make the foliage firmer and the flowers will have greater durability. They should be given a light shade and so situated that they will get a requisite amount of air without draughts. Tubers that have been kept back but are now starting up naturally should be potted, using a mixture of two parts leaf mold and one part fibrous loam and some sand. Be very careful not to wet the foliage any more than is absolutely necessary when watering as they get scorched. The seedlings started early in the year will now be of good size for three-inch pots. These young plants can be shifted as they need it and will grow into nice plants by the late summer. Treat them throughout the season with shade but give plenty of light and moisture.

Propagating Crotons

Place the tall and lanky plants in a warm, close and moist house, and propagate them by mossing. Select the stem and denude of leaves for a distance of 2 or 3 inches. With a sharp knife make an incision upward in the wood of half an inch, and from one-half to one-third through. Place a little sphagnum in the incision to keep it open then put a small quantity of sphagnum about the size of an egg and tie it on. Encourage a moist atmosphere by damping down the house three or four times a day and give daily syringing over the plants to keep the moss wet. Keep the plants rather dry at the roots and in a short time they will be pushing roots through the moss. In about four weeks, under favorable conditions, the roots should be seen coming through the moss, when it is time to sever the tops from the parent plant and pot them and place in a frame where there is gentle bottom heat. Keep the atmosphere well charged with moisture. For a week or two they should be shaded from the sun and care exercised in watering. When the foliage is in no way limp and the plants have the appearance of sturdiness they should be taken out and placed on a bench in a house where the temperature can be maintained at 70 degrees at night.

Plants for Vases, Etc.

Many growers who have these receptacles to fill have only a vague idea as to the amount of stock required. Now is a good time to sum up. The florist who does a general retail plant business adjacent to town or near some leading cemetery, will have many vases to fill. For the center Dracaena indivisa, Chamaerops humilis or any of the Phoenix family. For trailers, Vinca major variegata, Solanum jasminoides, Abutilon vexillarium, nasturtiums, verbenas, German ivy and ivy-leaved geraniums and many others. If plants are required for a shady situation the following selection is good: fuchsias, begonias, Cyperus alternifolius, Ficus elastica, aspidistras, Farfugium grande, selaginellas and ferns. For centers use Phoenix rupicola, Latania borbonica, Areca lutescens and cordylines. For trailers use German ivy, tradescantias, Kenilworth ivy, and Asparagus Sprengeri. Where they will be exposed to the sun the following are very satisfactory: geraniums, coleus, ageratum, acalypha, petunias and dwarf nasturtiums. See that all climbing and drooping plants do not get tangled up.

Shading

All plants such as ferns, palms and foliage plants will now need a denser shade than heretofore. A moderately heavy shade will help to keep down the temperature: a gallon of kerosene to ten pounds of white lead makes a fine mixture to use as it withstands the weather and rains well.

Next Week:—Adiantum; Lorraine and Cincinnati Begonias; Carnations; Ficus elastica; Increasing Fern Stock; P.

A very considerate winter

The condition of vegetation generally around Boston appears to be about normal thus far. Unless some severe freeze should yet interfere there will be a fair showing of wisterias. These climbers are still showing the effects of the two disastrous previous seasons in quantities of dead twigs and more or less irregularity in the presence of flower buds. Prunus pendula is just bursting into bloom and will make up for last spring's poor showing with the most bountiful display of flowers seen in many years. Rhododendron Dahuricum, after several seasons of scanty blooming, is a perfect cloud of lovely pink since April 15th. Even with its uncertainty this is one of the most desirable gems of early spring. Forsythias have never been better than at present and the suburbs are all aglow with the masses of golden bloom. Rhododendrons have come through the winter in first class condition—flower buds are unscathed and a glorious display of flowers is assured for early June. Berberis aquifolium, which suffers more or less injury to its foliage every year is unusually free this year and will also blossom very heavily. H. T. roses have plenty of nice live wood and other things that always get killed back more or less are above the average almost invariably. Altogether, notwithstanding the light snowfall the winter has been unusually kind to the spring flowering shrubbery.

Time to advertise

That a large proportion of the florist and nursery firms growing material to sell to the trade are still weak and backward on the subject of advertising is a fact which is constantly brought home to any one having to do with the trade paper advertising business. Of all the many stereotyped explanations for unwillingness to advertise that which has the least to justify or commend it is the excuse that "business is so bad that I can't afford to advertise. When things are better you'll hear from me." It seems to us that the best time to advertise is when more business is needed and not necessarily when things are booming, but the logic of this proposition falls on deaf ears when tried on some. Persistency is one of the cardinal points that go to make up good advertising and good advertising always pays for itself. He who retrenches when trade is quiet on seasonable stock will surely have the unwelcome fact forced upon him that his more courageous and gamey competitor is forging ahead and making friends and customers whilst he has been standing idle and business once lost to an equally reliable competitor will not be easily regained. Advertising, co-operative or individual, can be made a strong factor in developing business for any occasion or special day but we would respectfully submit that the time of all times in which to invest in newspaper or trade journal publicity is when demand is low and business drags.

Activity on right lines

All well wishers of the horticultural industries must feel pleased and encouraged over the tone and sentiment which now begins to mark the planning for so many of the floral exhibitions. In the city of Lowell, Mass., for instance, they are just after pulling off a splendid exhibition into which the local florists and gardeners entered enthusiastically almost to a man simply on the initiative to advance the standard of their community in the matter of the embellishment of their homes and public grounds and to set before the general public an object lesson as to how their city may be made more beautiful and more desirable as an abiding place. Read the prospectus of the proposed New Orleans exhibition in this paper and note how the same spirit pervades it. There are others and there will be still more of them. The seed that has been sown and sown over and over again has begun to grow and at last the horticultural fraternity begins to see other and better uses for flower shows than simply to display superior cultural skill and win prizes. Experience, so far as it has gone, has also shown that the public are ready to join forces whenever and wherever they discern this new light. Beauty spots, which delight the eye and awaken esthetic taste, lawns and gardens, shrubbery and parks, and playgrounds are all born of the universal sentiment which, when once stirred into activity, is the foundation and mainstay of the great work in which florists, nurserymen and seedsmen and other more or less dependent allied industries are engaged. Every florist, who by force of example on his own property or in the exhibition hall, has helped to arouse public appreciation of these great gifts of nature and kindle a desire to possess them has not only been a party in a great philanthropy but has done material service for the prosperity of the business which yields him a livelihood.

A Rock Garden in Spring

To the enthusiastic lover of flowers there is a fascination about a well-planned rock garden or alpine collection, not exceeded by any other form of gardening. With a suitable location and material, charming effects may be produced and there is a perpetual infatuation in the work of caring for the dainty little occupants of such a work with its daily changing glow and rich diversity of form and color. A few good examples of rock gardening in a neighborhood will suffice to stimulate an immediate and rapid growth in popular favor, for their charm is irresistible for young and old.

The accompanying view shows a corner in the extensive rock and alpine garden on the Goodwin estate at Hartford which is under the management of that devoted and enthusiastic gardener, J. F. Huss. Pictures like this, unfortunately, very inadequately convey the beauty of the scene. On most estates there may be found an appropriate place for the construction of such a delightful accessory to a well ordered flower garden.

An Encouraging Recognition

It is a very hopeful sign when the big influential newspapers of this country, notwithstanding the call upon their space and time, give the thought and the room to editorial notes such as the following. They have the true ring and give voice to the growing appreciation by the American people of all that the horticultural profession holds dear.

SAVE THE FLOWERS

This is the season of the year when everybody is eager to get out into the fields and the open country. It is the one best cure for spring fever. There is a period between the going of cold weather and the coming of warm weather when the inland woods and pastures are more inviting than are the beaches. It is in the good old summertime that there comes to us the greatest charm "out of the cradle endlessly rocking," along the wave-washed shores. This desire to make journeys afield comes just at the time when the spring flowers "do paint the meadows with delight." But, alas! this delight is likely to be short-lived if the flower-pulling vandal chances to pass that way to pick or pull up by the roots every stalk that bears a bloom or bud. He is anything but a lover of flowers who picks them by the bushel to wilt and be thrown away when they might have been allowed to glad the landscape and all who like himself fare forth to enjoy the charms of spring. But little more considerate than those who kill all the birds are they who pick and destroy all the flowers. Happier are they who can answer affirmatively Emerson's questions:

"Hast thou named all the birds without a gun, Found the wood-rose and left it on its stalk?"

—Boston Traveler.

GOD MADE THE COUNTRY

Who in this great town can read the list of subjects they have been discussing at the farmers' institute in Horticultural Hall today and yesterday without longing for the country? One man talked of roses; another discussed pastures, those pastures which the country-bred poet had in mind when he wrote:

I lingered by the pasture bars
From twilight until gloaming;
Till daylight clustered into stars,
An through the clouds went roaming.

Still another told about sweet peas. And there was talk of co-operation among farmers, of pigs, of spraying fruit trees, of hardy flowers, of picture-planting on the lawn and commercial fertilizers.

As the wire edge of winter wears down to the softness of spring the call of the country becomes insistent. The desert that man has made and called a town may be good enough in winter. Then we see starved plants growing on ledges of the stony cliffs we call houses or hotels, as pathetic a sight as a 5-year-old girl in a public dance hall. They have no place there. The blasting winds of winter tear them to pieces and the blistering suns of summer burn the life out of them. But the country! That is the place for living. The green carpet of the earth gladdens the heart, and the sight of growing things that we have planted appeals to something fundamental in us which we deny at the peril of losing our best selves.

We are all farmers at bottom. Man made the town, and it is a splendid example of what man can do, leaving out the glory of the fecund earth. But God, after all, made the great outdoors that we know as the country.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

GARDENERS' AND FLORISTS' CLUB OF BOSTON.

This club held a very pleasant meeting April 20. H. Howard Pepper, of the Industrial Trust Co., Providence, R. I., gave an interesting talk on banking forms and methods under the title, "Tales of a Teller." He touched upon the various faults in the average man's business transactions and suggested their remedies.

A letter of sympathy was sent to Chas. Sander, gardener of the Sargent estate, Brookline, upon the death of his wife. E. J. Ovington, of Newton Centre, briefly explained the results of some experiments that are being made with the "Umetes" which he manufactures.

There were several exhibits on the tables which caused much favorable comment because of their quality. These included calceolias from A. M. Davenport, of Watertown; French hydrangeas, tulips, daffodils, poet's narcissi and a Cattleya hybrid from Faulkner Farm, Brookline; yellow marguerites from Ed. Winkler, of Wakefield; roses from Thos. Roland, Nahant; roses from Montrose Greenhouses; roses from W. H. Elliott, of Brighton, and a vase of Rhododendron praecox from Harvard University Botanic Garden.

The awards were as follows: A report of merit to W. N. Craig for cattleya hybrid, also for French hydrangeas; a vote of thanks to Thos. Roland for vases of roses; A. M. Davenport for calceolarias; Ed. Winkler for marguerites; Eber Holmes for roses; W. H. Elliott for roses; Robert Cameron for Rhododendron praecox.

NASSAU COUNTY HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The regular meeting of the Nassau County N. Y.) Horticultural Society was held Wednesday evening, April 14. The euchre and dance held on April 8 was reported to have been a success in every way. It was agreed to hold three flower shows during the coming season—Rose Show, in the week of June 6; Dahlia Show, October 7; Fall Show, October 28 and 29.

Special prizes for the fall show were received from the following: Hitchings & Co., W. E. Marshall & Co., Stumpp & Walter Co., Vaughan's Seed Store, Pino-Lyptol Co., John Wilk, Weeber & Don, Burnett Bros., Bon Arbor Co., Harry A. Bunyard Co., J. M. Thorburn Co., Peter Henderson & Co., C. H. Totty, Julius Roehrs Co., Lord & Burnham Co., Pierson U-Bar Co., Cottage Gardens Co., Carter's Tested Seeds Co., F. Edmonds, W. R. Kinnear, Rev. J. W. Gammack, E. M. Underhill and Kohler Bros.

Frank Honeyman was awarded first prize for the best vase of roses. Prizes for next meeting will be for three heads of lettuce, three heads of cauliflower and vase of outdoor flowers.

JAMES GLADSTONE, Cor. Sec.

S. A. F. 1915 CONVENTION GARDEN.

At the last meeting of the convention committee of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society, Daniel MacRorie, for the Committee on Convention Garden, reported that the commissioners of the Golden Gate Park had kindly consented to allow the Society of American Florists a portion of the park for a Convention Garden. The site chosen is admirably adapted for the purpose. The commissioners did not limit the Society of American Florists to space, making it possible for exhibitors to make their displays as liberal as they may desire. Florists, seedsmen, nurserymen and gardeners from all parts are invited to exhibit. The care of the Convention Garden will be in charge of John McLaren, superintendent of Golden Gate Park, San Francisco, thereby assuring exhibits of the best of care and attention.

We would advise intending exhibitors to eliminate sub-tropical plants, such as cannas, etc., as they do not thrive well in San Francisco, on account of our cool climate. Dahlias, gladioli, etc., make a grand showing when planted here the first week in May. All other plants that like a cool climate do remarkably well.

A flat rate of 10c. per square foot will be charged for the upkeep of exhibits. Applications for space and further particulars may be had by addressing Daniel MacRorie, 432 Phelan Building, San Francisco. Address all exhibits to John McLaren, Golden Gate Park, San Francisco, express prepaid.

PACIFIC COAST HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The Pacific Coast Horticultural Society held its regular monthly meeting on the evening of April 10th. The principal speaker was Prof. Babcock of the University of California, who delivered a lecture on "Plant Breeding," illustrated by stereopticon views. The members were notified that a movement has been started for a fall flower show, which in all probability will develop into an elaborate affair if the co-operation of the Exposition can be obtained as seems likely at the present time. Plans for the convention of the Society of American Florists were the subject of considerable discussion and it was evident from the reports that the committee are getting down to work. W. A. Leslie was admitted to membership in the local society, and three new members were added to the exhibit committee in the persons of Messrs. Illings, Fotheringham and Pos. The exhibits were particularly good, including Rhododendron Pink Pearl, a specimen six feet through, said to be the largest ever shown on this coast. It was shown by the MacRorie-McLaren Co., and was rated at 95 points. Frank Pelicano had a display of cut tulips, rated at 80 points; nephrolepis Smithii from H. Plath took 80 points; E. Gill's display of outside Irish Fire Flame roses took 75 points.

NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

At a meeting of the National Flower Show Committee, held on March 1-2 last, in Chicago, in conjunction with a meeting of the Executive Board of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists, Chairman George Asmus, of Chicago, and Secretary John Young, New York, were instructed to raise a guarantee fund of $10,000 to cover the National Flower Show to be held in Philadelphia in March, 1916, and contribution blanks for this purpose are now being distributed from the secretary's office. It may be stated that at previous National Shows the guarantors not only were reimbursed to the extent of their actual contributions, but received a substantial share of the profits.

While the sum mentioned could, no doubt, be raised in and around Philadelphia, it was the thought of the committee that the fund should be national in character and represent every section of the country. The forthcoming show in Philadelphia promises to eclipse everything previously attempted in flower shows in America, and it goes without saying that it will result beneficially to the trade at large.

The committee also would esteem donations of special prizes, the same to be offered under the names of the donors. Anyone disposed to offer a special prize, should, if possible, select the subject for his award from the preliminary schedule, thus relieving the obligations to the prize fund to the extent of the value of the donation.

FLORISTS' CLUB OF WASHINGTON.

At the April meeting of the Florists Club of Washington, D. C., the members had as their guests Senator William E. Chilton, of West Virginia; Richard Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., and Richard Matthews, who is the chief of detectives of Liverpool, England, and who came to this country on official business.

The feature of the evening's entertainment was a motion picture exhibition and victrola concert. In a short talk, I. Goldsmith, a talented entertainer, made as the target for a series of "knocks" several of those present, and in an interesting manner Mr. Vincent outlined his plans for the formation of a dahlia society. In view of the extensive entertainment provided all except the most important items of business were dispensed with. Fred H. Kramer reported that the banquet committee was busily engaged with plans for that event.

Refreshments were served during the evening and others of the members made short talks.

GLADIOLUS SHOW AT ATLANTIC CITY.

The American Gladiolus Society has decided to hold two exhibitions of Gladioli this year, one at Newport on August 18 and 19, as announced, and an additional one at Atlantic City from August 26 to August 29, inclusive. The latter exhibition is intended for the benefit of the growers and dealers, as Atlantic City in August presents the unusual opportunity of drawing up to 100,000 people a day to a show. No schedule will be required for the second show, but a series of medals may be offered by the society for the most noteworthy exhibits. The Royal Palace Casino, situated directly on the boardwalk and surrounded by the ocean from three sides, has been secured and it will prove not only a daylight hall but the atmosphere for an August day will be made delightful both to the flowers and the public.

The American Gladiolus Society is desirous of making this exhibit the foremost national floral event of 1915, and wants every grower (large or small) to be represented with an exhibit. Every possible assistance will be given by the committee in charge to those who live distances away, with information, guidance, accommodations for hotels, etc.

Exhibitors will be allowed to book all the business they can; in fact, the sole purpose of the exhibit is to boost the American Gladiolus for the American garden and thereby help the American grower to fight foreign competition, which has before this caused much concern to the American grower.

For further information address the chairman of the Special Exhibition Committee, Maurice Fuld, 1 Madison avenue, New York City.

DURING RECESS

CAMPING ON BUSTIN ISLAND. CASCO BAY, ME.

Seated—Wm. M. Miller. Standing—A. G. Pembroke, Paul E. Richwagen, H. W. Vose, Geo. H. Noyes. Front—Ed. Rokean, Allen Sim, James Miller.

The above picture, suitably framed and mounted on a neat rustic stand is to be presented to William M. Miller in remembrance of a very enjoyable vacation spent last summer at his camp. Mr. Miller is an old-time florist of Lynn, Mass., and his host of friends will be glad to see him so hale and hearty. His camp at Casco Bay is a unique place, crowded with curios and souvenirs. The interior furnishings are made entirely of birch bark. The other members of the group in the picture are Boston friends in the trade, who are presenting this picture to him.

LANCASTER COUNTY FLORISTS' CLUB.

April 15th, 1915, will be entered in the minutes of this club as a red letter day if the secretary does his duty.

In place of a regular meeting the night was given over to a committee consisting of Ira B. Landis, J. Rutter Hess, Wade Galey and Chas. B. Herr, with instructions to have Ladies' Night and ladies' night it was in the full sense of the term.

Mine host McGonemy of The Stevens House was the caterer, the committee and decorators and about an even fifty of the florists and their wives or sweethearts the guests.

The menu was toothsome and the decorations were the prettiest and most elaborate of anything ever attempted in this city. The music was by Rothe's Orchestra, and Mr. Savage sang several solos. Miss Katherine Seifert of the B. F. Barr Co. sang several solos and a duet with Mr. Savage and Miss Amanda Landis of The Millersville Normal School gave a series of recitations.

D. J. Keohane, of the H. F. Michell Co. was the only out-of-town representative of the trade with us and the way in which he joined in with Alonzo Peters and Rudolph Nagle in Singing "Heighle Heighlo" showed him to be a good sport. Rodney Eshleemann lead the singing between courses and at the end of the banquet the writer presented the following resolutions:

In view of the fact that the Children's Gardens had so much pleasure out of our donation of seeds for their use last season, I move that the club appropriate double the amount this season and give one-half to the Children's Gardens and one-half to the Public School Gardens. This resolution was passed unanimously.

About midnight the party dispersed with the hope that another Ladies' Night would be a thing of the near future.

Last Saturday night John C. Ruten-schwer of Cincinnati was the victim of a highwayman who in true frontier fashion relieved him of $75 while on his way home from market.

John Haas, a former well-to-do florist in the Third Ward, West Hoboken, N. J., has been committed to the county jail by Recorder Kuttler for observation as to his mental condition upon the recommendation of Town Physician Older. It is believed he is now a mental wreck.

Robert Hunnicks left San Francisco on April 20 for New York via Panama Canal, on the Pacific Mail steamer Peru, after a tour of six months in California, staying four months in Santa Barbara and then Los Angeles, Pasadena, San Diego and San Francisco. His health is much improved.

Taxing Salesmen, Agents, Canvassers or Corporations Who Go Into a State From Outside

Two classes of readers will be interested in this article: (1) the jobber or the manufacturer who sends salesmen or agents into other States, or employs salesmen or agents residing in those States, and (2) the local merchant who must often compete with those agents. There is a constant warfare going on among these elements. The local towns and boroughs, urged on by the local merchants, is always attempting to tax the salesman or agent who comes in from outside, and if the concern employing the salesmen or agents is a corporation, the State itself will endeavor to tax it, on the ground that while it is a foreign corporation, it is doing business within a State other than its own, and is therefore subject to the tax.

Two well-established legal principles govern all these cases: 1, if the salesman or agent which the local borough is trying to license or tax is doing business which can be called interstate commerce, then he cannot be taxed by the local borough, because neither local borough nor towns nor cities can interfere with or tax interstate commerce.

The second legal principle is that if the foreign corporation, too, is doing an interstate business and not a resident business, it cannot be taxed by the State.

Hundreds of cases are daily being decided under either one or the other of these principles, and nearly all of them are interesting far beyond the ordinary law suit. Take the Jewel Tea Co. case, a Missouri case. This would represent the law all over the United States because it was brought in a United States court. The Jewel Tea Co. is an Illinois concern and employs agents and canvassers who build up trade or routes among consumers in other States. One of these agents was canvassing in Lee's Summit, Mo., and his methods were as follows: The agent canvassed from house to house in Lee's Summit for orders for future delivery of teas and coffees. The orders taken were mostly for half-pound and pound lots. He forwarded the orders to the company at Chicago giving the quantities only, not the names of the purchasers. At Chicago the company put up the goods in small packages according to the quantities ordered, so as to permit of exact delivery to each purchaser without breaking. On each package was marked its price, but not the name of the purchaser. The packages were then put into a large box or other receptacle and shipped by freight to Lee's Summit; the company being both consignor and consignee. When the shipment arrived at Lee's Summit the agent received it, opened the box or container, had it hauled around on a dray, delivered the packages unopened to those who had given the orders, and collected payment for them on delivery. At the same time he solicited further orders. He made the rounds about twice each month, and by other canvassing endeavored to increase the trade. The agent remitted the moneys collected to the company at Chicago. He had no financial interest in the business save his salary, which was paid from that city. Occasionally a purchaser would refuse to accept and pay. In such case the package intended for him was sent to a branch house of the company at Kansas City, Mo., but all the goods delivered in Lee's Summit were shipped directly there from Chicago in the way described.

The local merchants of Lee's Summit, seeing this man's trade increasing—for all the trade he got he took from them—put it up to the city of Lee's Summit to tax him and the city attempted to do it. He resisted and the case got into the United States Court. The court decided that the agent could not be taxed by Lee's Summit, because the business he was doing was interstate commerce—the orders, while gotten in Lee's Summit, were forwarded to Chicago, filled there and shipped from there to the purchaser. No stock was kept in Missouri.

So the agent can go on exasperating the local dealers of Lee's Summit or any other community where the business is done in the same way. The case books are full of cases where a local community, for the protection of its own merchants, has tried to impose a tax on some outsider who came in and took away the trade, but the tax has always been held unconstitutional, if the business done by the outsider was shrewdly handled so that it became interstate business. Some of these cases have gotten up to the United States Supreme Court, but the decision has always been the same.

Salesmen traveling in Pennsylvania, let us say, for a New York house, merely obtaining orders which they forwarded to the headquarters of their house, to be filled and shipped from there, are never subject to local taxation. Nor is the house which employs them liable to tax by the State into which they go. That is not doing business within the State, in a legal sense.

Not long ago a corporation whose headquarters were, I think, in New York, sold some goods to the whole sale dealers of Massachusetts and then sent out salesmen among the customers of those wholesalers to get orders and move the goods. It was the old plan of getting orders from retailers and turning them in to some jobber. A town in which one of these salesmen worked imposed a license tax upon him and his house refused to pay it and took it to court. The defense was that the business for which the salesman was working was interstate business, but the court thought differently. "The business," said the court, "is the business of providing business for wholesalers, and partakes in no respect of interstate commerce. The fact that a natural result may be to increase the sales of the manufacturing corporation is an immaterial circumstance. It is too remote from the actual business of its salesmen to constitute interstate commerce."

So the manufacturing corporation was compelled to pay a license tax for all of its men who solicited orders from retailers to be turned through jobbers.

Brief reference to a third case may be interesting. A concern incorporated outside of New York consigned its goods to merchants within that State. Contracts were made with the merchants to that effect and these were sent on to the company's headquarters to be approved. The New York merchants sold the goods on installments, took their own installment contracts and turned them over to the corporation outside. The latter holds title to the goods until the full price is paid. An effort was made to tax the company on the ground that it was doing business in New York State, but the court decided it was interstate commerce.

Adorning Old New York

Window Boxes.

On the top of the old Second Avenue Square and Greenwich Village are to bloom, with a myriad of colorful plants on May Day. The window boxes in those squares are to burst forth in floral beauty and set an example for the rest of the city. Mr. Willard Dryden Paddock, wife of the sculptor, of 82 Grove street, who is in a pretty old time house in the village, as Chairman of the Committee on Flowers of the Greenwich Branch of the Woman's Municipal League, has undertaken the task of inviting the residents of the two squares to begin the work, and they have responded enthusiastically. Butchers, bakers, saloon keepers, livermen, people in apartment houses, and people in tenements have received the idea joyfully, and all that part of Greenwich Village is now engaged in making green boxes in order that not a window will present a blank spot in the beautiful whole. If there are any in the section whom Mrs. Paddock has accidentally missed in her round of flower visits, she asks them to join in the movement.

"It costs so little," says Mrs. Paddock, "and the result is so satisfactory. The effect of plants everywhere makes the city so much more livable for the people. The flower box movement will radiate from our two squares through the streets around, and we hope that other parts of the city will follow our example. Let a few people who were first to have furnished the boxes. May Day we have set as the day we will be in the pink of condition, and we invite the whole city to come and see how lovely we are." N. Y. Times.

Flower Market.

Greenwich Village is to have its own public flower market just like those in Paris. Permission to have push carts laden with plants and bunches of blooms there has been granted by the city, so Mrs. Willard D. Paddock, of No. 62 Grove street, said yesterday. Mrs. Paddock is a member of the Greenwich Village branch of the Woman's Municipal League, which has started a window box movement.

The market will be held certain days of the week and during school hours so that the push cart men and the flower women will not have the small Greenwich Village boy to contend with. The flowers will be sold at reasonable prices, and it is hoped by those back of the movement to have uptown friends come to Greenwich Village to purchase their floral decorations and gifts.

Sheridan square and Christopher square have been chosen for the flower market places. These squares are near together and just west of Sixth avenue. Mrs. Paddock says she hopes the market movement will be copied by women living in other districts.

—N. Y. Herald.

Summer Gardens.

Within a few weeks summer gardens will be established in the city which will be looked after by young men, this being their first step toward learning the art of gardening. As a result of several lectures which were delivered at the recent Flower Show, officers of the New York Florists' Club and the Horticultural Society has discussed this plan, and several informal meetings have been held. Among those who are interested in the plan are Theodore A. Havemeyer president of the society; Mrs. Belmont Tiffany, Mrs. E. H. Harriman, Mrs. Chauncey Depew, Mrs. Arthur Scott Burden and Mrs. Rudolph Erbsloh.

Max Schling, of 22 West Fifty-ninth street, a member of the society and a flower grower, has promised the support of several florists. Within a short time work will be started on an estate near Bronxville.

MAY FLOWERING TULIPS.

(See Cover Illustration.)

The long-time favorite single early tulips will still retain their popularity in the embellishment of the spring garden but the Darwin and Mayflowering section is coming rapidly to the front as the crowning glory of the tulip race, as every seedsman and bulb house have reason to know. There is a stateliness and refinement in their unrivalled velvety art-tinted flowers, borne on tall erect stems, which is simply irresistible and which no other denizen of the spring show beds can dim. The demand for these bulbs in this country is evidently only in its infancy, so to speak, and its future dimensions no one can begin to estimate.

A Noted Orchid Collection.

Orchidists are looking forward with interest to the dispersal of the famous collection of orchids belonging to the late Joseph Chamberlain. This collection was one of the most numerous and comprehensive in the country, and represented many years' careful work and outlay. At Chamberlain's auction sale this month 3,000 plants are to be offered. At a time when everyone is economizing it hardly seems an appropriate period for a sale of this character.

A Carnation Election.

T. A. Weston, secretary of the Perpetual Flowering Carnation Society, has lately published in the "Journal of Horticulture" the result of an election of carnations he has recently conducted. The voting of the experts resulted in the following twelve market growers' varieties being placed at the head of the list: May Day, White Wonder, Triumph, White Enchantress, Mrs. C. W. Ward, Enchantress Supreme, Scarlet Glow, Lady Northcliffe, Enchantress, Winsor, Beacon, Mikado and Champion. As regards the novelties introduced since Jan., 1913, the first six were: Champion, Gorgeous, Scarlet Carola, Pink Sensation, Princess Dagmar and Philadelphia.

WHEN TREES AND SHRUBS BLOOM.

To give the approximate Saturdays when the various trees and shrubs are to be in blossom a calendar has been compiled from various sources, which should prove of value to visitors to the Arnold Arboretum. The dates in the following schedule are not the earliest when a single blossom can be seen, but when they may be said to be in blossom.

Of course, the blooming of many extends over a long period, as in the case of forsythia, and the date of blooming is likely to vary several weeks in different years. The forecast for this season may be a week or more early or later than the actual date. No mention is made in the list of most of the willows and alders, as April 3 was their tentative date; likewise April 10 was mentioned for poplars in general, peach, red maple and elms. Other dates in the calendar are:

April 17—Birches, earliest magnolias (foreign), spice bush (benzoin), leatherwood (dirca), forsythia.
 April 24—Earliest foreign cherries, including Sargent's (Japanese).
 May 1—Shadbush, late willows, earliest lilacs, sugar maple, Norway maple, sycamore maple.
 May 8—Fothergilla, cherries, pears, moosewood maple.
 May 15—Apples, redbud (Judas tree), early cornels, American magnolias, most lilacs.
 May 22—Horsechestnut, early thorns, later lilacs.
 May 29—Earliest syringas (Philadelphus), flowering dogwood (Cornus florida), sheepberry, thorns, late lilacs.
 June 5—Late cornels, laburnum, viburnums, syringas, latest lilacs, early rhododendrons.
 June 12—Cone-bearers (pines, etc.), smoke tree, rhododendrons, azaleas, laurel, fringe tree, sumachs, yellowwood (Virgilia).
 June 19—Locust, catalpa, late syringas, later rhododendrons.
 June 26—Linden, mountain maple (ripening of shadbush and cherries).
 July 3—Chestnut, late elder.
 July 11 and after—Sophora, kolreuteria (bladder-nut), witch-hazel in the late fall; Japanese witch-hazel in December, or possibly not until February of next year.

Business Booming.

There has been a marked improvement in retail business during the past ten or twelve days, and at the present time there are not enough hours in the day to complete each day's work, and the principal houses are from one to two days behind in their orders.

The wholesalers report that the past week has set a new record in the matter of fill-in orders. If the present high pressure continues until June 1st the volume of business will doubtless be equal to that of last year, and the majority of clerks and principals will be almost physical wrecks.

Obnoxious Legislation.

We are just advised of a new menace to the seed trade fathered by the ignorant and reactionary canning element of Wisconsin. This is an amendment to the Wisconsin seed law requiring every package to bear a label stating per cent. of germination, trueness to name, purity, grower's name, where grown, year grown and many other features equally obnoxious. The canners themselves have been complaining vociferously against restrictions placed upon them by State and Federal laws, and it looks very much as if it was a case of "misery likes company." The conditions demanded in this amendment are of such a character, that no person who is both honest and intelligent would suggest or indorse them. To require the placing of a label on each package stating per cent. of germination and purity, may be a debatable proposition, but to demand to know where the seedsman secures his seed, the name of the grower, or even the year of growth, is something which no honorable, intelligent man would ask for. On this last point the canners today are fighting a ruling of the Department of Agriculture requiring them to date all of their cans. They contend that the food in the can is just as good a year old as when first packed, but that popular prejudice would militate against the buying of tins showing that the contents had been packed any considerable length of time. Yet in the face of this, they are demanding of the seedmen, what they are so strenuously fighting themselves.

It is hoped that the seed trade will make a strenuous fight to kill this measure. If the canners who are its advocates could show wherein they have suffered in the past any material damage by the absence of these conditions in their dealings with seedsmen of recognized reputation and reputation, there might be some force to their argument, but we do not believe that it is profitable for them to do so.

For several years an element among the Wisconsin canners have been at war with the seed growers, and have been sending baseless complaints. As a rule those who have made the loudst complaints have not bought seed and pea seed is the great bone of contention—from reputable growers, but have procured it from farmers without any knowledge of pea seed growing, or have raised it themselves from the same degenerate seed stock as that used by the farmers. Their quarrel, therefore, should be with the farmers from whom they buy, rather than from the seed growers with whom they have had little or no dealings. The character and quality of the seed produced by most of the Wisconsin farmers is so well known, both among the canners and the seed trade, that the term "farmer's seed" is recognized everywhere as a term of reproach. In plain words these canners are endeavoring to hold the seed growers responsible for their own mistakes and follies, and it is a significant fact, that outside of this element in Wisconsin above referred to, there is little or no complaint against seed growers in any other part of the country.

Of course we do not mean to assume that mistakes have not been made by the seed growers, even the best of them, but they are few and far between, and are usually not of a character to vitally affect the pack. No system ever devised, but breaks down occasionally. We have devoted considerable space to this matter as a large number of our readers have extensive dealings with the canners of the country, and we know they will be vitally interested in any issue of this character.

Notes.

Sedalia, Mo.—The T. Culley Commission & Seed Co. has been purchased by Fred J. Kreisel, formerly of the Archias Seed Store.

Value of horticultural imports into New York for the week ending April 10 is given as follows: Fertilizer, $10,946; clover seed, $217; grass seed, $3,284; trees and plants, $40,031.

Chicago The Leonard Seed Co.'s main office on Kinzie street, was visited by burglars the night of April 13th. No large sums of money are kept here, it being the custom of this firm to pay in checks and only a small sum for emergencies is kept on hand. The wisdom of this was shown when the robbery occurred. The safe was banked with bags of grain from the upper floors and then blown open. About $200 were taken.

Of Interest to Retail Florists

MOTHER'S DAY.

The florist plays an active and important part in forming the sentiment of Mother's Day. Within the last few years the idea has spread rapidly supported by churches, schools, the press, and the public.

Aside from the economic benefit secured which cannot be related, the florist trade has been a most potent factor in support of this movement. The trade has been accused of a gross commercialism behind its support of Mother's Day. This is unfortunately true in some cases. But it is safe to say that the number of ethical persons in our trade average fully as much as in any other class of business or society. It has been the good fortune of the florist to be in a position where he could most advantageously aid this institution. Its pleasing sentiment appeals just as strongly to the right-thinking florist as it does to the general public who buy his flowers. By giving much publicity to Mother's Day propaganda, in connection with his business, the florist has aided materially in its success. No manufactured article or other emblem could as effectively symbolize Mother's Day as flowers, despite the protests of the Mother's Day Int. Ass'n, who claim that the florists of the country have diverted the purpose of the movement from its original channels.

Experience has taught me that to confine all efforts to white carnations only on Mother's Day will eventually breed infinite trouble and may so react as to defeat the original purpose. There is not enough special significance about the white carnation that would warrant the exclusion of all other white and colored flowers. If we were to push the white carnation exclusively, the increased demand would necessarily result in increased, perhaps prohibitive prices, and thus defeat our aims and those of the Mothers' Day Association. By widening the field to all flowers and all colors, they may be secured cheaply and at the same time create a fair distribution of the day's business among all classes of growers.

The churches and schools can do the most effective work in popularizing the Mothers' Day movement. Let every florist co-operate with the church and schools, and circulate the idea among the different societies in town.

It is hardly necessary to speak at any length of newspaper publicity or of co-operative advertising by the florists. Call up the best newspaper in town and get the editor and advertising manager started. If you can get the mayor to issue an official proclamation, so much the better. A good idea for this and similar occasions is to prepare a rubber stamp announcing the Day, to be used on all statements, letters, etc., sent out several days beforehand. Some florists make a practice of advertising in the newspapers two or three days ahead, as a reminder besides the regular advertisement the day before.

The Telegraph Delivery system is a feature that works particularly well on these occasions. An appropriate window display at such times will explain this method of reaching the

NEWS ITEMS FROM EVERYWHERE

BOSTON.

The Garden and Florists' Club of Boston will hold a social picnic at Cunningham Park, East Milton, July 22.

Thos. Clark, of Boylston street, has taken his son into the business. A Ford truck has been added to the delivery equipment of the firm.

No information has been received concerning Wm. S. Grassie, of Waverley, who disappeared from his home a couple of weeks ago. It is rumored that he was in some financial trouble.

Cattleya Mossiae is extremely popular with local florists just now. Growers of this prime favorite have fine crops of this variety coming in, for which they are finding a ready market.

Kamayama & Serada of North Cambridge, have opened up another retail store, in addition to their present greenhouse business in N. Cambridge and a store in Claremont. N. H. Bedding plants are now crowding every foot of space in the greenhouses.

Some specialties noted in the market this week are snapdragons from R. P. Peterson, Framingham; Spanish iris from Kidder Bros., of Lincoln, and from Herman Waldecker, of Braintree; calendulas from A. G. Lake, of Wellesley Hills, and double bachelor's buttons from L. E. Small, of Tewksbury.

Three hundred members of the unemployed went to work last week on the Convention Garden in the Fenway, grading and filling the many individual flower plots and the setting of 609 lilacs that were taken from the Jamaica way.

The department is prepared to spend in the first allotment $5,000 that has been contributed to the city treasury by department heads in obeying the order of the mayor to turn back 5 p. c. of their salary. The mayor hopes, however, that public-spirited citizens will appreciate the great possibilities for floral displays at this spot and contribute money to make the garden the equal of last year at least. It is stated that several citizens will co-operate with the park and recreation department by offering money when it is needed. The Garden constitutes an additional drain on the park department as all other garden work is to be kept up the same as usual. The Public Garden, in particular, will lose none of its attractiveness by reason of the Fens experiment.

NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans will have a flower show May 6 to 9 inclusive, in connection with the "city beautiful" campaign. The New Orleans Horticultural Society in charge of the show announced these dates after conferring with representatives of the Federation of Women's Clubs and the Athenaeum has been chosen as the place for the show.

The meeting of the horticultural society at which the general plan was adopted was held Tuesday night, April 13. A canvass of the membership present indicated that space at the show would be in great demand. The last general meeting before the show will be held April 29. President Chopin indicated in his remarks that the show would likely be made an annual affair, especially if the popular support develops to the extent promised.

The show will not be limited to florists only. Dealers in baskets and allied objects which could be considered at the same time with flowers will also be accorded space. Certain of the city's schools will also likely use some space for exhibits of the flowers grown by the students.

Mayor Martin Behrman has named a new Audubon Park Commission, acting under authority given him by the last session of the State Legislature. As soon as the new board is established a hundred thousand dollars, to be realized from the sale of bonds already authorized, will be available for improving the park, most of this money going for artificial waterways. The horticultural hall, a temporary structure built for the New Orleans Exposition of 1884, and containing some of the finest plant specimens on the continent, will likely be provided for by the new board; either it must be rebuilt or torn down. To rebuild would cost approximately $25,000. Should it be decided to tear the old building down a smaller greenhouse will likely be erected in some other part of the park.

SAN FRANCISCO.

John and Donald McLaren have just returned after a trip to Redlands, Los Angeles and San Diego.

A wild flower show was held in Oak Park, Cal., recently, when several hundred children entered bouquets and designs. The members of the City Park Board acted as judges.

The florist trade is more or less interested in the passage of a bill by the California Senate prohibiting boys and girls under 14 years of age from selling flowers, newspapers or periodicals on the street.

The plans of the city beautiful committee of the Woman's Council of Sacramento, Cal., for the beautification of the city during the coming summer months will no doubt stimulate interest in flower growing very noticeably. Twelve cash prizes are offered.

CHICAGO.

Michael Fink has been ill for several days suffering from the grippe.

Harry Rowe has turned the lease of his wholesale and retail stores over to Kyle & Foerster, and will take for his own use the store one door south, formerly occupied by J. B. Deamud.

Among the recent visitors to Chicago was Charles Hornecker of East Orange, N. J., on his way home. He sailed from New York and made his way to San Francisco via the Panama Canal, returning overland.

A. Lange's stand in the new Stevens Building was opened a week ago and now begins to near its completion. It is in the arcade close to the elevators and within easy reach of the main salesroom. It will be fitted with all conveniences necessary to carry on a large business and is in charge of one of Mr. Lange's most competent men, A. Hall.

C. F. Bargholtz, who has a retail flower store at 3916 N. Clark street, is missing. On April 12th he left his store for the purpose of depositing something over a hundred dollars in the bank and has not been heard from since. His business had been regarded as in a good condition and he is a man of good habits. The police are trying to find out what has become of him.

Chicago florists are having more than their share of misfortunes this spring. With the violent death of Mr. Weil at the hand of former employees for the purpose of securing the money from his Easter sales and the disappearance of C. F. Bargholtz and his money as he went to the bank, the whole trade has been greatly shocked. The streets are full of the unemployed and the carpenters' strike is adding to a bad situation.

J. Bohanan's venture on State street, under the name of the Flower Market, is watched with more or less interest by his fellow florists. He rented a store temporarily vacant and sells flowers at a fraction of what they are sold at his regular store only a block away. He is drawing a crowd and helping clear the market of stock, but it does not appear how much money he is making or the effect it may have later on his regular customers.

F. F. Benthley, who is in a good position to judge the new roses says that it is an evidence of the appreciation that the new roses are meeting, that they sell, when the older ones remain unsold during dull weeks. An example is found in the records of sales since Easter. Ophelia and Mrs. Russell have sold, though at a reduction, it is true, when Killarney and other of the older sorts have been an impossibility.

The fate of Mother's Day sort of hangs in the balance this year. It will either be given an impetus that will place it on the list of special days for florists here in Chicago, or it will go back to the oblivion from which it was dragged a year ago. Pretty boxes and pretty folders and considerable sentiment expressed with printers' ink have not in a marked degree brought about the general use of flowers on Mother's Day. The wearing of one flower, no matter what its significance, never has been popular in Chicago, but if the idea can be diverted to a box of flowers or a basket of flowers or plants, the day may be saved. The inauguration of the mayor and other city officials has caused many floral tributes to be sent to the city hall, in years past. But this year it is whispered that there is something unusual to be expected with the going in of a new administration, after so many years under the old. The firms having the orders are keeping quiet but Monday the big event will take place.

PITTSBURGH.

James J. Higgins is at his home in Philadelphia where he was called owing to the death of his mother last Sunday. Mr. Higgins is the designer for Mrs. E. A. Williams, and has the sympathy of the many friends and associates made during his residence in Pittsburgh.

"A Clinic for Sick Plants" has just been announced as one of the attractions for the flower festival to be conducted each day during the big benefit bazaar for the Homeopathic Hospital on April 29 and 30 and May Day. Floral experts will tell how to make and keep plants well, and will answer all questions pertaining to plant culture. Mrs. William Alvah Stewart is chairman of the flower committee, which will also supervise the selling of flowers, plants, bulbs, trees and shrubs at reasonable prices.

The beautiful grounds of Michael C. Benedum have been terraced and the driveway bordered with a Rose of Sharon hedge under the supervision of Frank Murphy, who recently left Randolph & McClements to take charge of this estate. Mr. Murphy is also contemplating an addition to the greenhouse, which is now used mainly for supplying the Italian rose garden and foliage plants and geraniums for the grounds. Mr. Murphy is a young man and a "home product," who has made a promising start on the road of success.

In-as-far as social patronage has been concerned the past week has been one of hit or miss, the plums of the post-Lenten season's society decorating falling to a favored few scattered here and there. The week has also been marked by a perceptible drop in funeral work, occasioned possibly by the improved weather conditions interfering with the scourge of pneumonia, which has exacted an unusual death-toll this year. While the cut-flower output is fair, prices are low; daffodils made their first appearance at the wholesale houses last Tuesday, and the East End lawns and suburban lawns are now abloom with forsythia and dogwood. Landscape and bedding work promises to be unusually good this season.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

George W. Hess is extremely gratified in the manner in which the general public has accepted his invitation to visit the Botanic Gardens on Sundays, for the crowds there to be seen each week have broken all records. Mr. Hess declares that the gardens serve to incite a greater love for flowers and works for the benefit of the commercial growers. Special exhibitions are given periodically, during which some particular variety is featured. An invitation is extended to florists from other cities while viewing the sights of the National Capital to include the Botanic Gardens in their itinerary.

A medicinal drug plant farm on a large scale has been established on the Virginia side of the Potomac River which, it is contended by those in charge, will go far toward revolutionizing the trade in such plants and the channels of supply. The scheme had its inception when the Department of Agriculture commenced the production of drug plants on the Arlington experimental farm, which it owns. John B. Henderson, Jr., having taken a scientific interest in the matter, turned over his land to those in charge for a long period of years and the work is progressing. Forty-five acres of land are being planted this year and it is planned to increase this acreage next year. At the Botanic Gardens there is a special display of all types of drug plants, but naturally in view of the limited space there, no attempt would be made to raise them for commercial propagation.

NEWS NOTES.

Lynn, Mass.—Mrs. Geo. E. Libbe is dangerously ill with dropsy.

New York.—H. E. Froment has moved from 57 to 148 West 28th street, where he has the benefit of a large and more commodious salesroom.

Sing Sing, N. Y.—John A. Qualey, former lawyer and swindler and boss of the "high brow" political party of the inmate government of Sing Sing prison, has given up the job of handling correspondence, it developed yesterday, and has become the prison horticulturist.

He has taken charge of the greenhouse and is overseeing the raising of carnations, pansies, roses and other hothouse flowers which are ordinarily used in the warden's home, prison office and hospital. Warden Thomas Mott Osborne transferred the former lawyer, who swindled Mrs. W. T. Bull, widow of the noted surgeon, at his own request.

Albany, N. Y. — There are several wholesale florists who would like to know the whereabouts of Louis Garanzales, a Greek, who conducted a florist shop at 8 South Pearl street a few days before Easter. Louis has been missing since Easter Sunday and he has left a lot of unpaid bills behind, ranging in amounts from $50 to $204. These bills were for Easter flowers. It is said that Louis never expected to pay these bills for the simple reason that he sold all his flowers way below cost, much to the displeasure of Louis Lacaris, the Arkay florist, and former partner.

Garanzales and Lascaris were partners for only a few weeks when there was a general kick-up and the former decided to get out. He made threats of starting an opposition store, it is said, but as there were no places vacant at the time he failed to keep his threat until a week before Easter. The store that was formerly occupied by Moe Ettinger, clothier, needed a tenant and Garanzales saw a chance to pick up some change. He had no money but his father's name was good and he stood back of his son.

Father and Louis went to the wholesale florists of the city and arranged for the furnishing of the store with everything in the Easter line from azaleas to tulips. From the start the low prices of Garanzales appealed to the Albanians and they flocked to his store with the result that it was soon cleaned out. There was no time to pay the bills and so the father's name was used again in stocking up. Now the question arises—will the father who went his son's security be made to pay up. He conducts a peanut stand and it is not believed has enough money to pay his son's debts.—Albany Telegram.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON The markets are beginning to recuperate from the set-back caused by the big storm. Business is by no means up to normal, but conditions are better than they were last week. Stock of all kinds is plentiful, more than enough to meet the rather weak demand. There is a heavy supply of all varieties of roses and it is this class of goods that is suffering most. The warm weather has brought on a veritable flood of carnations, tulips, narcissi, snapdragon, pansies, etc., in quantities too large to secure reasonable prices. The supply of sweet peas is exceedingly large. A few violets are still hanging on. The "mushroom" stores and department stores have taken advantage of the large amount of cheap stock and help to clean up the market, although but slowly. Spanish iris and Roman anemones are being called for in limited quantities. The local trade is hopefully expectant of brisk business after May 1st. The wholesale houses are stocking up with Memorial Day supplies and anticipate good trade.

The past week's receipts BUFFALO have been the heaviest of the season. While the trade was not on the very quiet side, there was too much of everything and no outlet for the heavy surplus and not one item touched the quotation mark. Roses, lilies and carnations were very plentiful. Sweet peas were abundant—in fact, there was no shortage on anything and no orders were short of any item that was in any way ordered. The bargain signs were largely scattered on Saturday and a fair amount was disposed of.

Some wholesalers use CHICAGO the word "demoralized" when they express their opinion of the market as it is today and as it has been since Easter. They have learned to meet the conditions to an extent, however, and last week closed with the market practically cleaned up. There is no such thing as getting old prices for stock but it seemed wiser to take what could be had for it and let it go. Then with Sunday, April 18th, came a hot wave when the thermometer started up and on Monday it registered 83 degrees at the Government Station. It was accompanied by a strong breeze and all kinds of stock were hurried along on a market already over-supplied. The newest varieties of roses are selling for the former prices of older sorts. Carnations are sharing the fate of roses. The best can be bought for two cents and in quantities at a much lower price. Southern jonquils are coming now in large quantities. Bulbous stock, home grown, is nearing the end and after so many months of it, growers are not sorry to see it go. Lilies are accumulating. There seems to be no demand for them and vases of Easter lilies and callas are on every counter. Very good lily of the valley is offered. Sweet peas are coming fast and prices are not at all steady, varying with the word of the wholesaler. It seems to be the fear of a glut rather than the existence of one that makes prices fluctuate so rapidly. There is plenty of smilax, Asparagus plumosus and Sprengerii. Common ferns are quoted at $2.00 and $2.50 per 1000.

CINCINNATI From the wholesaler's point of view the present market is more or less of a nightmare. Business is rather slow while the inrush of heavy cuts is unabated and the glut continues. Roses and carnations are the worst sufferers, principally because in a normal market they are the more numerous flowers and adding to this their proportionate share of the general increase in quality that we are having, makes the supply of each seem unusually large. Their average quality, except in the cases of dumped stock is pretty good. Sweet peas continue in a large supply. Lilies and callas are plentiful. The call for orchids and lily of the valley has picked up somewhat.

NEW YORK There is really nothing in connection with the cut flower wholesale market situation that is worth recording as of interest to any of our readers, whether they be growers, wholesalers or retailers but there are lessons to be learned by anyone who is disposed to take a sensible view. The traffic has reduced itself at the present time to a "catch-as-catch-can" basis and the sole aim of the seller is to unload whatever stock may come in, regardless of published quotations. In short, this market is overloaded with flowers of every description in quantity far beyond the capacity of ordinary channels to assimilate and even after every conceivable alternative has been made use of there still remains a surplus stock for which no trade outlet exists. This is the condition that confronts every dealer—whether the goods are patrician or plebeian—and there appears no possible expedient for immediately improving the situation. Simply prin and bear it." But it is up to the wise ones to find a way to increase the daily distribution of this enormous product, so that it finds a market at some sort of a price and is not altogether wasted. At such times the puerility of such utterly insignificant effort as a "Mothers' Day" publicity campaign becomes dishearteningly apparent. "The mountain labored and brought forth a mole hill."

Crops continue to pour in and the commission men have to work like beavers. They work and they work and they work. They hustle and better than hustle. But, nevertheless, the market will not absorb the supplies no matter what the price. If the retailer hasn't made lots of money the past three weeks it's not the fault of the situation. He could buy anything and everything at his own figure. In the general sacrifice the lower grades of everything suffered first and worst. Probably the only exception to this was the short carnation. This item came up fairly well as compared with select stock. Violets are nearly over—quality very poor. Same is true of the southern daffodils. The first cuts of the Spanish iris crop clean up pretty well—especially the blues. The whites come next in popular favor. Very little call for the yellows. The grower should take this tip and grow very few yellows, at least for the Philadelphia market. White and lavender lilac still a staple, there being no outdoor stock arriving as yet. In greens, smilax and asparagus still remain a little on the short side.

Local florists have had a fairly satisfactory week following the quiet period just after Easter. Nothing special has happened to stimulate business in any particular direction, but a rather brisk house trade, a little more than normal amount of decorative work and the other usual outlets have absorbed the week's offerings quite readily. There is little change in market conditions, with the exception that some lines are in better supply while others are becoming scarce, which affects their values to a certain extent. Orchids have appeared in more liberal quantities; roses are plentiful, German and Spanish iris is coming in freely and the supply of gladiolus is ample for all needs. On the other hand violets are practically off the market; tulips have had a decided drop, and lilacs will not last much longer. Late daffodils have been coming in, but few more are expected.

Market conditions have not improved any since the last report. Receipts have been immense. Southern consignments help to fill up our already overcrowded market and prices are so low on some stock that hardly express charges will be realized. Only the extra fancy stock in roses and carnations have brought anything like a price. Sweet peas have been cut so low that quotations would hardly look right in print. Bulb stock, both local and southern, sold very low.

The local flower market is now reaching a more normal stage, but the exchange men and wholesalers are finding it very difficult to move stock in any quantity. Carnations constitute a glut such as has not been seen here for some time; snapdragon is without any value whatsoever, and the shipment of Southern daffodils have been simply overwhelming. Of lilies there were left over from Easter enough to last through the month. The worst of the sweet pea glut seems to be over. Lily of the valley remains stable. At times local roses seem to have felt the heat and naturally those from the north then surpass them in quality. First-class American Beauty roses could be had for $1.50 and $2 per dozen, but the sale is very slow. White and yellow daisies, as compared with other flowers, have met with a fair demand. Some very fine Spanish iris was seen and this also cleaned up when of small quantity. Yellow cowslips were late in arriving and as a result are not in demand. Last year they appeared before Easter and met with a ready sale. Some exceptionally fine pansies are offered, but there are few takers. Orchids are scarce, particularly in the darker shades. Schrodæra are hard to sell. The quality of gardenias has deteriorated and no one seems to want them in any quantity.

THE FLOWER SHOW AT LOWELL.

The Horticultural Exhibition at Lowell, Mass., last week, under the auspices of the City Beautiful committee was a splendid success, reflecting much credit on its organizers and showing the florist trade in a most enviable light to the public. The Lowell Board of Trade and the Middlesex Women's Club were active supporters for the purpose of awakening public interest in flowers and plants and influencing residents to beautify their home grounds. The flower growers and nurserymen in the vicinity of Lowell were almost without exception represented by large displays of their products and the result was a beautiful display, of generous extent and artistic finish. The principal exhibitors were John T. Gale of Tewksbury, Whittet & Co., Lowell; J. L. Kenney, Lowell; Frank P. Putnam, the Pleasant View Garden, North Tewksbury; McManmon's Brookside Nursery, Dracut; Backer & Co., Billerica; Albert Roper, Tewksbury; Morse & Beals, Lowell; George B. Wright, Robin Hill nursery, Chelmsford; the John S. Haynes estate, Lowell; Harvey B. Greene, Lowell; Patten & Co., Tewksbury; J. K. Chandler, Tewksbury; R. Christofferson, South Lowell.

THE TENT CATERPILLAR.

Through considerable observation in some parts of the state and through an inquiry which has been sent out from the Rhode Island State Board of Agriculture to a number of prominent orchardists of the state and which has been very kindly answered by them, we have ascertained that eggs of the apple tree tent caterpillar are apparently about as abundant as they have been during the past three years. Specimen egg clusters examined are in first-class condition, indicating that so far as egg parasites are concerned, the chances of a full hatch of caterpillars are excellent. Of course the insects may later meet with destruction in ways other than from parasites, but so far as any prophesy is possible at this time, we may look for another year of severe depredations from this pest. It is well, therefore, to take precautions to suppress the insect as far as possible at the beginning of its career. Fruit growers especially should be on their guard. A sharp lookout during pruning time will reveal many egg clusters and they can be cut off and burned. Spraying dormant trees with lime and sulphur or a miscible oil (winter strength) is effective in destroying many tent caterpillar eggs as well as the San Jose scale. If applied just as buds begin to open these sprays are also very helpful in controlling plant lice. Both of these sprays are useful in controlling plant diseases, but the lime and sulphur is preferable from a fungicidal standpoint.

Should this preliminary spraying fail to destroy all the caterpillars in the egg stage an application of arsenate of lead—3 pounds to 50 gallons of water —immediately after the leaves are unfolded is practically a specific against the tent caterpillars and is also useful in controlling bud moth, canker worm and other leaf-eating insects. As it costs but little more, lime and sulphur in summer strength (one gallon concentrated lime and sulphur to 40 gallons of water) should be used as carrier for the arsenate of lead, since this combination is helpful in still further controlling plant diseases. If desired as a final precaution against the development of any plant lice which may escape the first spraying, a 40 per cent. nicotine sulphate (Black-leaf 40 or other tobacco extract of like strength) may be added at the rate of $\frac{3}{4}$ of a pint to 50 gallons of the above spray mixture. All ingredients of this mixture excepting the arsenate of lead are contact insecticides and it is especially important that the spraying should be thorough so that if any insects are present the liquid may be brought in actual contact with them.

A. E. STENE, Entomologist.

ENGLISH WALNUTS IN PENNSYLVANIA.

The English walnut is attracting wide interest in Pennsylvania as a commercial orchard tree. Scarcely a week goes by at the Pennsylvania State College without receiving inquiries concerning this nut. These inquiries are usually prompted by the fact that already within the state are bearing trees which have proved both their hardiness and their ability to bear abundant crops of nuts equal or superior to the nuts found in our eastern markets, which are imported from the Old World, California or Oregon, the principal sources of our commercial supply.

Because of the interest manifested, the Department of Horticulture of the college has planned a thorough investigation of the subject. This will begin with a survey of the state to determine the location of all trees. In order to make this survey as complete as possible, the department urgently requests the assistance of every one who can give facts concerning such trees, especially as to location, character of nuts, age of trees and hardiness. Owners of nut trees are urgently requested to correspond with the college. It is hoped that this information will be sent in to the department without delay so that the trees may be visited by the investigators and fuller notes and observations made. Whoever is growing such trees is invited to write to F. N. Fagan at State College, Pennsylvania, giving information both as to the trees and to the property upon which they are located.

Hammond's Paint & Slug Shot Works, Beacon, N. Y.

Dear Sirs: After trying Thrip Juice No. 2 for two seasons, I can say it is the best article I ever used for thrip on roses or carnations, also for white fly. The latter was the worst pest we had to contend with, but after three applications, about four (4) days apart, we were practically free from it. I find it is advisable to apply in the evening, and with a good, strong force pump, proportion one to forty.

UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS.

Over 2,600 people attended the third annual exhibition of floral arrangements, given by the class in floral decoration, assisted by Miss Emily Dorner, of Lafayette, Ind., on Sunday afternoon, April 18, in the Floricultural building. Most of the visitors were students and faculty members, but both Urbana and Champaign were well represented. A better day could not have been chosen, as the weather was ideal.

It is difficult to say which display was admired most, as nearly all of them were equally good, and the opinion of the people seemed to vary. Perhaps the most attention was attracted by the different table decorations, wedding bouquets and corsage bouquets, as these seemed to be of special interest to the ladies. In connection with the wedding bouquets was staged a large doll dressed as a bride and carrying a bouquet of valley. This was an entirely new feature and was very attractive. Besides this there were many funeral designs, plant baskets, flower baskets, box and vase arrangements. Favorable comments were heard from nearly every one and it is safe to say that not a person regretted having come out to see the display.

SCOTCH SOOT

Where there is a house that is just full of buds almost ready to show color, nothing will turn better color into the flowers than a little soot, that can be scattered over the benches before watering. The amount applied should not be excessive, as the soot is very strong and may damage some of the foliage somewhat. Apply just enough to blacken the surface of the soil in the benches, and let it go at that. Better a little oftener than too much all at once.

We offer the genuine in original cwt. Sacks, at:
$4.00 per 112 lbs.; $17.50 per 560 lbs.

More greenhouses are being built every year. If some of the greenhouse owners actually knew how much new glass is being put in the United States during a year they would imagine that it would be impossible to sell the product of these additional houses. The fact is there are several hundred country towns in the United States of about 5,000 population, without a florist, without a greenhouse, and without a vegetable grower. There are towns where you can't buy lettuce in January for love or money except on Saturday night, and where a bunch of roses would be exhibited in the leading store until they died if said bunch ever happened to get to the town. If it were possible to compile statistics showing opportunities for those who want to build greenhouses, the facts would startle us. If these opportunities were taken advantage of, all the greenhouse manufacturers in the United States with present facilities could not turn out the material in the next ten years. The population of this country is increasing out of all proportion to the increase of products from greenhouses. What the people need is education of the kind that will lead them to purchase the things that the greenhouse so wonderfully produces.—Moninger Greenhouse News

Sectional Iron Frame House of J. W. Nairn's, Bartonville, Ont., Canada. It is 75 feet wide.

This Tells What One of the Leading Canadian Growers Thinks of His Lord & Burnham Greenhouse

AMONG the list of the Canadian growers to appreciate the vital value of the modern iron frame construction, was J. W. Nairn of Bartonville, Ont.

After a man has decided to make a radical change in direct opposition to the long established belief of his business traditions and counsel of friends; it takes considerable nerve to put it through.

Mr. Nairn's was among the first commercial Iron Frame houses to be erected in Canada. After that severe wind and snow storm of last winter that disastrously carried down so many houses throughout Canada; we immediately got in touch with all the Canadian owners of Lord & Burnham houses and found that without exception the houses had stood the storm without a flinch. Not so much as a single light of glass was reported broken, except where the wind had picked up some sticks and thrown them forcibly against the roof. While the backbone of other houses had crumpled up like paper, ours seemed to fairly glory in defying Nature's attacks. Here is a letter Mr. Nairn voluntarily wrote us about his house:

"I decided to build your construction after visiting and carefully investigating other plants and seeing other constructions.

"The reason I built so wide a house was because by actual comparison of figures I found the wide house cheaper per square foot of ground covered.

"Since it was finished in October of 1913, there HAS NOT BEEN A BROKEN LIGHT OF GLASS. This compared with other constructions we have, contrasts greatly. Everything considered, your houses are the cheapest procurable."

That's what Mr. Nairn thinks. If you would like full particulars of his house, we know he would, in the interest of bettering the growers business, be very glad to have us send you full information.

Visitors to his plant, we understand, are always made welcome.

NEW YORK BOTANICAL

Adiantums

Bench-grown adiantums for cutting purposes that have become nearly denuded of foliage by constant cutting, should now have a rest. For a while just a light sprinkling will give all the moisture needed. In the interval between two main crops water should never be entirely withheld but reduced to a minimum, while enough of moisture must be present at the roots to maintain the new growth. When new growth attains size and shape water in the usual quantities can be resumed. When new growth shows to a reasonable extent they can have a mulch of cow manure and soil in equal parts and some bone added. While the plants are young and making luxuriant growth they will require more shade than later on when the foliage gets hardened. These ferns want plenty of light but they should be given enough of shade to modify the bright sunrays during the four or five hours of mid-day.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine and Cinnamati

A repotting of the fast-advancing plants will be a part of the treatment, admitting of no delay. Better specimen begonias are raised by timely, short shifts, gradually working up to the final size than by long shifts, skipping several sizes at every transplanting. As heretofore, careful attention to watering, ventilation and shading is advised, but sprinkling or syringing overhead and through the foliage, from now on, should be more heavy and frequent. From now on until fall the rapidity of growth will be surprising and hardly looked for in the erstwhile fragile striplings. This should keep the grower on the alert to do his share in the making for a satisfactory finish. Watch out for green-fly or other insects. Don't wait until they pay a visit, but use fumigation and a weak solution of nicotine regularly to keep them away. Give more room, so the young plants will not become crowded.

Carnations

Give regular and copious waterings at the roots and a good syringing every bright morning after the flowers are cut, to hold red spider in check, and also attend to regular fumigation. Attend to all details, such as disbudding, frequent mulching of the soil, having the ventilators wide open during warm days and, if possible, a little air during the night even if you have to keep the fires up during the belated cold spell. The success of the carnation growers depends much upon proper care being given to the young stock in the earliest stages. Watering is a subject upon which no definite instructions can be given. As a general rule, I like to water the young plants once daily. Where you have frame room it is a good practice to give the young stock a week or so in the frame before they go outside, for it often happens that we get a cold and wet period after they are planted out in the field. When stock is hardened off in frames they will stand without injury any such visitation.

Ficus elastica

For the small grower there is no better season for the increase of stock than the present and no better course of procedure than mossing. Crippled and lanky plants, the branches of old unsalable specimens may be operated upon. The place to be mossed for the formation of roots first undergoes some sort of mutilation with a sharp knife, as cutting the wood almost through on one side and inserting a bit of wood or gravel to keep the cut open, washing away the gum after the bleeding has stopped and then tying sphagnum moss in a good thick layer firmly around this part of the wood. Do not fail to keep the air humid by several dampings during the day. The night temperature should be 70 degrees. In admitting air always avoid drafts. When well rooted they can be potted into a mixture of fibrous loam three parts, well decayed cow manure one part, leaf mold one part.

Increasing Fern Stock

All such ferns as adiantums, davallias, nephrolepis, polypodiums, etc., can be propagated by division. Break them up large enough so they will retain quite a few roots and then place close together in flats or pans in a compost of half leaf mold and half sand. All ferns that have creeping rhizomes or stolons can be multiplied into young stock. There is no better place for these than a warm bench where they will not be subject to any dry or cold currents of air. Keep the atmosphere of the frame moist and maintain a temperature of from 65 to 70 degrees and they will soon begin to make new fronds and roots, after which they can be potted up in any good porous soil. All this young stock should have a temperature of about 60 degrees at night, and a bench where they can have plenty of light without too much direct sun.

Overhauling Poinsettias

Old plants that have been resting since the new year can now be started, if not already done, shortening back the stems and repotting in as small pots as the roots will permit. Do not wait too long before doing this. Give them a good soaking of water and then keep rather on the dry side until the growths start and they will soon produce a quantity of fine cuttings. When cutting in you can use the old wood cuttings by placing in a warm frame and keeping the temperature from 65 to 70 degrees. In about three or four weeks they will be rooted, when they can be potted, using equal parts of loam and leaf mold, with enough of sand to make it gritty. Remove all stock plants to a well-lighted bench at about 65 degrees at night. Those propagated in July and August are fine for making up pans but the earlier ones will give the finest bracts for cuttings. Water rather sparingly at first, but as they begin to grow rapidly they will take plenty of water at the roots.

Next Week:—Chrysanthemums; Planting Gladioli; Planting Out Carnations; Poinsettias; Stock for Winter Flowering.

Many are the mysteries of the flower trade and the popular floral fancy. Just as the Schrodinger is perpetually in disgrace with the buyers is something past finding out but the fact is there. Of most delicate tint and texture and pleasing perfume this pretty flower merits a much higher place in the appreciation of the flower buyer than is accorded it in any of the markets where it is a daily commodity during the flowering season. A flower which seems to have all the desirable features for popular favor and for preferment by the artistic flower worker is our old friend Dendrobium Wardianum but it invariably falls short in estimation of the buyer and stands around on the tables of the wholesale dealer unsought and unappreciated while other inferior things are snapped up with avidity. Why this is so we are at a loss to explain. Can some- body enlighten us?

The comments in this issue by E. H. Wilson on our notes of last week concerning the effect of the past season upon the rhododendrons is an interesting contribution to a subject which thus far seems to be little understood—the old question of the why and wherefore of the varying behaviour of plants in different localities and of the same plants in different years, about which everybody would be pleased to learn more. The rhododendrons upon which was based our favorable report of their condition at the present time, are located a few miles out on the north side of Boston while those of which Mr. Wilson writes so disconsolately are about the same distance away on the south side. It is possible that another year the spring verdict as between these two plantations may be completely reversed and the advantage lie wholly with those which have fared so badly this year. Who can say? The explanation of the case under consideration as given in the Arnold Arboretum notes which also appear in this issue seems to lack plausibility, for the Arboretum rhododendrons are planted at the base of a high hill with a never-failing brook running in close proximity, while the plants that have gone through satisfactorily, less than a dozen miles away, are on high and very dry ground and in what is considered a very unfavorable exposure. We are very sorry to find so well informed and usually optimistic an authority as Mr. Wilson expressing convictions so discouraging in tone as he here declares concerning the noblest of all our garden shrubs. Before definitely crossing them off the list of desirables, effort should be made to ascertain more certainly the immediate causes that underlie their failure or their success under varying conditions from year to year. Thus far most of the conclusions appear to be based upon suppositions and probabilities that seem to fit the particular occasion.

Changes in values as represented by selling prices are as old as trading. What are "cut prices?" Aside from combinations to maintain specified rates or reckless selling without regard to cost or loss, changes in market values are, as a rule, directly due to the relative conditions of supply and demand. When supply falls short of the demand—a condition formerly frequent but now very rare in the flower trade—then values soar. When supply exceeds the demand—be it at ordinary times or at the biggest floral holiday in the year—values go down, irresistible and uncontrollably. In the first-named instance the buyer is sure to register a prompt protest. In the latter, the producer is the remonstrant. Each condition has its good side and in each somebody benefits. Unfortunately for the flower producer a fixed estimate of cost of any particular item is practically out of the question and consequently a standard of value based simply on custom heretofore, carries little weight. The maximum price of certain flowers, for example, at the present time in all the wholesale markets, would have been pronounced positively ruinous by the growers of similar goods a dozen years ago. In the next decade changes of equal import are to be expected and the man who would undertake to hold out against this inevitable movement would surely go broke just as would one who, during the past season, would have refused to part with his roses, violets or other production unless he got the price that prevailed ten years ago. In the traffic in perishable goods, the cost price of production of which not being in evidence and the supply excessive, the tirades against "cut prices" which are put forth at such times are as illogical as they are useless. The remedy against these depreciations is to be found, if found at all, in an enlarged market and increased steady demand and any movement which tends to that end should have a hearty and persistent support from every man who has an interest in maintaining values.

Winter Damage to Rhododendrons

Editor HORTICULTURE.

Dear Sir:—In an editorial in your last week's issue entitled "A very considerate winter" you state that "rhododendrons have come through the winter in first-class condition—flower buds are unscathed and a glorious display of flowers is assured for early June." I presume, since you do not remark to the contrary, that this statement has reference to evergreen rhododendrons on an estate (or estates) somewhere in the vicinity of Boston, Mass. If this assumption is correct, permit me, Sir, to say that the owner (or owners) should consider himself (or themselves) fortunate. From what I have seen and from the reports that have reached me, this satisfactory state of affairs is very far from being general in this neighborhood. In the Arnold Arboretum this class of rhododendrons has suffered severely. Varieties that have withstood the rigors of twenty and more previous winters have succumbed. At Lancaster, Mass., Wellesley and other places, the same disastrous conditions obtain. In the Arnold Arboretum, conifers of all kinds have wintered well, but on neighboring estates the death roll among Arbor-vitae and even the native White Pine is very heavy.

Since the winter has been an extraordinary mild one, it cannot reasonably be claimed that low temperature has been the cause. The bright sunshine during the closing days of February and through March combined with the total absence of precipitation, must, I am convinced, be held responsible. Kipling, in one of his poems, warns the newly arrived soldier in tropics that:

"The worst o' your foes is the sun over'ead;
You must wear your 'elmet for all that is said;
If 'e finds you uncovered 'e'll knock you down dead,
An' you'll die like a fool of a soldier."

This applies forcibly to broad-leaved evergreens in

New England. It is the sun overhead in March that knocks them down dead! The bright sunlight causes rapid transpiration (i.e., loss of water from the leaves) and the ground being still frozen the roots are perforce inactive and cannot make good this loss and the cells of the leaves collapse. The effect is the same as if the plants had been submitted to a fierce scorching blast.

The race of hybrid rhododendrons at present available cannot be relied upon to withstand the rigors and vagaries of New England winters, and unless hybridists can evolve tougher kinds there is a danger of these rhododendrons, the noblest of all broad-leaved evergreens, falling into general disfavor as subjects for outdoor culture in New England.

Culture of Drug and Dye Plants

Editor HORTICULTURE.

Dear Sir:—The present practical exclusion from American markets of drugs and dyes derived from plants grown in central Europe, caused by war conditions, is a difficult economic situation, and one that has been much discussed.

At a recent meeting of the Board of Managers of the New York Botanical Garden, this important topic was considered and the Scientific Directors of the Garden were requested to prepare a report upon it, such report to include an enumeration and account of the plants yielding the drugs and dyes derived mainly from the Old World, which would probably be susceptible of cultivation on a commercial scale within the United States. This report is being prepared and will be submitted at a subsequent meeting, after which it may be given to the public. It was suggested that in all schedules for exhibits and prizes at agricultural and horticultural exhibitions, shows and fairs, provision be made for entries of drug and dye plants and their products, as a means of stimulating interest in this topic, and disseminating information and bringing it into general public notice. It was also suggested that many persons owning country estates would probably be willing to cultivate plots of from one quarter of an acre upward, of drug or dye plants, and report upon the results. This suggestion has already been taken up by several persons.

HORTICULTURISTS VISIT ARNOLD ARBORETUM.

Under the direction of the Committee on Gardens of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society the first of a series of weekly meetings at the Arnold Arboretum was held on Thursday afternoon, April 22. These meetings are intended for the members of the Society with their personal friends who will be conducted through the Arboretum by John G. Jack of the Arboretum staff. Mr. Jack will point out and give information concerning the flowering trees and shrubs suitable for planting in this vicinity.

At the meeting on April 22, thirty-five species of plants were noted in flower and interestingly described by Mr. Jack. Among the more conspicuous shrubs in bloom this week are the numerous varieties of forsythias, forming great yellow masses; the various species of Japanese cherries with their delicate tints of pink and white; and particularly the early-flowering Rhododendron praecox, a mass of pink bloom, perfectly hardy here, and a most desirable plant for April flowering. The cornelian cherry, a tree covered with yellow bloom, was also a noteworthy object in the landscape.

The further progress of the flowering season will be watched with much interest at the subsequent meetings which will be held at the same place every Thursday afternoon beginning at three o'clock.

PROPOSED DAHLIA SOCIETY.

The proposed Dahlia Society meeting planned for the purpose of organization on May 10 at the Hotel Earlington, 59 West 27th street, New York, will meet at the Grand Hotel, Broadway and 31st street, owing to the closing of the former place.

CONNECTICUT HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

At the regular bi-monthly meeting of the Connecticut Horticultural Society, plans were made for the Spring Flower Show to be held on Thursday, June 10, in Unity Hall.

There was an exceedingly fine exhibit of pansies staged by John C. Willard, of Wethersfield. John F. Huss exhibited Clianthus Dampieri. President Warren S. Mason staged a fine collection of spring flowers. All the foregoing received certificates of merit.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

The following officers were elected at the last regular meeting of the California State Floral Society: Mrs. Henry P. Tricon, president; Mrs. H. Plath, first vice-president; Mrs. Austin Sperry, second vice-president; Mrs. J. G. Wintjen, recording secretary; Mrs. Elbert Channele, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Lucy Wheeler, treasurer.

The printed proceedings of the thirtieth annual meeting of the Chrysanthemum Society of America has been sent out by Secretary Chas. W. Johnson, Morgan Park, Ill. MODEL OF A SUBURBAN ESTATE.

The accompanying illustration is a memento of what was one of the prime attractions for the public among the exhibits at the recent exhibition in the Grand Central Palace, New York. The picture, however, does not give a very adequate idea of this excellent piece of work, which took many days of patient work to perfect. Most of the miniature gardens which we have seen were caricatures of the kindergarten order, but this one, which was constructed by Sam Woodrow, of Woodrow & Marketos, impressed us as much better than the average in conception and material, and well entitled to the gold medal which was awarded to it.

NOTED AT DREER'S

Phlox Arendsi.

Among the Dreer offerings this season in meritorious new plants, one of the most noteworthy subjects is the Phlox Arendsi. This is one of the freest flowering of the family, continuing a mass of bloom for two months. It is a cross between canadensis and decussata and commences flowering about the end of May, much earlier than the decussata, and much more prolific in bloom than that popular favorite. It is perfectly hardy and very vigorous in growth and of free branching habit.

Dropmore Alkanet.

This is an improved variety of the Anchusa Italica, originating in England. It is of a rich gentian blue and is one of the finest additions to our limited list of rich blue hardy perennials. It has an additional value as it flowers from May to July when blues are but sparingly represented in the hardy garden. A beautiful colored plate of this and another variety (Opal) appeared in Dreer's Garden Book for 1914. Opal is much lighter in color than the Dropmore variety.

Summer Lilac.

The above caption seems to be a much more descriptive and appropriate name than Butterfly Bush which we notice is being used in a good many of the catalogues. We refer, of course, to the Buddleia Veitchii which has figured more than once in recent years in the pages of HORTICULTURE. It has become one of the most popular of our summer flowering shrubs and with fairly liberal treatment responds with wonderful freedom in size and quantity of spikes. Michell has a fine colored plate of this on front of their 1915 catalogue. Last summer it was one of the features at Andalusia and also at the Dreer Nurseries at Riverton.

A New Climber.

If you look up the dictionary you will find a lot in it about the Polygonum family. The clan has a great variety of big and little in its embrace, all the way from weeds to wonders. It has the knotweed, the ladies' thumb, the princes' feather, and many other well-known subjects—as well as our old friend Sakaline, which Mr. Blanc made such a stir with some twenty years ago. But you won't find in the dictionary a new one offered by Dreer recently, named: —Polygonum Auberti. This is a splendid climber producing masses of white flowers in great profusion during late summer and fall.

COVER ILLUSTRATION.

To the man who knows, the picture which appears as our cover illustration this week will be a thing of exceptional beauty and needs no description other than it furnishes in itself, except that the variety of mignonette grown is "Farquhar's Universal." The photograph was taken during the past winter in the greenhouses of R. E. Wadsworth & Co., Northboro, Mass. The right strain of seed and intelligent painstaking culture are the secret of success in this instance

EFFECTS OF THE WINTER IN THE ARBORETUM.

The long and unusual drought of the autumn of 1914 thoroughly ripened the wood of the young branches of deciduous-leaved trees and shrubs, and those plants which produce their flowers on the branches of the previous year promise an unusual crop of flowers. The winter has not been a severe one and there are no losses to report among deciduous-leaved plants, which suffered so severely here during the winter of 1913-14. The dry autumn followed by the unusual drought of March has injured, however, many broad-leaved evergreens, especially Rhododendrons, which have never before suffered so severely in the Arboretum, large plants of the hardiest varieties, which have been growing here for at least twenty-five years, having been killed. The Rhododendron collection is in an exceptionally sheltered and favorable position, and is planted in soil perfectly suited to these plants. They have never suffered from the greater cold of other winters, and the condition of the collection at this time shows that what injures Rhododendrons is want of moisture during the summer and autumn rather than excessive cold, and that only a small number of species and varieties can be successfully cultivated in New England. The list of the varieties which have been killed or seriously injured will appear in a later bulletin.

Tulips in fact are nearly through, and prunes just at their best. Tulips and hyacinths are showing in all their glory of color but are likely to be short-lived in the scorching wind.

Just as we went to press last week, votes were being counted in the suburban towns. As the result of the election, many florists, well-known in the trade, will serve their towns as presidents or trustees. Among the presidents are Fritz Bahr, Highland Park;
Aug. Pohlmann, Morton Grove; Geo.
Klehm, Miles Center and John T.
Muir, River Forest.

The J. C. Moninger Co., has just begun the erection of a range of greenhouses for Henry Ford, on his new private place in Detroit. The old houses are being torn down and when the new ones are completed the manufacturer of the famous auto will have a conservatory and summer home to be proud of. A new range is under way by the same firm, at Lake Geneva for W. S. McCrea.

The Prosperity Parade included several florists, whose delivery cars were decorated with fresh flowers and greens and were quickly noted by their contrast to the tissue paper bedecked vehicles. Chas. A. Samuelson used clusters of baby rambler roses, made into garlands with asparagus, and the entire car was festooned. J. Mangel carried out the same idea with gar-lands of daffodils and A. Lange used his three delivery cars. One of the department stores had a large auto filled with palms and ferns. The cut flowers held their own remarkably well in a parade that required three hours to pass a given point, under a blazing sun and a hot wind.

True to prediction, the profusion of flowers and floral emblems was much larger than usual, at the City Hall, when the new officers took their places April 25th. Mayor Thompson's office looked as if a flower show were in operation. Conspicuous among the many large and finely executed designs was an American flag, 4x6 feet.
The stripes were in red and white carnations, and violets bordered an inscription which occupied the field. A star, eight feet in height, was well done and an immense horseshoe was among the large gifts. One of the prettiest of the smaller designs was a three-foot square white.

The office of the chief of police was so packed with flowers that the were still coming on the second day, that one could scarcely enter the rooms. Twenty vases of American Beauties and other roses occupied tables and floor and the giant floral designs had scarcely room to stand.
Among the latter was a large saddle, done with Milady roses. Another piece which was especially well done, was an enormous wheel, ten or twelve feet high, of pink and white carnations and bearing on the face of it the head and shoulders of a horse. Dark red carnations were used. A five-foot urn made of carnations was beautifully executed. The foundation was white carnations and it was trimmed and filled with roses. A vase of 200 American Beauties was arranged by John T.
Muir.

NEW WHOLESALE HOUSE IN BOSTON.

Patrick Welch, of Boston, will open a new cut flower commission house at 262 Devonshire street, Winthrop square, May 3, 1915. This store is favorably located next door to the Cooperative Market and across the street from the Exchange.

Patrick Welch

Mr. Welch has been requested by certain growers to handle their product, which he has consented to do.
He will at the same time retain his interest in the "Welch Bros. Co." at 226 Devonshire street, of which he is president. The business under his personal management will be conducted absolutely as wholesale. No goods sold at retail. He will be assisted by experienced salesmen whose knowledge of the wholesale cut flower business is well established.

Special attention will be given to the shipment of orders on the early morning trains out of Boston and the supply at all times of the novelties in cut flowers for which Boston Market is famous. The store will open at 6 a. m.
Telephone Main 2698. Paul Regan will be manager and Patrick Welch treasurer.

PERSONAL.

Peter Hughes formerly in the employ of C. L. Howe, Dover, N. H., has accepted a position at a Pittsfield,
Mass., greenhouse.

A letter recently received by S. S.
Pennock, Philadelphia, from Edwin Lonsdale, shows Mr. Lonsdale to be in a hopeful state of mind regarding the outcome of his sickness. He is now at the Naturopathic Institute and Sanatorium of California, at Los Angeles, and the changed course of treatment seems to have benefited him materially.

Harry Bayersdorfer of Philadelphia will, this year, substitute a trip to Japan instead of his accustomed annual visit to Germany. He intends sailing on the Manchuria from San Francisco about the middle of May.
No man in the supply business has a better knowledge of the needs of the florists of this country and we shall be surprised if he does not bring some good things over from Japan which will meet with enthusiastic appreciation by the American florists and the public.

noon, April 22. The New York boys won. After the games were rolled all hands enjoyed a nice supper. There

THE SEED INDUSTRY.

By W. L. Farklind, of the Blue Rock Club,
Philadelphia.)

Perhaps you have never regarded the great part in the wonderful scheme of Nature that is taken by the prosaic and insignificant seed; still this part has so much to do with the forms of life in this world of ours that when one pauses to give it serious consideration he is brought to realize that seed is one of the indispensable things. Seeds have been absolutely indispensable since the beginning of time. I admit that the telephone, the telegraph, the automobile and even the submarine are wonderful creations of man and are now considered almost indispensable—still it is a matter of record that man grew, flourished and traded for centuries without any of these; but has he done without seed for a single day? Indeed he has not! If he were deprived of these wonderful inventions he could still go on living and developing; but deprive the world of seed for but a single year and all animal life will perish.

Did you ever realize just how much you owe to seed? Do you realize that it has been the servant and the master of man since the beginning of time? I say the servant because through its care and manipulation seed has gone on its mission of sustaining life, producing its comforts and necessities. I say the master because without seed no form of animal life could live. This may seem a broad statement, but pause just a moment and consider what a wonderful force is enveloped in the unattractive shell of the seed. I say that in seed you are dealing with one of the greatest forces that exists in this world—forces in many ways. It is the source and vehicle of life, food, clothing, commerce, building, decoration, and in fact every phase of life. It is one of the greatest dynamic forces.

You may never have observed seed in its germination. Again, you may have sown seed, and under your observation you have noticed that a single bean in the process of germination will lift a weight of earth many thousand times its own. In fact, I have seen some of the stronger growing plants that would lift a stone that vastly over-topped them in weight and size. Perhaps you have never considered this force from such an angle. This is a subject that might be dwelt upon for hours, and to one who is interested in this phase of plant life, affords the theme for almost continuous discussion.

There are so many forms of plant life with which the layman is not at all familiar that it would be useless to go into this, other than to say that the sex relation is as distinctly marked as in animal life. Some varieties of plants bear imperfect flowers and must be pollinated from other plants of the same species, or in some instances, especially in the Cucurbitaceae, in which the male and female flowers are found on the same plant. Among the squashes this is particularly noticeable, the male flower being borne on a foot or blank stalk, and after having borne pollen, immediately perishes. A close observation has shown that the majority of this genus or group so care for the male flowers that they perish within a period of twenty-four hours after attaining their full development. This in itself is a fine study that leads to so much detail and discussion that it is equally useless to dwell upon it.

The forms of plant life are unlimited. For instance, there is the Alga group, which are the plants that border on the division line between animal life and plant life. They possess the power of locomotion, that is, they move from place to place in water, and in the marsh-lands might be considered a form of animal life. In fact, some zoological works classify them as animal life, while the majority of botanists classify them as being plant life. This small plant—many hundreds of which would barely cover a pin-head—produces the smallest complete flower—so minute that the individual plant itself is almost invisible to the naked eye, and yet produces a wonderfully beautiful little flower that under the microscope shows every section and part complete and perfect.

It may be that you have never thought of the wonderful inter-relation of plant life and the various soils of the earth. Assuming that we start with the seed and the process of germination has been completed, the little plant is equipped with minute root hairs which extend outward from the roots in countless millions. These little hairs come in contact with the surface of the granules of the soil. Through the various chemical conditions that are brought about by rain, sunshine, fertilizers, etc., these little root hairs take up the sustaining elements that go to complete the development of the plant.

Soil structure in itself is immensely interesting. A very important physical characteristic of the soil is the way the particles arrange themselves as they lie in the fields. I assume that you are all familiar with the formation of soil, but just a word here. Soils are rock waste; they have been formed by the slow crumbling and breaking up of the surface rocks into fine or coarse particles such as are now designated by clay soils, sand soils, etc. The breaking down of this rock formation has gone on through the ages, and has taken eons of time. Much of this material is slowly dissolved and carried away or settled by rain-water. The variations of heat and cold have much to do with the formation of soil. A part of the great scheme of Nature has been the participation of rain or snow. This has frozen in the crevices of rocks, splitting them off and depositing them in smaller particles where they are subject to even greater action by the elements.

As an illustration of the vast area of rock or soil surface covered by these little rootlets or root hairs, I will just assume that we have here a cube, the area of the several surfaces of which measure each way one yard, or a cubic yard. This has a surface area of 54 square feet; break this yard up into cubes of one foot or 27 cubic feet; measure the surface areas of all these cubes and you have 162 square feet; break this yard up into inch cubes and you have a surface area of 1944 square feet, which is one-twentieth of an acre. You may never have considered that a cubic yard so split up is one-twentieth of an acre. So that you see the unlimited surface area that is presented to these rootlets as a feeding place, or pasture, as it were.

Almost everyone knows that the elemental plant foods—phosphoric acid, nitrogen and potash—are absolutely essential to the fullest plant growth and development. The source of supply of these necessary plant foods from a commercial point of view are scattered almost over the entire earth. Saltpeter or nitrate of soda comes from Chili; potash from the potash mines in Germany and from the recently developed kelp fields of America. Phosphoric acid is obtained from phosphate rocks, and these are found in deposits that are scattered all over the surface of the earth. This also weaves wonderfully and intricately into the great scheme of Nature.

The propagation of seeds and plants is a process that would take months to explain—by seed, by grafting, by cuttings, by budding, or by any of the recognized methods. The production of new varieties is also a wonderfully interesting thing.

All of this leads us to the seed. The seed in itself is not at all attractive, but every civilized nation of the world, and many of the uncivilized ones, contribute their quota to the general commodity of seeds that are offered for sale by the seedsman. He gathers these from the remote corners of the earth and distributes them to equally remote places.

I imagine that trading in seeds was one of the earliest forms of barter. I know that among the uncivilized nations seeds play a great part as coin of the realm, various colored seeds and varieties of seeds having various values in certain communities. They are used as money and as food.

One of the particularly interesting things in seeds is their period of stratification. To the initiated, these periods of stratification are known almost to a day, and compare very favorably to a parallel in animal life, from the seed of the succulent radish which can complete its growth within the incredible short space of from fourteen to sixteen or eighteen days, to that giant seed of commerce, the coconut, or the majestic Sequoia which takes three years to germinate and countless centuries to complete its growth.

I would not attempt to say who was the first seedsman, but I imagine it was Adam. History shows that recognized dealers in seeds have existed right down through the ages. Some of the houses now in existence trace their lineage proudly through more than two hundred years of commercial life. These businesses represent an acquired knowledge that collectively would make a series of volumes that would put the Encyclopedia Britannica to shame. Coming down to modern times, perhaps the oldest seed house in America is the firm of J. M. Thorburn & Company. This concern is considerably over one hundred years—perhaps a century and a quarter—in business in America, and have had a long and honorable career.

Various phases of the seed industry are represented by the various firms scattered throughout the United States and throughout the world. Each conducts a distinct form of business, as dictated by the community in which they are located and the class of trade to which they cater. I claim that the seed business is the one business that is a logical mail-order business. There is presented in the mail-order seed business a phase of merchandising that is met in no other mail-order business, in that you are dealing not in a finished product, but only the means by which a finished product may be attained. In the average general mail-order business, the concern is dealing in a concrete commodity. Perhaps I should qualify that by saying a finished commodity. For instance, if you purchase a stove, a canoe or a pair of shoes, a binder or a gasoline engine, or whatnot, when it is delivered to you you can readily tell whether it is what you want or whether it will meet your requirements. If not, you can return it; but in seed even an expert cannot tell the veriest trash from the highest bred seed of the same variety.

Breeding in seeds has as great a bearing on the future crops as breeding in animals, and today it is carried to as high a state of perfection; so that in dealing in seeds the purchaser must place all confidence in the concern from whom the purchase is made. In selling seeds by mail you do not enjoy the privilege of the retailer who can talk to his customer over the counter. He is in a position to explain matters to his prospect. With the mail-order seedsmen this must all be

Of Interest to Retail Florists"UNDESIRABLES" IN THE RETAIL FLORIST BUSINESS.

In the last few years we have heard a great deal about undesirable expression applied to florists and foreigners and very often or too much so. This expression applied to people who do not deserve such treatment. Some of our most undesirables have built our railroads in this country and have done a great deal to help develop this great country.

I now find that this same expression is applied to a good many flower retailers who absolutely do not deserve it. Just because they are not the oldest or largest retail florists concern does not mean that they fill orders in poor shape or forget to pay their bills promptly. I can make a correct statement and say to you that these younger concerns in a great many cases are more businesslike and can see an opening for a new field quicker than others, as the other florists think they have enough business and what is the use of looking for more, and send trade away from their stores, but these same concerns are willing to receive all the orders from out-of-town correspondents they can get.

They sometimes wonder how the new concerns can get these orders but they also forget that this or that new concern has let the public know that orders for out-of-town can be delivered, hence, was enabled to send orders all around the country and naturally retailers to whom he has sent orders have reciprocated, for which you can neither scold nor blame them.

Remember that even you who own the largest and best equipped retail flower shops may have been, at the start, the same kind of undesirables and yet if somebody had called you that, you hardly would have taken it good-naturedly. Of course, I realize that there are exceptions in all cases but please do not use the word "undesirable" unless you can make good and prove something which may justify you in your criticism.

Will some one kindly write an argument to these few lines as I am writing and only too glad to hear what my brother florists have to say.

NEWS ITEMS FROM EVERYWHERE

BOSTON.

Chas. Evans of Watertown, has a fine lot of hydrangeas coming along early for the city.

Martin Tuohy, florist, of South Boston, announces his opening of a new retail store at 280 Devonshire street, Boston.

Julius Snyder, formerly manager of H. M. Robinson & Co.'s cut-flower department, has now joined B. A. Snyder & Co. as vice-president of the firm. Mr. Snyder has had a life-long experience in the florist trade.

During the storm Monday two men employed in the greenhouses of Paul E. Richwagen, Needham Heights, narrowly escaped serious injury when the large chimney and packing house in which they were working was blown down.

Some specialties noted this week are sweet peas from Kidder Bros., Lincoln; bachelor's buttons from L. E. Small of Tewksbury; yellow marguerites from Jas. Wheeler of Natick; pansies from W. C. Ward of East Milton; and gardenias from F. J. Dolansky of Lynn.

A. H. Hews & Co., Inc., of Cambridge, Mass., celebrated their 150th anniversary this week. This firm has established an enviable reputation for its product and undoubtedly is among the world's largest manufacturers of pots and red earthenware specialties. It was established in 1765 and incorporated 1904.

An electric storm on April 26 wrought much havoc in the small towns around Boston. The terrific high wind twisted the heating plant at the greenhouse of Thos. Capers, Wellesley Hills, into a mass of brick and iron. The gale blew with such force that a 300-foot greenhouse collapsed, causing damage estimated at $5,000.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Club of Washington, D. C., will be held Tuesday evening, May 4. It is planned to have an extensive entertainment.

F. L. Mulford, landscape gardener of the Department of Agriculture, has just returned to this city from a trip to Norfolk and Diamond Springs, Va., where he has been planting chrysanthemums for study purposes.

A gigantic flower bed is planned, seventy-five feet in length, either on the Plaza or the Monument grounds, to advertise the coming convention of the G. A. R. The proposed bed will contain the official badge of that organization worked out in form and color.

The retail florists' club, to which only those engaged in a strictly retail business in this city are eligible to membership, has been put on a firm basis, according to Wallace W. Kimmel, who was elected as temporary chairman at the meeting of the members held last week at the Hotel Hudson, where ways and means were discussed for eliminating the street vendors. This type of competition was condemned and it is said that it was for the purpose of killing it that the club was formed. Department store sales of flowers and bulbs was also disapproved of. Refreshments were served during the meeting. Other temporary officers selected were Mr. Marche, treasurer, and Mr. Leapley, secretary.

The dealers here are very much disappointed in the continued dry weather, which prevents them from carrying on the large outdoor gardening projects, which usually fall to them at this time of the year. In speaking of this condition "Wally" Kimmel states that it is far too dry for such work and that considerable work has had to be abandoned. April is usually a rainy month, but this year has proved an exception to the rule. A northwest wind has prevailed for the past five or six weeks and the earth balls which protect the roots of the large evergreens, rhododendrons, azaleas and other plants, are so dry that they crumble while in transit, making impossible a satisfactory job of planting.

PHILADELPHIA.

Friends of George Burton, a distinguished rose grower at Chestnut Hill, and by friends that means everybody, including the members of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, of which Mr. Burton is president, will be pleased to learn that he is progressing favorably after a surgical operation, on the 21st inst., for appendicitis. We join in congratulations and are rejoiced to know that every indication is favorable.

L. P. Rankin has leased the Foster greenhouses at Westerly, R. I., and will move from Lansdowne with his family May 1. Mr. Rankin has been foreman for Wm. K. Leonard and other famous rose growers in this vicinity, and everybody wishes him well in his new enterprise. He has made his mark as a grower and we feel sure he will make good more and more as the years roll by.

Percy Barnard's Jew-Packard car stopped suddenly ten miles from nowhere, one day. Percy got out and carefully examined all the interior arrangements. Everything seemed to be all right. After half an hour's sweating and cogitating Percy came to the conclusion, "hanged if I don't believe this old machine will go better with gasoline than without!"

A friend of Percy's (James Brown, Jr., of Coatesville), has bought one, but he has asked me to say nothing about it until he has learned how to drive. He doesn't want a lot of fellows coming around just yet. I guess a car is like getting married. When, after about a year or so, you have found out the worst about each other, you can then proceed to live comfortably together and enjoy life.

Samuel S. Pennock is the latest recruit to the auto brigade. He has resisted the temptation for many years.

SAN FRANCISCO

C. W. Ward has started a large nursery at Eureka, where the soil and climate conditions are ideal. He has arranged for 2,500 square feet of space in the S. A. F. convention garden.

John McLaren, superintendent of Golden Gate Park, was director of tree-planting exercises held at the Civic Center recently under the auspices of the Native Sons of the Golden West. Angelo J. Rossi served as chairman of the arrangements committee.

Articles of incorporation have been filed in San Francisco for the United Flower & Supply Co., with a capital stock of $10,000, by I. Adachi, H. T. Oichi, T. Masunda et al. The company opened for business on Bush street, next door to Domoto Bros., some time ago.

The shipping season has just closed at the United States Plant Introduction gardens at Chico, Cal., and R. L. Beagles, who has charge of the gardens, announced that 6,000 packages, containing about 90,000 plants, have been shipped from Chico since January 1, the shipments going to all parts of the country.

Chairmen of the various committees to make arrangements for the S. A. F. convention were named as follows at a meeting of the ways and means committee of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society last week: Executive, Daniel MacRorie; publicity, J. W. Gregg; program and outing, A. J. Rossi; hotel, F. Bertrand; reception, J. R. Fotheringham; finance, H. Plath; garden, John McLaren; ladies' entertainment, W. A. Hofinghoff; sports, V. Podesta.

Preparations have been completed for a flower show to be held in the Palace of Horticulture at the Exposition, May 7 to 9 inclusive, under the auspices of the California State Floral Society and the Alameda County Floral Society in conjunction with the Department of Horticulture of the Exposition. There will be three classes of exhibits. Class "A" will include cut flowers grown by amateurs; Class "B," cut flowers grown by amateurs who employ skilled labor. Class "C" will be devoted to professional growers. A large number of prizes will be given, and entries must be in the secretary's hands at least forty-eight hours in advance of the opening of the exhibition.

Detroit, Mich.—On May 1st C. H. Maynard will open for business "The Norwood Rosery," 1509 Woodward Ave.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON The markets are in as stagnant a condition as they have ever been so far this year. The weather has been very variable, changing suddenly from a record hot day to a damp chill, with lowering clouds threatening torrents of rain. We have had a long-continued period of drought and rain will be welcome all over New England. There is an oversupply of everything, the demand is weak, and consequently prices are lower and unsatisfactory. The street boys and temporary stores help somewhat to clean up the low grades of flowers. Roses, especially Beauties, are plentiful and of fine quality, but the shorter grades sell much better than the 6-foot blooms that are coming in in such large quantity. Carnations overcrowd and move slowly. Spencer sweet peas are in fair demand. The common varieties are not so easily moved. There is a heavy supply of yellow marguerites, stocks, pansies and cornflower, which meet with a better call than for most kinds of flowers just now. It is expected that local retailers will make some attempt to exploit May Day and thus relieve the markets a bit of the existing dullness.

BUFFALO, N. Y. There has been very little improvement in market conditions during the past week. The supply on everything, especially carnations, roses and lilies is still very abundant and prices have gone all to pieces. The weather being much of the summer variety has forced everything faster than it can be handled to advantage. The market is overloaded, especially with carnations which are hard to move at any decent price. Outdoor daffodils are overflowing and lilac has been added to the list. There are no weddings and floral work is very light, simply no business.

CHICAGO The situation in the Chicago market has varied little during the past week, and that little was not for the better. All kinds of stock is being hurried along by the high temperature and so far the quality has not been affected. It is not so much a matter of selling the flowers, as the getting of a fair price for them. Everyone knows that the supply and the demand are far apart and which one is out of the normal is not the question; the flowers must be sold. There is a scheduled price, it is true, but it varies every hour in the day, as the cut is poured into the market. The thousands of long-stemmed Beauties used in the ceremonies at the City Hall, Monday, as well as the quantities of other flowers, helped to decrease stock and such an event would be a godsend if it could occur each day.

CINCINNATI The present condition of the market and prospects for the immediate future are not very promising. The glut of the last few weeks continues. Warm, bright summer weather has up to this time only made it worse than it was. No single line of stock realizes anything like a good price. The call for stock and supplies

Mrs. Charles Russell

As the weather gets warmer the quality of most varieties of Roses gets poorer. Not so with Russell, they are just as fine as at any time this season. They are of such unusual quality that "FINE" hardly expresses it—splendid, large, deep colored buds on good stems.

from out of town is pretty good. Roses, carnations and lilies continue to be as plentiful as at the last writing. Callas, too, are abundant and are generally very good. The hot days and nights are beginning to tell on the sweet peas. Antirrhinum has a very poor market. The call for lily of the valley and orchids is good only at times. A few good Spanish iris are offered. Smilax is still rather scarce. The demand for ferns and green sheet moss is very large.

NEW YORK The same redundancy of flowers which has choked the wholesale markets still continues and without any apparent relief in sight for the immediate future. The wholesale markets are heaped high with huge quantities of lilies, Spanish irises, stocks, sweet peas and snapdragons all of which are unsaleable at any set figure, however low the figure may be. Of course there are roses and carnations galore and there is at least the one little satisfaction of mentioning that the quality is of the highest standard, but this does not sell them. Cattleyas of the deep-colored Mossiae type so much in demand at Easter are here now in quantity, but the call has faded away and prices have dropped, as they have also on gardenias and other fancy material. There are still a few violets in sight and fairly good, but they get little attention. All bulbous stock is yet plentiful—even paper white narcissus lingering in spots here and there.

PITTSBURGH Florists are bemoaning all-too-plentiful stock, especially of roses and carnations. It is feared that the present oversupply of roses as the outcome of the unusually hot weather will cause a shortage for June. The intermittent showers of the past few days have gladdened the hearts of the growers, but the small, stunted blooms of the tulips and other bulbs tell of the scarcity of snow and rain during the past fall and winter.

There was a slight improvement in the market here last week as compared with the previous three weeks. This improvement was caused by a slackening up in supplies, and although this was not pronounced enough to stiffen prices it did have some effect on the clean-up and the general average. Roses are not quite so plentiful, but there is no change in prices. Quotations remain very low. Carnations very plentiful. Orchids are pretty fair stock, good Mossiae selling right well. Sweet peas are still in large supply, but quality not so good. Most growers are cutting from old vines. It takes new stock to give the best flowers. Baby gladioli such as Delicatissima, Blushing Bride, etc., have made their appearance and meet with ready sale. Outdoor sprays of flowering almond and apple add a little in the way of artistic verisimilitude to the situation, but there is no money in this class of stock.

Growers of this vicinity continue to feel beneficial effects from the exposition. Many of the exhibitors keep cut flowers at their booths continuously; the foreign and state buildings require a good many, which together with the large amounts used in decorative work at exposition functions creates new business enough to relieve the market of any over-supply. The large number of conventions being held here this year is another factor, which will no doubt bring considerable business to the florist trade. All in all the situation looks quite bright for the florists of this city. Spanish iris is now at its best, and the offerings are in good demand. Gladioli are plentiful with a fair movement, and an excellent supply of peonies has made its appearance. Outdoor stock is coming in nicely. Good lilies of the valley are scarce. Interest in sweet peas has picked up a little and carnations have cleaned up a little better the last few days. All varieties of roses are in good supply. They are popular for decorative work, which helps to keep surplus stock down to a minimum.

ST. LOUIS This market last week was in a very much overcrowded condition and prices obtained for some of the stock in big lots could not be quoted correctly. The waste was greater than at any time this season. Roses in all grades, carnations, lilies, callas, lily of the valley, sweet peas and all bulbous stock all went at very low prices. These conditions, from the looks of the receipts, will continue this week.

WASHINGTON, D. C. Wholesalers are hoping for a continuance of the present extremely hot weather, that the market may be cleaned up and the glut passed. The mercury has gone beyond the hundred-degree mark and, following a cold spell, roses and carnations have been coming along in uncountable quantities. Locally grown roses are gradually getting smaller and are surpassed to some extent by those produced in the north. So plentiful were American Beauty roses early last week that they could be had at $10 per hundred, but present quotations are considerably higher. Some very excellent Mock roses are to be had, and Killarney Brilliant and Killarney Queen are coming along nicely. The violet season is about over. There has also been a decrease in the cut of sweet peas. Easter lilies have been shelved for the season, and the callas that come in fail of ready sale. Spanish iris has been in pretty good demand. The annual convention of the Daughters of the American Revolution brought considerable additional business. The run was good on high-priced flowers; the corsage business was quite heavy and there were many entertainments requiring decorations. Through this, the sale of orchids, gardenias, novelty roses, carnations and American Beauty roses was made good.

NEW YORK.

The 28th street wholesale flower fraternity are going through an unprecedented shaking up, J. K. Allen goes down a few doors in the same block where he has been located for over fifteen years. H. E. Froment leaves the old block and goes to the west of Sixth Ave., to a new outpost and the store at No. 57 which he abandons has been leased by C. C. Trepel for a sort of clearing house for his widely scattered interests. Traendly & Schenck have quit 28th street entirely and gone into a new location on Sixth Ave. near to the 26th street flower market and P. J. Smith leaves his old place at No. 49 to take the store at 131 deserted by Traendly & Schenck. It will take the habitudes of the morning markets some little time to find their bearings with all these changes.

SCOTCH SOOT

We offer the genuine in original cwt.

I have been a power from all "old time" house made of hot iron and steel. To a full iron frame. Our Half Iron Frame house is made of iron and steel. It is the best house in the market. We have sold fewer Half Iron houses than we have sold full iron houses.

The new house is a fine, light house, with 12 foot spacings between columns. It is a good house, with a good roof. It is a good house, with a good roof. It is a good house, with a good roof.

commercial work than in any month any previous year. We sold to men we never expected to. Men who had bought for years of other concerns. Our Reconstructed Construction brought those buyers to us. We were the first builders to space the rafters 12 feet 1 1/2 inches apart. Now other concerns are talking wide spacings, but we have three years' running start on them. Three years of experience that you will get the benefit of in buying of us.

To get back to Mr. Ashe's house; he has just bought another. Noticing that prices on iron and other materials were beginning to edge up, it looked to him as if it would be many a long day before he could build as cheaply. So he bought.

With prices going up as they are, we are not guaranteed in quotation for longer than 10 days time. Now is your chance. We go anywhere for business. Go to talk business. And you know we can depend on depending on Hichings.

WINTER DAMAGE TO EVERGREENS

An Eccentric Season

Editor HORTICULTURE:

Your editorial and Mr. E. H. Wilson's letter in your issue for May 1st interested me very much. It is an undoubted fact that in-so-far as deciduous plants are concerned, the late winter was, as you stated, a very considerate one. However, even amongst these there are one or two exceptions, but when it comes to evergreens we find the tidings of woe quite general. Having had opportunity to visit the Arnold Arboretum and one or two nurseries and some private estates, I must confess that the losses are heavier than during any of the previous twenty-five years I have been in America.

The rhododendrons in the Arnold Arboretum are planted in what would seem to be an ideal location, yet dozens of plants, some of large size and planted twenty-four years are dead or nearly so. Amongst varieties which have succumbed or are badly killed are: Catawbiense, Catawbiense album, C. S. Sargent, Henrietta Sargent, Attila, Hannah Felix, several forms of Caucasicum, Lady Hillingdon, Princess Mary of Cambridge, Atrorubrum, Gomer Waterer, Marquis of Waterford, Salmon roseum, Prometheus, Butlerianum, Jay Gould, Norma, Mme. Carvalho, Matternichii, F. L. Ames, Mrs. Henry Ingersoll, Bluebell, ponticum, Melton, atrosanguineum, R. I. Field, roseum elegans, delicatissima and quite a number of varieties from Seidel in Germany.

In the foregoing list, which probably is not a complete one, are a good number of sorts not looked upon as "iron-clad," or even hardy, but which have grown and wintered well in their ideal location, in some cases for nearly a quarter of a century. The list includes, however, some reliable sorts, as roseum elegans, delicatissima and C. S. Sargent, which is somewhat discouraging. Many incongruities are noted. F. L. Ames, not a very hardy sort, was half killed, while a few feet away a beautiful specimen of delicatissima was entirely dead. Then again side by side with dead plants could be noted others of the same variety very little damaged!

The summer and fall of 1914 were abnormally dry. The roots of all plants, unless they had been watered or mulched, were dry when the ground froze up. We got copious rains in February, but this did not reach the roots of plants which were not well mulched. The bright and arid conditions in March and a large part of April would not have been so serious had the roots of evergreens been moist.

While it will probably be admitted that the foregoing reasons will account for the heavy losses, why is it that some half-hardy sorts are not harmed at all, and that while plants of one particular sort are dead, others side by side under precisely similar conditions are harmed little if at all? No doubt we must look back further than 1914 for "the beginning of the end."

I have in mind at this moment a collection of splendid rhododendrons, some fifteen feet high, located at Pawtucket, R. I., which came through the winter in perfect condition; also beds of these noble specimens at Waltham, Mass., which never looked better. At Faulkner Farm, amongst some hundreds of rhododendrons we had not a single death, and merely occasional small branches killed. On all these estates the plants were kept well mulched and were well soaked last fall. These Mr. Editor, can be added to the other collection you name, and none were planted in so sheltered and ideal a spot as those at the base of Hemlock Hill, nor did they receive any protection.

I am not at all pessimistic about the future of rhododendrons in New England. We have a number of dependable varieties, and I hope the new Chinese varieties will later swell the list. I believe there is less in the location than in providing these broad-leaved evergreens plenty of mulch and moisture. Windbreaks for these and the newly planted evergreens are also I believe more necessary and important than overhead covering. The latter is more harmful than helpful.

At the Arnold Arboretum I noted that the genus Erica had suffered terribly. Such Taxus as cuspidata, canadensis and baccata were in many cases badly scorched, as were leucothoes, andromedas and many of the junipers. Kalmias, except the variety myrtifolium looked well, but here as elsewhere a close inspection of some of our native subjects like Pinus strobus, Thuya canadensis and Thuya occidentalis showed how many of them had suffered. Let anyone look at the white pines just outside of the Forest Hills gate and the damage done will be found very noticeable.

The why and wherefore of the dying of broad-leaved and other evergreens is a most important one, worthy the attention of so eminent a body as the Arboretum authorities, and vastly more important to a host of plant lovers than the creation of new genera and species.

Faulkner Farm, Brookline, Mass., May 3, 1915.

Rhododendrons at Wellesley, Mass.

Editor HORTICULTURE:

The past winter has not been severe as regards cold. We have had winters with much lower temperature, with less damage to report. I have no doubt, as Mr. G. H. Wilson says, that "winter damage to rhododendrons" is due to excessive sunlight during the late winter months. It was not until late March and April that "winter damage" began to show. Everything up to the first of March was as usual, or better. Plants in the full sun suffered most and the damage was greatest in front of windbreaks and least where the wind had full sweep,—as if the wind had tempered the sun's rays.

We do not like to say we neglect any of our rhododendrons in the matter of water in summer and covering

I write to you to admit that our neglected beds suffered. One was "tough and dry," on a bank, with little water and hardly any leaf covering, came to nothing, and it has always.

Some of my acquaintances declare that winter covering is a "delusion and a snare." In fact, I have seen one during this late winter, seems to support this contention. Certain it is that our Japanese and kalmias in the vegetable garden were badly hurt. I can't believe they could have suffered so much attention at all had been given. About fifty per cent. are dead or badly injured, but a few are still left. Half a dozen plants together as bright as if there had been no winter at all and all around them plants dead, one is hard put to for an explanation, or even a theory. This sort of thing we find throughout all our beds—plants standing, so to speak, in the snow. All these plants were well watered right up to the time they were covered for the winter, so as to make sure they did not go into the winter dry.

Tsuga canadensis and T. canadensis badly scorched under protection in the vegetable garden, are hardly touched in the open with the full sweep of the westerly wind.

I am convinced, however, that evergreens which go into the winter dry do suffer in just such weather as we had this past March. It is almost an axiom that evergreens must be root active in winter. Whether protection is a fake or not we shall continue to protect our evergreens as usual.

What Rhododendron maximum Needs

Editor HORTICULTURE:

I have read with much interest in your issue of April 21, your article on rhododendrons, telling how they have come through the winter in first class condition. I have also read in last week's issue Mr. Wilson's letter and your editorial on rhododendrons. Of course, as I understand it, you are both referring to hybrid rhododendrons but Rhododendron maximum are somewhat the same as far as those conditions go.

I have been studying for several years the natural conditions of Rhododendron maximum in their native home and find many interesting points about them. Nature provides certain places for all trees and shrubs. The seeds are carried by birds to different places, but unless the soil is right, the seed of the tree or shrub may sprout and grow but never mature to the size it would attain in its natural location. Soil conditions are taken in consideration to some extent. Some trees and plants are in their natural place on the level land, others on a hill, and one must have a southern exposure and a good protection, and this is my point—a rhododendron's natural home is in a northern exposure.

The point that Mr. Wilson made about the sun during the month of March turning the leaves brown as they had been scorched, is certainly correct. It is the March sun that causes the destruction, but had these rhododendrons been planted on a side-hill with a northern exposure, or elsewhere and protected by tall hemlocks or other evergreen trees, the March sun would not affect them, for the destruction is done when the frost is in the leaf and by the time the sun is high enough to reach them in their protected places it is in the warmer part of the day when the frost is out.

A rhododendron as it grows in its natural home is never scorched by the March sun except where it has grown under the protection of some large evergreen tree which has been removed by the woodman's axe. The point of planting rhododendrons is to follow the rules of nature, for in their natural home they are not affected by cold or water or the heat of summer.

Lilium myriophyllum (regale)

Some two or three years ago, when this lovely lily was first brought to our attention, we published two or three illustrations of it as seen growing at the Farquhar nurseries and as a cut flower. So well has this novelty justified the prominence given it at that time that we feel it to be worthy of still another presentation as a cover illustration for this issue for the inspection of those of our readers who have not seen it before. Lilium myriophyllum, or "regale," as it has now been designated by E. H. Wilson, who first discovered it and collected it in China twelve years ago, is in our opinion the finest tubular-flowered lily in existence. The golden glow in the heart of the flower, the flush of pink on the outside of the petals, the bright orange anthers from which the pollen does not shed, and its refreshing spicy perfume make it more than a rival for the universally used longiflorum type of Easter lily. Add to these good points the fact that the new comer is perfectly hardy in the latitude of Massachusetts, is of the easiest culture and may be grown from scales to flowering sized bulbs in an incredibly short time, and the place which this lily is destined to fill in the commercial floriculture of the near future may be imagined. When the stock has been increased so that it can be sold at a popular price it can hardly fail to take its place among the leaders in florists' flowers. The plants appearing in the picture are from young bulbs.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Proverb.

Chrysanthemums

It will be necessary to keep the cuttings well soaked for the first two weeks. In bright weather several dampings overhead will be required to keep them plump and no good grower ever wants to see stock in the cutting bench with a flaggy look. A temperature of 50 degrees is high enough for the cuttings to root in. They should not remain too long in the sand but be potted up as soon as rooted. A turfy loam thoroughly mixed with one-third well-rotted cow manure and a sprinkling of bone is a good compost to use. Be careful after potting not to overwater and as they get well rooted never allow them to lack water. For the growing of exhibition blooms the plants should never be allowed to get pot-bound. As soon as the pots are well filled with roots repot into 3-inch and on up into 8 or 9-inch pots. Plants intended for exhibition should now be growing rapidly and must have every attention in the way of watering, ventilation, pinching and tying up. Look out carefully for aphids and fumigate regularly.

Planting Gladioli

A succession of plantings can be made from now on until the end of June. Plant them in rows from 2 to 3 feet apart leaving about 3 to 4 inches between the bulbs in the rows. They should be set at least four inches deep. By planting the bulbs at intervals of about two weeks we secure a long season. See that the soil is worked deep and that there is plenty of well decayed manure mixed into it. When they show above the ground keep the cultivator going every week until they have reached a height of about 8 inches. During limited rainfall they should be watered at intervals quite profusely. It would be well to sort the corns over and plant all the small ones at first planting leaving the largest for the last. Just before the last cultivation give some quick acting fertilizer between the rows. It can be put on at the rate of three or four hundred pounds per acre.

Planting Out Carnations

The weather and the nature of the soil should be the guide in the different sections of the country for the right time for planting. Set them anywhere from 15 inches up to 2 feet apart. Where the grower has only a few thousand the former distance will do as he can use the hand cultivator both ways, but where there is larger number $2\frac{1}{2}$ feet apart each way will allow the horse cultivator exclusively, which will save three-fourths of the time in taking care of them. Each grower will have to judge for himself which is best. A dark or cloudy day is the best, but where there are many thousand to plant any day must do. See that the plants are thoroughly soaked through beforehand. Don't forget the oft-repeated warning to have every plant properly firmed for this is an absolute necessity. Do not plant either too deep or too shallow, but at the same depth that they stood in the pots or flats. For this locality from now up to the 20th of May is a good time to plant.

Peonies

To have peonies that will produce flowers of good size and color the soil should be trenched to the depth of 18 to 24 inches and plenty of cow manure incorporated through it. They require a soil that has been enriched with plenty of rotted manure, bone dust and wood ashes. Select an open and sunny situation, far away from the food robbing roots of trees or large shrubs. See that each plant has enough room when they are full grown. When planting in the field with the intention of digging up the clumps and dividing for sale they should be planted $2\frac{1}{2}$ or 3 feet apart both ways, but when planting for cut flowers leave them at least 4 feet apart each way, covering the crowns with 3 or 4 inches of soil. Old plantations yielding good crops of flowers annually should have a top-dressing of manure forked into the soil. If the weather becomes dry while the buds are forming and the flowers coloring they should have a liberal supply of water. Herbaceous peonies have so greatly improved of late years that now they are indispensable for spring and summer flowering.

Stocks for Winter Flowering

If sown now they will come in early and with another sowing in about four weeks you will have flowers all winter. They should be sown now in pans or shallow flats of light soil. Use plenty of sand in it as there is then less liability of the seedlings damping off. For the first couple of inches of soil it is well to make a light mixture, say leaf mold and soil in equal parts with a little sand. Do not sow too thickly. Keep shaded and moist until they begin to germinate when they should have full light and sun. When they are large enough to handle they can be potted off into small pots and placed in frames under elevated sashes to afford a free circulation of air. Give these plants a situation with sufficient space to enable the air and light to reach all the foliage. Water can be more freely applied from this time on. Fumigate often so as to keep green fly in check. When the plants have filled these pots with roots they should be shifted into 4 or 5-inch pots and kept in frames until late fall.

Starting Cultivating

As the different plants are set out start with the cultivator using it at least once a week. It will help to keep down weeds and leave the ground in a nice open condition. Stirring the ground in dry weather or after rains is peculiarly beneficial to all crops.

Next Week:—Asters; Care of Young Primulas; Hardy Stock for Late Spring Sales; Orchids; Ramblers for Memorial Day; Watering Stock.

A courteous act
The Exhibition Committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society has acted with wise liberality in the arrangement of the dates for the important exhibitions of that society for the year 1916. Wishing to see the National Flower Show in Philadelphia next March a pronounced success and desiring to avoid doing and a great deal of money diverted in the least from such success. The May 1st Spring Exhibition will be made a matter of course that year and a big show will be held in Philadelphia instead. This thoughtful courtesy on the part of the leading horticultural society of this country will be deeply appreciated by the National Flower Show Committee and their co-workers in Philadelphia.

We are rather in sympathy with the To save the mountain laurel expressed in the Boston Herald concerning the proposition to protect the mountain laurels, trailing arbutus and other coveted wild flowers by declaring a "closed flowering season." But as to the mountain laurel a closed season for the flowering period only would be but a trifling protection for that plant and utterly insufficient if its practical extermination is to be prevented. By far the larger part of the laurel devastation is not done for the sake of its bloom but for green wreaths and "roping," so-called. The amount of the destruction of this shrub for the festooning of stores and buildings generally for the holidays and other occasions throughout the winter is something beyond belief and yet, after all, no purpose of taste or beauty has been served. If real protection is to be given the mountain laurel it must needs cover 365 days of each year. With the vast and varied amount of greenery which the florists and nurserymen are prepared to supply nowadays it will be no hardship for the people if this wholesale despoiling of our finest native shrub should be legally stopped.

Requirements of the rhododendron
The several communications from gentlemen of large practical experience in rhododendron culture, which appear on the following pages, as well as the many comments which have come to us verbally, indicate the widespread interest awakened by the notes in our previous issues on the last season's effect upon the evergreen rhododendrons. Since writing our editorial notes last week we have seen the rhododendron plantations at the Arnold Arboretum and the havoc there wrought is truly pitiable. These rhododendrons are not new and untried varieties, but old established plants of which many have been growing and thriving for nearly a quarter century and in all respects their location, soil, exposure and care have been ideal according to all accepted axioms as to a rhododendron's requirements. Not all are dead or even blemished and alongside of the worst sufferers may be seen specimens that have come through without a flaw. Again, one half of a plant may be totally gone while the other half is unscathed. At certain other places in this vicinity where the rhododendrons lack the seeming advantages enjoyed by those in the Arnold Arboretum and in the gardens of Professor Sargent, Walter Hunnewell and Bayard Thayer all of which have suffered severely—the plants have all come through in excellent condition, and one is forced to agree with Mr. Hatfield's frank acknowledgment that there may be something in the contention that our established notions as to what is essential to the rhododendron's welfare are "a delusion and a snare." We know that the readers of HORTICULTURE would be glad to learn more on this perplexing subject which so vitally concerns every admirer of the broad-leaved evergreens. We should like to hear from others whose experiences and observations may tend to throw some further light on the causes underlying the phenomena of this abnormal season.

BRITISH HORTICULTURE.

The Highbury Orchids.

As foreshadowed in a previous letter the dispersal of the unique collection of orchids, got together as the result of many years' continuous efforts by the late Joseph Chamberlain, one of Britain's famous statesmen, aroused wide-spread interest in the horticultural world. The sale took place in the London auction rooms of Messrs. Protheroe & Morris, where in former years notable collections of orchids have come up for competition amongst eager buyers. Undoubtedly the time selected for the sale when everyone is economizing owing to war conditions, was not altogether favorable. Even the prospect of obtaining a souvenir of one of the most noted orchid collections in the country, and of the former personal possessions of a man whose name had loomed largely in modern history was not sufficient to cause an inflation of prices. Shillings were more numerous than pounds in the bidding. The first substantial price was paid for Schroderae Highburyensis, a hybrid raised in the late Mr. Chamberlain's conservatories, this realizing four guineas. The top price was paid by a Birmingham resident—this being the district with which Mr. Chamberlain was honorably associated for many years—the sum of twelve guineas being paid for Odontoglossum Inseleyi splendens. The second day's sale also aroused considerable interest, but there were no sensational prices to record.

The Carnation Year Book.

A glance through the edition of this work for 1915 indicates that the cult of the carnation in Britain is increasing in popularity. A point which is emphasised is the hardness of the English raised varieties of the American type. C. H. Taudein, who has a nursery near Chester specially devoted to out-door carnation culture contributes his experiences. Active arrangements are now in progress for the Perpetual Flowering Carnation Spring Show which is to be held at Leed's in Yorkshire which will have the effect of creating an interest in the flower amongst provincial growers. Details as to the Society's work are obtainable from T. A. Weston, the Secretary, whose address is at Flordale, Orpington, Kent.

A TULIP GARDEN.

Guarded within the old red wall's embrace,
 Marshall'd like soldiers in gay company,
 The tulips stand array'd. Here infantry Wheels out into the sunlight. What bold grace
 Sets off their tunics, white with crimson lace!
 Here are platoons of gold-frocked cavalry,
 With scarlet sabres tossing in the eye
 Of purple batteries, every gun in place.
 Forward they come, with flaunting colors spread,
 With torches burning, stepping out in time
 To some quick, unheard march. Our ears are dead;
 We cannot catch the tune. In pantomime Parades that army. With our utmost powers
 We hear the wind stream through a bed of flowers.

GARDEN CLUB BUSY.

Princeton, N. J., April 27.—A flower market is to be held in Princeton on May 20, under the auspices of the Princeton Garden Club. The plan to hold a flower market was considered and arranged by the Village Improvement Society several years ago, but was deferred in order to give way to more pressing matters. It is particularly fitting that the project for the market, to be given this year, should have been made by the first Garden Club of Princeton. The president of the club is Mrs. A. D. Russell, and its members number twenty-five.

The object of the flower market is to further an interest in gardening and bring together all who are interested in gardens and once a year to give an opportunity of showing some result of the year's work. It is planned to have a sale of cut flowers, potted plants, ferns, vines and vegetables. The proceeds received from the sale of refreshments are to be used to pay the salary of an expert gardener who will come to Princeton and start the school gardens.

THE FUTURE OF THE IRIS.

Of irises there are 170 native sorts, besides hybrids, which swell the number up to 500 or more. We have been engaged in producing new sorts and the results are very encouraging. Our experiments have largely been with dwarf hybrids, I wish you could see some of our new creations. One is a mass of gold. The whole plant completely flooded and overwhelmed with flowers almost entirely hiding the foliage. Such a mass is seldom seen. The next row is royal purple, intense in color and radiant in beauty. How such small plants can produce so much splendor is a marvel. We are now preparing a new edition of the iris manual, to be a companion of the last edition of the peony manual. We have an expert at work on the classification of names, which have been badly muddled.

HERBACEOUS CALCEOLARIAS.

Seeds of the herbaceous calceolarias may be sown in May, June or July, but plants raised from June sowings generally give the best results. Equal parts of loam and leaf mold, to which has been added a little sand, make a suitable soil, and this should be well watered before planting the seed. These are very small and must be handled carefully. They should be sown thinly in pots, covered very lightly with soil, and, if no cold frame is available, each pot covered with a piece of glass which should be turned over daily to prevent the condensed moisture dropping down on the seed. The glass will keep the soil moist and also hasten germination. It should be removed altogether after the seedlings have broken through the soil. Sometimes it is a good plan to place the pots containing the seed on inverted flower pots standing in saucers of water. This will keep the surroundings moist and likewise prevent certain crawling insects from feeding upon the young seedlings. The plants should be transplanted as soon as they produce a second leaf, for if left too long in the seed pan they fail to make good plants. Soil similar to that in which the seed germinated should be used for the potting, since calceolarias need a rich porous medium in which to develop. Care should be taken to select the weaker as well as the stronger seedlings, for the best colors are often found in the seedlings developed last; it is a general belief among growers that the stronger seedlings produce the greatest percentage of plants with yellow flowers, or flowers in which yellow predominates. The young seedlings should not be exposed to the direct rays of the sun and the roots should not be allowed to become dry.

When the young plants have four or five leaves, they should be repotted and allowed to develop until September, at as low a temperature as possible and under conditions of good ventilation. By this time the calceolaria plants are ready to be transferred to larger pots in which they may remain over winter. High temperatures should be avoided, from 45 to 50°F. being ample. As soon as growth begins in the spring the plants are ready for their final shift into six or eight-inch pots. Pot firmly but do not pack the soil so that it will prevent free ramification of the roots. When the pots are filled with roots, manure water may be added occasionally, but as soon as the flowers appear, clear water only should be given. Herbaceous calceolaria grown in this way and kept in a cool moist atmosphere with an abundance of light and air will produce an abundance of flowers in March or April.—Missouri Botanical Garden Bulletin.

Central Islip, N. Y.—The Conservation Commission has made arrangements to utilize some of the State ground for the cultivation of trees. About 250,000 pine and fir trees will be planted. The sub-nursery nearest Long Island heretofore has been in Westchester County.

SOME ARBORETUM FAVORITES.

The cherries and magnolias have been making a wonderful spectacle at the Arnold Arboretum during the past two weeks. They have never bloomed so profusely as this season. The most showy among the large number planted in the Arboretum are Prunus pendula, P. subhirtella and P. Sargentii, all highly esteemed and widely grown in Japan, their native country. The number of Japanese species and varieties of Prunus in the spring floral outburst at the Arboretum will be greatly multiplied in a few years when the extensive collections made by E. H. Wilson will have grown to impressive flowering size.

The magnolias like most other deciduous foliaged trees and shrubs look very happy this spring and have given probably the greatest number of flowers on record. M. conspicua, stellata and Soulangiana have been especially beautiful and the blooms have lasted in good condition for an unusually long period.

Obituary

Mrs. Maggie Rhedien.

Mrs. Maggie Rhedien died on Tuesday, April 27, at her home in Madison, N. J., after a long illness. She had been a resident of Madison for many years, and her husband, Thomas Rhedien, is well remembered as the owner of several greenhouses a few years ago. Her husband survives her.

Professor Henry S. Van Deman.

Professor Henry S. Van Deman, a noted pomologist, died at his home in Washington, D. C., on April 28. Professor Van Deman organized and was the first head of the Division of Pomology in the Department of Agriculture. He remained in the Government service from 1886 to 1893, when he resigned to enter on horticultural editorial work, and to take charge in an advisory capacity of large fruit and nut plantations in Louisiana, Kansas and Tennessee. He had served as a judge of exhibitions of fruit in practically every state in the Union, and at all the national expositions since 1876. He was an honorary member of fifteen state pomological associations and a life member of the National Pomological Society. Many fruits during the last twenty years have been developed and introduced on his judgment of their value.

Professor Van Deman was a native of Ohio and served through the civil war in the First Ohio Volunteers. He was the first professor of horticulture in the State University of Kansas. He was in demand as an adviser on orcharding in every state, and was probably better known in his profession than any other American in the last quarter century.

John Zech.

Again the Chicago wholesale florist have to part with one of their number. John Zech, just in the prime of life, was still one of the oldest in years of service, and has been connected closely with the development of the wholesale cut flower industry in Chicago from its beginning. He was born in La Porte, Ind., August 20, 1861 and came to Chicago when a young man. He was married to Lena Armbruster in 1883. His early trade was that of a stone cutter, but he was fond of a mercantile life and left his trade to become a salesman. In 1892 he began handling the stock grown by Peter and George Reinberg, in a part of Vaughan's Seed Store, and so successfully did he work out the details of a then almost unknown business, that he laid the foundations of what have now become two of the largest greenhouse establishments in the world. Mr. Zech was later with J. A. Budlong and then with E. C. Amling, going into business with Mathew Mann and forming the firm of Zech & Mann nine years ago and became one of the leading houses on Wabash Ave.

Mr. Zech has had occasional spells of what he considered stomach trouble and during a recent severe attack it was pronounced appendicitis, and an operation took place at Columbus Hospital, April 24, which terminated in his death April 29. He leaves, besides his widow, four children. The funeral took place at St. Gregory's church, May 3, and was largely attended by the trade. The floral offerings were unusually numerous and the home at 1835 Summerdale Ave., was almost filled with them. Interment was in St. Boniface Cemetery. The pallbearers were Peter and George Reinberg, Mathew Mann, Chas. Gross, Chas. Wunch and John Helligert.

Prof. J. F. Cowell.

John F. Cowell, director of the South Park Botanical Gardens, Buffalo, for the last twenty years, died suddenly on May 1, at his home, Ridge road.

PROF. J. F. COWELL.

Lackawanna. Dr. Lawrence Smith of East Aurora, who was called by the family when Professor Cowell was stricken, says the cause was heart disease.

Professor Cowell was a botanist of international repute, being an authority on orchids and tropical plants. He got home only two weeks ago from a trip to Cuba and Jamaica, where he went in search of new varieties of plants. On this trip he was accompanied by Dr. Britton, who has charge of the New York botanical gardens.

Professor Cowell was 63 years old. He was born in Boston, Mass. and while yet a young man was engaged in landscape work of considerable magnitude. Before entering the employ of the Buffalo park department he was principal of one of the public schools. In 1894 he took charge of South Park, Buffalo, which was then a barren tract, and under his devoted care it soon became a beauty spot. He was a member of the Western N. Y. Horticultural Society, Buffalo Florists' Club and Society of American Florists. He was a member of the S. A. F. Executive Committee in 1896-1897, 1899-1901 and was a very regular attendant at the annual conventions.

Personally Prof. Cowell was a favorite among the horticultural people with whom he came in contact. His unassuming manner and congenial traits brought him many friends, who will sincerely mourn his demise. He leaves one daughter, Mrs. Adelaide Moulthrop, and a son, Francis W. Cowell.

CLOSED FLOWER SEASON.

The suggestion comes from Connecticut that an arrangement might well be made for a closed season for flowers as well as for game. Why not? In many sections of New England the trailing arbutus and the mountain laurel must have more adequate protection or they will be in danger of becoming as extinct as the passenger pigeon in bird life. In the Berkshires, the mountain regions of Vermont and New Hampshire there has been an increasing tendency for years for persons to hoard their knowledge of the localities where early spring flowers and vines may be found. In many instances market men strip the hillsides of the beauty which nature has provided and reap a handsome profit out of what to them becomes merely a stock in trade. This year more than heretofore a spirit of protest is making itself heard. One result of the modern emphasis upon nature study is increased appreciation of the beauty and decorative possibilities of various plants which once attracted small attention. That these may be preserved for the benefit of the entire community a penalty might be exacted for the gathering, selling, or possessing certain flowers at certain times. It would at least induce greater care upon the part of the majority, even if it did not absolutely protect the hillsides from their despoilers. It is suggested, too, that the Boy Scouts and the Campfire Girls could help greatly in the protection of these flowers.—Boston Herald.

MISSOURI BOTANICAL GARDEN.

The New Formal Garden, with an area of about 35,000 square feet, is located in the court of the new conservatory. It is bounded on three sides—north, south, and east—by sections of the conservatory, and on the west the enclosure has been completed by a pergola. The strictly formal surroundings make a purely architectural design permissible and desirable here. The result is probably the most elaborate and finished garden ever attempted at the Missouri Botanical Garden. The walks are edged with yellow brick, the same shade as the path itself; low hedges border the beds; numerous vases, flower boxes, and garden seats have been used to set off the terminations of the walks; and the statue of Juno, which formerly was such a familiar object in the main garden occupies the center of the garden and forms its most conspicuous feature. Ultimately there will be two small fountains in the central panels while orange trees and pyramidal box-trees will also be used in the decoration. The principal feature during the flowering season will probably be the pattern bedding. It is believed that this form of gardening—usually much abused—is in harmony with the surroundings here.

The main bulb display in spring will be presented in this garden and a succession of bedding and foliage plants will keep these beds a mass of color in summer. A heavy border plantation of hardy shrubs, interspersed with Lombardy poplars surrounds the Garden on the three greenhouse sides, and the pergola at the west will be planted with vines. This pergola will undoubtedly prove a very popular retreat, for from it can be viewed not only the Formal Garden, but also the landscapes which ultimately will be developed to the west.

SEED TRADE

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION

Officers—President, Lester L. Morae, San Francisco, Calif.; First Vice-President, J. M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I.; Second Vice-President, I. C. Dungan, Philadelphia, Pa.; Secretary and Treasurer, C. L. Kendel, Cleveland, O.; Assistant Secretary, S. J. Willard, Jr., Cleveland, O.

Chicago, Ill., June 1, to overcome delay in getting orders on the way, the association are not so crowded and have more time to catch up with their mail orders.

Value of horticultural imports into New York for week ending April 24, 1915 is given as follows:

Nitrate of soda, $400; fertilizers, $5,460; guano, $1,700; grass seed, $1,610; palm seed, $540.

The joint regulations of the Secretary of the Treasury and of the Secretary of Agriculture, made under the Seed Importation Act, approved Aug. 24, 1912, are being revised with respect to sampling, examination of seeds and delivery in bond, release or recleaning of shipment, the disposition of refuse from recleaning, the prohibition against the mixing of seed found to be in violation of the Seed Importation Act, notice of removal from port of entry and the forwarding of samples of all forage plant seeds. The new regulations will go into effect on May 15.

McHutchison & Co., New York, writes that there is practically no doubt that fall and spring shipments from Holland will be made—and with the same despatch as last season, but they must book all orders "subject to arrival, without engagement, and subject to war conditions," while the war lasts. The war in Europe prevents Holland firms shipping to Germany and Belgium and reduces exports to most of the other countries. One result of this condition is very low prices for next season to American buyers, and gives a fine opportunity to "stock up," as the ocean freight rate from Holland remains the same as in normal seasons—no raise.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

Bulletin No. 1, Economic Biology, by Edward Howe Forbush, State Ornithologist of Massachusetts, is devoted to "Rats and Rat Riddance." This useful 88-page illustrated pamphlet should have a wide distribution. Copies may be obtained from the secretary of the State Board of Agriculture, Boston. Another valuable publication by the State Board of Agriculture, just received, is "Small Fruits and Berries." 152 pages of information on this important topic. Well illustrated.

MAIL SHIPMENTS TO CANADA REFUSED.

Postmasters have received instructions from Washington to the effect that hereafter no nursery stock, such as shrubs, trees, plants, vines, grafts, scions, cuttings or bedding plants, shall be received for exportation through the mails of Canada.

The order also states that greenhouse grown florists' stock, cut flowers, perennials and other plants can be accepted for export to that country only when accompanied by a detailed statement showing the contents. The Canadian Government has already refused several nursery shipments and a notice to the department has resulted in the new order.

Appreciation of the contribution of Mothers Day is interesting to note the diplomatic way in which the various retailers are handling the situation in order to create a popular demand for flowers other than carnations. We hope they will succeed.

The Ludwig Floral Company have the contract to decorate the Soldiers Memorial Hall, when the Independent Order of Odd Fellows of Allegheny County will hold a memorial service for their departed. White lilies and carnations will be the flowers used.

DeForest W. Ludwig, Harry O. Demmler and Edward Demmler, who have been making an extended tour of the Yosemite Valley, Yellowstone National Park and California, are now in Seattle. They are scheduled to return home about June 1, although there is a prospect of the homecoming being postponed a little later.

Undoubtedly the finest mushrooms grown hereabout are those raised by Frank Crook in the James H. Park greenhouse conservatory. Last fall he planted fifty bricks, and since early in November has been averaging a bushel weekly, some of the products measuring six inches across. Prior to coming to this city fourteen years ago Mr. Crook was with Henry A. Dreer in Philadelphia. Orchids are his special passion.

B. F. Clark has recently just completed work on the north end of the St. Paul's Cathedral grounds, which included regrading and planting with new trees and shrubbery. The lawn and plantations which he supervised for the new First Baptist Church, Bellefield, last year, now presents a most attractive setting for the beautiful edifice. In addition to his ecclesiastical work Mr. Clark has the supervision of a number of private grounds, as well as being landscape architect for the Schenley Farms Company.

WASHINGTON.

A postal card received from Henry Pfister, who was formerly engaged in the florist business on Connecticut Avenue, and who is now in Europe, states that he contemplates returning to this country early in June.

Ernest F. Gude, son of William F. Gude, who was recently appointed to a position in the Geological Survey, is now with a field party in the southwestern part of Ohio. He will be away from Washington until November.

A handsome gold medal has been presented to the Brookland Rose Society by the rector of the Catholic University which is to be competed for annually. The fourth show to be given by this organization will be held May 20 and 21.

Congratulations are being extended to Walter E. Hawley, with Gude Bros. Company, upon his joining the ranks of the benedicts. Mr. Hawley, accompanied by Miss Margaret Oliver paid a visit to Baltimore on April 15, where the knot was tied. Nothing was known of the affair until a notice was posted on the time clock announcing the event. Mr. Hawley then admitted taking the step which will prevent his going to motion picture shows without a permit from his better half.

Thos. Stock, of Milton, has received the silver trophy which commemorates the Pacific Coast Horticultural Exposition.

The sum of $5000 is bequeathed to the Massachusetts Horticultural Society by the will of the late Miss Helen Collamore of Boston.

Horticultural Education will be the subject of an address by Prof. A. H. Nehrling at the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club on Tuesday evening, May 18.

J. W. Simpson of Woburn has had splendid success this winter with his crops of marguerites and carnations. He is setting out his carnations into the field this week.

The seed stores are doing a large business in garden implements just now. Fottler, Fiske, Rawson Co. state that spring business will probably exceed that of last year.

Henry Penn has been elected president of the Bromfield Street Business Men's Association. This is a new organization formed to boom the interests of the 109 business firms located on the thoroughfare.

We are pleased to report that Wm. J. Thurston, the genial manager of the Boston Flower Exchange, has recuperated from the illness which threatened a nervous breakdown. He is now residing in Watertown.

Some specialties noted this week in the markets are pansies from W. E. Turner, of Woburn; yellow marguerites from J. K. Chandler & Sons, of Tewksbury; roses from McAlpine Bros., of Exeter, N. H.; and sweet peas from the Halifax Garden Co.

Patrick Welch opened up his new wholesale flower mart at 262 Devonshire street, on Monday morning, May 3. The venture was a popular success at once especially among the early morning buyers and a big business has been transacted every day since.

C. B. Johnson of Woburn is one of the successful carnation growers of this locality and in his four big houses produces very fine stock. Chas. J. Jager Co., of 15 Custom House St., Boston, has secured his order for Skinner System equipment, which will be installed shortly.

J. W. Cummings of Woburn has filled his houses with a fine growth of cucumber plants. He alternates this crop with single violets in fall and winter. Mr. Cummings expects to install an overhead sprinkling system very soon over his extensive holdings on land in the immediate neighborhood of the greenhouses.

Paul E. Richwagen, of Needham, estimates a loss of $500 to his young carnation stock from the recent electical storm. A lot of $500 was caused by the breaking down of the chimneys and smoking shed. One of the men in the plants shed at the time was crushed by a falling brick.

The local violet growers have turned their attention to the winter season. G. P. Russell and Wm. Sprague of Woburn, who specialize in violets during the winter, are now growing tomato plants. The Wm. Wm. Flower Co., is busy with cucumbers and sweet peas which it produces in large quantity.

Anderson Bros. of Woburn are growing a small quantity of a new variety of aster, shell pink, which they claim will prove to be a revelation. This new aster has been tried out by them and by Gustav Olson of Woburn, who is the originator, for the last two years. They expect to disseminate the seed this season.

Wm. S. Grassie, of Waverley, is still missing from his home. No word has been heard from him since his disappearance three weeks ago. Mr. Grassie was a hard worker and was well liked by the trade. He has had some unfortunate reverses since he began business and the current opinion is that this is the cause of his leaving town.

A promising outlet for surplus stock is being developed lately through the various "Tag Days" held by local charity institutions. Experience has shown that the general public will more quickly respond to a sale of flowers than to direct requests for contributions. Wholesale dealers have been receiving some large orders from charitable institutions for this purpose. "Tag Days" have recently been held in Hyde Park, Everett, Somerville and Salem.

SAN FRANCISCO.

Clara County was awarded the silver trophy commemorating Wild Flower Day, celebrated at the exposition last week.

Wm. Vertriebe, head gardener of the state, has been in Los Angeles at the call of the normal school there, following the recent announcement by State Superintendent of Capital and Grounds Geo. G. Radcliff, that Mr. Vertriebe would be allowed to assist any of the cities or schools in beautification work.

Among the special events which are scheduled to take place in San Francisco this year and are now demanding the attention of the trade is the Chrysanthemum Show, to be held in the fall. This will be arranged under the direction of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society in conjunction with the Horticultural Department of the Exposition and the National Chrysanthemum Society.

The flowers at the exposition continue to come out in fine shape. The rose garden in the California section of the horticultural gardens is attracting increasing attention, and the German iris is taking the place of the large quantities of tulips, which were in blossom last month. It was estimated that at one time there were no less than 500,000 red and yellow tulips out. The Court of the Universe is a beautiful sight with its 8,000 rhododendron plants blossoming in four massive beds.

There is a tendency among business houses to put on their best appearance this year during the Exposition, and the florist shops are no exception. They are paying particular attention to their displays, with the result that the growers in this vicinity have more call for unusually large, fine or rare specimens than is normally the case. A short time ago Podesta & Baldocchi had on display at their Grant avenue shop a rhododendron plant, said to be the finest specimen ever shown here; this week Pelicano, Rossi & Co. have in their window on Kearny street an elaborate showing of orchids, including a Cattleya Mossiae from the Berkeley establishment of J. A. Carbone, bearing 200 blooms, and other notable displays are weekly making their appearance.

The Convention Garden of the Society of American Florists in Golden Gate Park is rapidly being prepared under the supervision of John McLaren, superintendent of the park. Fifteen men are employed there at present. Some fine exhibits from various large nurserymen and florists will be installed this month. Ten thousand feet of space have already been subscribed for and applications for space and further particulars are beginning to come in more freely from the east, which is gratifying to the local committee, as practically all the space so far reserved has been taken by Pacific Coast growers. This exhibit will undoubtedly be of great interest to the eastern delegates, as many plants shown in the open here are grown under glass in the East and Middle West.

CHICAGO NOTES.

A. E. Hunt has taken a part of the store occupied by D. E. Frerers, in the Atlas Block.

R. Schmidt, of Frank Schmidt's, and family are visiting in Ohio and Kentucky for ten days.

The Harry Rowe store will be ready for Kyle & Forester about May 15. Soon there will be so many florists on the ground floor that the upper floors will have to offer extra inducements to customers.

John Sinner and Martha Gunterberg have given up their wholesale store in the Fairbanks Bldg. and moved into the Atlas Block, at 158 N. Wabash Ave., where J. B. Deamud was formerly. They have taken out a three years' lease on the main floor.

From the florists' standpoint the month of April was too warm and too dry and the footings in the sales books show a poor month financially. To the growers the drouth has meant possibilities of problems later. Every one was glad when the new month came in cold and a much needed rain followed.

John Walsh, of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, is rejoicing in the recovery of a fine gold watch, which was stolen from the store during the Prosperity Parade, a week ago. It was found at a pawn shop, but the chain is still missing. Two years ago John Walsh and Mike Fink both had their watches stolen from the store and neither one was recovered.

Mathew Mann in speaking of the changes caused by the death of his partner, John Zech, said that Allie Zech would become at once the manager of the store and take his father's place in the business. He is one of the young men in the trade. Like his father, he has a natural aptitude for the florist business and has had several years' training. His friends wish him success in his new and responsible position.

Flower Market Reports

Conditions are much better at the present writing than they have been during the last few weeks. This applies more directly to the wholesale markets than to the retail stores, although the latter have not been idle. The weather during the last month was extremely dry and sunny and an excess supply of everything was the result. But the reverse is now true. Beginning with a severe electrical storm last week the air has continually been charged with moisture, the breeze chilly and snappy, the clouds threatening torrents, etc. Thus a short supply exists, and what with Mothers' Day coming on, carnations are expected to soar to $6.00 and $8.00 per 100. There has been a scarcity of this crop all week, making the average price $3.00 per 100. Roses seem to be plentiful all the time and no change is evident in this stock. May Day business was rather disappointing; only one or two retailers attempted to exploit it. It is unfortunate that an undersupply of stock seems so evident for Mothers' Day, in direct opposition to the plans of leading retailers, who realize that the success of the day depends upon a reasonable charge for carnations and other flowers.

The market was over-loaded all last week and values were simply all cut to pieces. Speculative buying was quiet. Saturday was a cleaning-up day for carnations, but roses did not move well. The situation was very discouraging. Beauties, too, were plentiful and prices low. This week the market shows a little activity and a good portion of stock is being consumed. The week should end more satisfactorily, as Mothers' Day is looked to as a help-out.

The demand has increased along all staple lines during the past week. Some of the more optimistic wholesalers see quite a change for the better while some are still anxiously looking. The sudden drop in temperature, no doubt, played a large part in the change, keeping people in the house and making social life more active. At any rate, there are less flowers left on the counters and better prices are obtained for those that are sold, than since before Easter. The market cleans up to a fair degree each day. All kinds of stock are of good quality in spite of the summer temperature that prevailed for days. Ferns are now sold at three dollars per thousand and those not supplied are looking over the situation with an anxious eye. The week was marked by the first appearance of peonies for the season. They came from Indiana and are offered for from 60 to 75 cents per dozen. Mothers' Day and carnation prices are absorbing the attention of all. A few jonquils are still seen, but bulbous stock is considered of the past.

The demand for CINCINNATI stock is fairly active but not very large while the supply continues to be more than sufficient for immediate needs. Shipping business is fair. Judging from reports from growers at the time of this writing the supply of white carnations will be very large. Both roses and carnations are very plentiful. The cut of lilies easily takes care of all wants in this line. Sweet peas were greatly affected by the hot weather, but new cuts and crops are very good in quality. Some very fine iris may be had. Gladioli receipts are still rather limited; they have a good market. Orchids are unusually fine. A few peonies are in and the new southern fern is now in the market.

Market conditions are NEW YORK overturned this week. It is safe to say the supply has fallen off 75 per cent. Weather has been cold and disagreeable and stock actually scarce though quite enough for the demand. On last Saturday prices advanced sharply, Beauties going to 20 and 25c., but they are now down again to 10 and 15c. Mothers' Day of course has caused the prices to boom up in carnations and there is a possibility of their going still higher by Saturday. Outdoor lilac is everywhere. Bulbous stock is about gone—ditto violets. Lilies find a good demand. Hadley roses are most sought and it is said that some especially good blooms bring 30c.

PHILADELPHIA Business continues on a fairly satisfactory basis.

Conditions are about as last reported. Big supplies and low prices. The growers manage to make some kind of a clean-up at the end of the week, although at big sacrifices. Roses are going off rapidly both in quantity and quality. Not nearly as many Beauties as a week ago. Russells still very good and selling well. These and Hadley and Double White Killarney are the leaders at present. Carnation market about normal; prices low. Last year, white for Mothers' Day, were quoted eight to ten. This year six to eight is the asking figure, four days ahead. Sweet peas are of poor substance and quality—except from growers who are cutting from fresh new vines. Prices on orchids stiffened up a little. Not so many of these coming in. There is a good supply of Spanish iris, and they are selling fairly well. There is a limited supply of gandavensis gladioli on the market; but the bulk of the arrivals so far are of the "baby" type. Not much life to the snapdragon market. No snap to it. Callas and lilies both in reduced supply. These are gradually getting back to where they belong.

SAN FRANCISCO In regard to market conditions there is little change since last week. Business is about normal and supplies continue plentiful, which tends to keep prices steady. Some nice gardenias have appeared within the last few days, and orchids are coming in as rapidly as desired by the trade. Peonies are in good supply and the demand is very satisfactory. Tulips are practically off the market, after a successful season, but some good narcissus and daffodils are still in evidence. German and Spanish iris are having a good call. Business is a little spotted on roses, but some kinds are moving nicely. Carnations and sweet peas continue a little over plentiful in view of only a moderate demand.

ST. LOUIS Conditions in the wholesale market have not changed any since last reported. Everything is coming in more plentiful than ever and prices have dropped if anything on the quotations reported in last issue. The big receipts of outdoor stock has contributed to this stagnation. While the trade is buying liberally daily the receipts have been so heavy that there is a big surplus left after the daily sales are over. Carnations have been the worry of the wholesaler all week as how to dispose of them. The supply of roses was equally heavy at all times and everything else in season is coming in in such large lots that it is impossible for the wholesalers to unload at any price.

WASHINGTON There are not nearly as many flowers going to waste this week, and on several days the street men found it quite difficult to obtain cheap stock. Local stock is not quite as good as that from the north, which is receiving preference on all orders. Mothers' Day advance orders have increased the carnation demand, causing the price to jump from $2 and $3, the quotation for the first of the week to $6 and $8 for white, and up to $4 and $5 for pink. Gladioli is coming into the market in increasing quantities. Iris is quite plentiful. Lilac and other spring blossoms, which have been so very plentiful, are rapidly approaching their end. Outdoor lily of the valley is not bringing very much in the way of price. Gardenias are getting small and poor and their demand has lightened. Orchids are cleaning up nicely. The demand for white and yellow daisies has kept up well. Cowslips are about done for and violets are practically over. Business since the beginning of the month has showed a decided improvement.

HORTICULTURE INDISPENSABLE

The following examples of many approving letters received at the office of HORTICULTURE during the past few weeks, show why HORTICULTURE is so valuable as an advertising medium. Intensive circulation is HORTICULTURE'S best quality and practically every reader is a possible customer for the advertiser.

Gentlemen:—Last week's HORTICULTURE is not received. Have you scratched me off your list, or what is the matter? Appreciate your paper more than any of half a dozen I am receiving, and don't want to miss any copies. Will you please investigate?

Yours truly,
Missouri. A. B. K.

Gentlemen:—It is getting late in the season and we wish to discontinue the advertisements which we carry in your paper. We would say that the advertisements which we have carried in your paper have brought us good results, and we feel that the money so expended was well invested.

Yours truly,
Standard Thermo Company,
S. C. LORD, President.

Kindly discontinue my advertisement in the classified ad. section of HORTICULTURE, rendering bill to date.

Yours is a very good advertising medium. We have rid ourselves of practically all our surplus stock, and are therefore obliged to discontinue.

Very truly yours,
Mass. A.

Dear Horticulture:

We can't keep house without you, and you can't travel without money, therefore I enclose money order to keep you coming for 1915.

Yours admiringly,
Iowa. E. S.

Here is my dollar for the 1915 trip with HORTICULTURE. HORTICULTURE is all right.
New York. P. F.

Enclosed is post office order to pay for HORTICULTURE two years more. I like HORTICULTURE very much and hope to read it many more years.
N. Y. S. F.

One of the many good features of HORTICULTURE is, that those who contribute to its columns always "say something" when they write. I take this opportunity to offer sincere congratulations. "May your shadow never grow less."

Sincerely yours,
New York. P. F.

Editor Horticulture:

Dear Sir — Enclosed please find $1.00, my subscription to your valuable paper for another year. Cannot do without it.

Dear Sirs — Enclosed please find one dollar for another year of the HORTICULTURE. My time is not up yet, but it won't be long. All I can say about your paper is that it is the best of its kind, and I read them all.
R. I. J. B.

Enclosed are two dollars in payment for your very valuable paper. I find its contents timely and instructive.

Sincerely,
Conn. C. S.

Gentlemen:—My paper did not arrive as usual on Saturday. It is all I have to look forward to each week; do not allow that to fail me. Kindly send one along at express rate.

Alexander G. Bryce, formerly on the Arthur E. Davis estate, Dover, Mass., is now superintendent for Mr. F. H. Beebe on his place at Falmouth, Mass.

Ex-Representative John G. Tilden was elected Secretary of the Park Commission of the City of Malden at the organization of the Board on Monday evening, May 3. Mr. Tilden's selection to the Park Board meets with general approval of the horticultural profession.

Roy L. Paine, of Holbrook, Mass., a student at the Ohio State University, recently made a tour of the middle western states for the purpose of studying the greenhouse ranges and fruit orchards of that section. Mr. Pierce will graduate from the general horticulture course at the university in June, and will then return to Holbrook, where he will enter business with his father, Charles L. Pierce.

The countless friends of Fred Lautenschlager who sells Kroeschell boilers from the Atlantic to the Pacific will all be interested in the news that on April 30 he became the surprised and happy father of a pair of twins—young ladies both. We don't make a custom of recording this particular class of family events, but those of our readers whose performances in this line have not been chronicled will, we trust, pardon the apparent discrimination in this case which all will agree is exceptional for a beginner. We here promise that all of the craft who may successfully emulate Fred's notable example, will be accorded full recognition and wide publicity in the columns of HORTICULTURE.

SCOTCH SOOT

Where there is a house that is just full of buds almost ready to show color, nothing will turn better color into the flowers than a little soot, that can be scattered over the benches before watering. The amount applied should not be excessive, as the soot is very strong and may damage some of the foliage somewhat. Apply just enough to blacken the surface of the soil in the benches, and let it go at that. Better a little oftener than too much all at once.

We offer the genuine in original cwt. Sacks, at:
$4.00 per 112 lbs.; $17.50 per 560 lbs.

We know the ADVANCE line is right, and guarantee it in every possible manner.

Thirty-two hundred customers, and every one of them satisfied. We consider this a good record. You can place absolute confidence in a concern with such a record.

Before you buy anything in our line elsewhere, be prepared to compare our material and prices.

This certainly looks more like a glimpse in some park than the entrance to the Saucon Plant of the big Bethlehem Steel Works.

Some Interesting Greenhouse Facts About the Big Bethlehem Steel Plant

This is Mr. Gross himself, the man who has selected the steel plant officials with the floral to introduce them. It is one of the most valuable men known. With out it, his is indeed a difficult job.

JUST now when this wonderful plant, miles long, is turning out so many mammoth guns for the war, and when its common stock has had its sensation in Wall Street, it gives added interest to the floral expressions that one so unexpectedly finds on their grounds. At a gritty, stony steel plant you don't expect to find much sentiment. But it seems that within us all, no matter what our business, there lurks a love for flowers.

For the conversion of the office grounds of this vast concern into spots of beauty John Gross, one of the superintendents, is responsible. He started with a small lawn at the Saucon office. The other offices followed. Some foliage plant were contributed. Then two or three hundred feet of a road for flowers by "chipping in." The interest became so keen that a little homemade greenhouse was put up. Soon it was too small. Then came the word for a modern house costing several thousand dollars.

And so it is that strength and fragile beauty are linked. Man demands strength; but he also craves the beautiful. The big manufacturing plants are recognizing the importance of contributing their part in satisfying this craving by decorating their grounds and encouraging the interest of their men; is not alone sentiment; it is a wonderful economic move, the money value of which the big executives are growing more and more to fully appreciate.

In some future issue we will tell you of other big industries that have their own greenhouses.

This is W. G. Mangum, the gardener, who so successfully grows thousands of plants now needed to meet the ever increasing demands of the broadening germ.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Asters

Aster growers should not be in too great haste to plant out. Raw cold winds, I believe, are the principal cause of turning vigorous little asters into a lot of yellow, blighted or stunted plants. Indoor-grown plants should first be well weaned to open-air conditions. Potted plants or those once transplanted may be set out on the sunniest day, but for the planting of those coming directly from the seed bed a warm but somewhat cloudy day should be chosen. There is no doubt that the finest asters are raised on light, sandy soils, deeply plowed or dug and quite heavily fertilized with rough barnyard manure the year previous. I like to have the land well plowed, manured and thoroughly prepared in October or November. A certain amount of plant food can be added by a good sprinkling of bone dust and wood ashes which should be thoroughly incorporated with the soil. It will always be more profitable to fertilize one piece of ground well than a larger piece imperfectly.

Young Primulas

All primulas like a cool place and are benefited by a little shade. A cold frame is the ideal location for them. During the summer and until the first of September they are better when grown under shade made of ordinary building laths, which can be put on as the sun begins to get strong in the morning, and taken off late in the afternoon when it is on the wane. Where they are in 2-inch pots and fairly well rooted they should have a shift into 3-inch pots. Give them a compost of fibrous loam four parts, leaf mold that is not too old one part, well rotted cow manure one part, and a little sand. Keep shifting into larger pots until they are in their flowering sizes which will be all the way from 4-inch up to 6-inch. Use fibrous loam three parts, cow manure and leaf mold one part each.

Hardy Stock for Late Spring Sales

We should not overlook the ordering and potting up of a good number of vines, such as Ampelopsis Veitchii, or Boston ivy, Clematis Jackmanni and paniculata, honeysuckles and climbing roses. While these head the list there are quite a number of others for which there is often a call. Most of us have a demand for hardy plants, and they are as profitable as anything we could possibly handle. An assortment of hardy roses, herbaceous perennials, shrubs, trees and other nursery stock in pots for planting work late in the season is always advisable. There is no better time than the present to sow hardy perennials. Seeds can be sown in a cold frame or in the open ground on a well prepared and mellow surface. Make rows three or four inches apart and cover the seed about three times their size with soil.

Orchids

As the season advances this department will require more air. Consequently syringings overhead once or twice a day will be necessary. Air should be left on during damp weather to prevent the young growths from rotting. Ventilation must be carefully regulated, avoiding cold droughts and sudden changes. Varieties such as Cattleya Trianae, Percivaliana and others starting action in poor material, should be repotted. Coeogyne cristata will now have finished blooming and will soon start into new growth and root action. A free, cool atmosphere with spraying overhead once or twice a day and all the sun during winter is necessary to ensure good flowers. During their growing season a high degree of moisture must be maintained, the amount and frequency of the watering and sprinkling of the floors, etc., will depend largely upon the weather.

Ramblers for Memorial Day

It is a good plan to force these roses so they will be out four or five days ahead, which will allow them to be moved into cooler quarters to harden them up. Roses that have been held back for this date should be brought into heat now. First allow from 60 to 65 degrees at night and every morning if the weather is at all clear give a good syringing to thoroughly dampen the foliage. They will want plenty of water at the roots. As soon as it is seen that the buds are breaking lower the temperature to 58 degrees at night, and this may be maintained until the flower buds appear. When they become covered with plenty of foliage and the buds just peeping out you can improve them by giving weekly doses of manure water. Elevate good specimens on pots. Do not allow the plants to stand too close together. It should be borne in mind that attacks from mildew or green fly are likely to happen and careful attention to details with regard to fumigating and ventilating will have to be given.

Watering

At this time of the year stock, especially that in pots, is very liable to suffer from the want of water. This should be guarded against as it is sure to put the stock in bad condition if allowed to happen too often.

A discredited hedge plant

Some advices from various places once more expose the utter unworthiness of the so-called California privet as a hedgeplant in those sections of this country where garden hedges are most needed and sought. About Boston, people generally have learned to be cautious about placing any dependence upon this treacherous ligustrum and more and more we see Berberis Thunbergii given the preference where a permanently reliable, ornamental hedge is desired. The cheapness of the privet, due to its simple and rapid growth, no doubt influenced many in the nursery trade to propagate it and push its sales with the public but, in the long run, nothing is gained by this or by any other course which, when followed, is pretty sure to effectually squelch horticultural zeal on the part of the home maker as well as to weaken and destroy confidence in the men who advise or condone the use of such material in latitudes and exposures where Berberis is doomed to succumb.

A situation to be faced

The New York florists—and also those of Boston in a lesser degree—feel keenly the loss of the steamer flower trade this season. This trade had in recent years reached a volume in money value which was not generally realized. The flowers used were of the highest quality as a rule and the prices realized were usually top-notch. The loss of this trade will affect more or less directly every department of commercial floriculture. How long the situation will continue thus, no man can predict but it will probably be years—perhaps many years—before old conditions in this respect are fully restored. In the meantime, however, it will not do for those who suffer from this unfortunate situation to just sit down and lament. What can be advised or what course laid out which will foster and bring about a wider use of flowers right here? People will stay on American soil this year as they never have done before. What practical use can we make of this fact? Pastimes they must and will have and anything that the flower growers, flower dealers and kindred industries can devise to promote the use of fresh flowers at all occasions of any social importance, will be effort well expended. It is an unprecedented emergency which now confronts the florist. Don't forget that "God helps those who help themselves."

Backyard gardening

It is a source of much satisfaction to learn through Patrick O'Mara of the Peter Henderson seed house that, notwithstanding the many set-backs which the seed trade in common with most other lines of industry has to face this season, the demand for vegetable seeds for planting in the home garden shows a very remarkable growth. This we are told is most pronounced in the call for the smaller and lower-priced collections than in the higher priced sets and specialties. This form of backyard gardening has been growing quite steadily within the last few years in every section of the country, as most seedsmen will, we believe, be ready to testify, but our people have a long way to go yet before they can at all compare with the people of most European countries in this production of good food for the home table. When they have come to a fuller realization of the profitable use to which the now vacant land can thus be put, then they will have made a most substantial progress toward the solution of that disturbing problem, "the high cost of living." Small fruits as well as vegetables should have a much more general planting than is yet the case. We have no doubt that if the nurserymen and seedsmen of any live town or village would undertake a personally conducted campaign of direct appeal and advice to every family on the advantages and delights which appertain to the growing, harvesting and eating of fruits and vegetables in the development of which each member of the family has had a part, the normal sale of seeds and bushes would soon be many times multiplied. And that is just what we need.

Theories Upset

Although the past winter may have upset some theories regarding the hardiness of many plants we cannot regard the results of our experiences as conclusive. Weather conditions during late winter were impartial as to the choice of subjects; natives as well as "foreign born" suffered about equally. A condition rather than a theory upset our calculations and a condition always liable to occur, no matter how much in the way of plant breeding and selection for hardier types. The acclimatization of plants from seed by natural as well as artificial means will still go on.

I wish to record some experiences I have had during recent years in plant breeding for a hardier type among Taxus—yew. Although most of the kind we have been working on are recognized by the trade as species, I do not believe there is more than three species, and if any one set up a theory that there was only one, I think I should support him without much question,—which is about the same thing as saying that Taxus is probably a monotypic genus.

We have been raising yews from seed for ten or twelve years. We have done no artificial, except to proximate the plants; nature has done what was done. We saved seed of each carefully; kept the seedlings apart expecting the characteristics of each type to reproduce itself, with more or less distinctness. As the plants year by year developed we found a convergence on one type, and that was baccata, which to me appears evidence that the yew is monotypic.

We used the Irish yew; the English yew in various forms and with as many distinctive names; both forms of the Japan yew T. cuspidata and the China form of cuspidata—known as T. Sieboldii. T. canadensis was present in the near vicinity and could easily have effect.

We use both green and golden-leaved and found golden-leaved varieties quite common among all the seedlings—to me some evidence of the uniformity of type.

Whatever we have used it apparently made no difference, and what we got in no case resembled its parent. The most valuable result of all is in the way of acclimatization,—all are hardy.

Winter Killing

I was much interested in Mr. Wilson's article in your issue of May 1. You in the East will now know how to pity us in the West. With us the winter drouth is often terrible. So we cannot raise rhododendrons, azaleas, kalmias or any of the broad-leaved evergreens. The only thing in that line we can raise is the Berberis repens or creeping barberry. This is a prolific bloomer—flowers golden and very fragrant—fruit edible. It is often called the Oregon grape. But in some winters in full exposure this will turn. In beautiful clear weather in February I have watched grape vines kill back an inch a day. Prof. Hansen crossed Shafer's Colossal with a Manitoba red raspberry which does well in the north, and is very hardy in Minnesota, but it kills to the ground in Nebraska except this winter, when you gave us a New England winter, and we loaned you for a short time a section of Nebraska winter just to let you see how you liked it.

SOME ROSE PARENTAGES.

Editor HORTICULTURE:

Can anyone tell me positively whether the rose Mrs. George Shawyer is a T. or H. T.? Authorities seem to differ on this question. E. E.

The rose "Mrs. George Shawyer" (Lowe & Shawyer 1911) was put out by the originators as an H. T. Of course you may remember they made distributing arrangements for America with Mr. Totty. As an outdoor plant it has the characteristics of an H. T., but your question is likely to arouse considerable debate, because frankly I do not believe any of us in the rose business know where we are at. My opinion is the Victor Verdier (Lacharme 1860) should be classed as an H. T., and if we start there and all agree to that start we probably could clear the field.

Then LaFrance, Capt. Christy and K. A. Victoria were all put out as H. P's, but we agree that they are H. T. Then when we come to Frau Karl Druschki (P. Lambert 1901), Mr. Lambert describes it as a "Remontant Rose with H. T. characteristics," but after all said and done we come to Hugh Dickson and J. B. Clark, both of them Lord Bacon X Gruss an Teplitz, and we call one an H. P. and the other (J. B. Clark) an H. T., and I was assured that the seed of both these roses came from the same hep.

A POSSIBLE NEW HEDGE PLANT.

At Tachien-lu on the borders of Tibet, at about eight thousand feet above the sea, Mr. Wilson found hedges from 6 to 8 feet high and so thick and spiny that a yak, an animal as strong as an ox, could not break through them. The plant of which these hedges were made, Ribes alpestre, var. commune, is now in flower in the collection of Chinese shrubs on Bussey Hill. This Gooseberry has grown rapidly in the Arboretum and appears to be perfectly hardy. There is little to recommend it as a garden shrub for the flowers are small and inconspicuous, and the acid fruit is covered with prickles and has little beauty, but as a hedge plant it may prove valuable in the cold parts of the country.—Arnold Arboretum Bulletin.

A BROOKLINE GARDEN.

Our title page this week presents a very comprehensive view in one of the smaller elaborate garden estates in the vicinity of Boston that of F. C. Fletcher at Brookline, Mass. The grounds are arranged to give the impression of extensiveness and to accommodate as many and varied features as possible. The pergolas which appear in the centre will soon be almost hidden by a luxuriant growth of rambler roses. The greenhouse while not large is a model in its way and incorporates all the best ideas of the Lord & Burnham Company in really serviceable modern construction. Warren Manning laid out the grounds.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

NEW YORK FLORISTS' CLUB.

The annual concert that E. H. Wilson, from the Arnold Arboretum, Boston, would entertain the club with a talk on the gardens of Japan, illustrated by colored stereopticon views taken in the Mikado's country, brought out a crowd which well filled the club room. Previous to Mr. Wilson's appearance, however, an unexpected incident occurred—a visit and address by Miss Jarvis, of Philadelphia, the lady who is said to have started "Mothers' Day." Miss Jarvis undertook to upbraid the florists for their interference and efforts to popularize flowers other than the white carnation for exploitation on Mothers' Day. Judging from the facial expression and subsequent comments of her audience one could but think of the line in the old song in which Mrs. O'Flaherty figured. "It's lucky for you that you're not a man!" The inopportune effort was, however, courteously received and Max Schling and J. B. Nugent, both of whom took the floor in rejoinder to the lady's plea, while decidedly forceful in their expressions, made an excellent record for gallant self-control.

R. Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., gave a little talk on the subject of the birth of another daughter to the S. A. F., the American Dahlia Society, which he had helped to organize that afternoon, and made a speech that was both humorous and eloquent for his favorite flower.

J. K. M. L. Farquhar, who had accompanied the lecturer of the evening from Boston as accredited body-guard, was then called upon by President Bunyard for an introductory word regarding Mr. Wilson and his work, which Mr. Farquhar did in a very witty and appropriate manner, and was followed by T. A. Havemeyer, who spoke briefly but enthusiastically of his pleasure at the opportunity to hear Mr. Wilson.

Mr. Wilson was then introduced, the lights were turned down and for an hour the club members were entertained with a series of beautiful views of Japanese gardens and natural scenery, pleasingly described in a manner which left no doubt of how close to Mr. Wilson's heart were the scenes he portrayed. He told of the great holidays of the cherries, of which the Japanese have no less than seventy varieties under cultivation, and showed one famous specimen of Prunus pendula known to be over 400 years old. The glory of the wisteria bloom was impressively shown and Mr. Wilson said that the species grown in Japan should do equally well in this country under intelligent cultivation, of which a very liberal supply of water is a very important factor. The Japan people make gardening a hobby and regard it as man's highest profession, but they had never taken any particular interest in the lily until they began to realize its commercial possibilities. One reason for the unhealthy character of the auratum and other lily bulbs as received from Japan is the insatiable demand in this country for large-sized bulbs and the cultural methods pursued in order to gratify this call.

There was a fair-sized display of plants and flowers on the exhibition tables. Awards were bestowed as follows: Award of merit of culture to collection of hardy herbaceous flowers from A. N. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn.; pansies and bedding plants from Charles Hunt, Staten Island, English daisies from Charles Schienlg, Elmhurst, N. Y. The light pink carnation Baroness de Brenner, an introduction by Stuart Low & Co., of London, England, was shown by S. J. Batchelor, of Mamaroneck, and scored 86 points, thus securing a preliminary certificate. Van Waveren & Son showed some handsome Darwin tulips and new narcissi.

PACIFIC COAST HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The Pacific Coast Horticultural Society held its regular monthly meeting on May 1, with a large attendance. The session was largely confined to routine business. Daniel MacRorie gave a detailed report on preparations for the coming convention of the Society of American Florists, putting special emphasis on the progress being made at the Convention Garden in Golden Gate Park. Plans were also discussed regarding various other coming events, including the Fall Flower Show, the May Flower Show, which is in progress this week, and a sweet pea show to be held in June. Representing the exhibition committee, H. Plath urged the co-operation of the members of the society in participating in these shows. The resignation of J. Jacques as treasurer was presented and accepted. The vacancy was filled by the nomination of Daniel Raymond for the office. Awards were made for the following exhibits: General McArthur roses, by E. Gill; Baby Standard Thyme citriodora by Frank Pelicano; Primula obconica by H. Plath, and Adiantum Farleyense by the MacRorie-McLaren Co.

GARDENERS' AND FLORISTS' CLUB OF BOSTON.

At the next club meeting on May 15, in Horticultural Hall, Prof. A. H. Nehrling, of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, Amherst, will speak on "Horticultural Education," a subject which should appeal to all classes of our members. There will be some fine exhibits as usual. The club will hold a field day at the Arnold Arboretum on Friday, May 21. Members and friends are asked to meet at the Forest Hills entrance at 2.30 o'clock. To reach the Forest Hills gate take elevated, steam or surface cars to Forest Hills. The entrance is only five minutes' walk from the elevated and steam railroad stations. A large variety of trees and shrubs will be in fine condition on May 21 and the field day should prove a most profitable one.

ROCHESTER FLORISTS' ASSOCIATION.

The Rochester Florists' Association held their regular meeting on May 10th at their rooms, No. 95 Main street East. President Charles Vick presiding. It was reported that the Syracuse Florists' Club will be here next Sunday, May 16th, to see the lilac display at the parks, etc. They will be met by a committee of Rochester florists, who will take the visitors about. On May 22nd, the Ontario Horticultural Society of Canada will visit Rochester to inspect the parks and floral Rochester, and will also be entertained by a committee of Rochester florists.

A committee consisting of Messrs. Dunbar, Dildine and King was appointed to draw up resolutions on the sad death of J. W. Cragg, who passed away Sunday May 9th. The resolutions follow:

Whereas, It has pleased the Author of Life to call from this earth our esteemed friend and member, Mr. J. W. Cragg; therefore, be it

Resolved by the Rochester Florists' Association in meeting assembled, that—1st because of his faithfulness as a member, and because of his nobility of character which endeared him to every one with whom he came in contact, we experience a great loss in his death;

2nd that we extend to his family our deepest sympathy;

3rd that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the permanent records of this Association.

After regular routine business, E. F. Rowe of The J. H. MacFarland Company, gave a very interesting talk on "Advertising the Retail Florist." His remarks were full of good sound logic, and enthused his hearers. He paid a very high compliment to Rochester as a beautiful city, to the florists of Rochester for their share in its beautification, etc., and the local flower shows. He spoke of the co-operative advertising here and in other cities, also the far-reaching effect of publicity along the florists' lines; further, the value of catalogues and follow-ups. Advertising, like medicine, he said, should not be taken in the dark. The field should be well looked over, to see what the demand is, and then gone after. Mr. Rowe advised the florists to make an effort to interest owners of commercial buildings to put up window boxes, etc., this idea having been successful in other cities. After adjournment a very palatable luncheon was served by Nathan Graves and his hustling committee. They always see that the boys' stomachs are well filled.

One of the very pleasing features of the Rochester Florists' Association meetings of late, has been the musical program, under the excellent care of George Boucher, chairman of the musical committee. Too much cannot be said of the efforts of this committee, and what they are doing to enliven the meetings. As evidence of this, all of the members are taking an active part in musical numbers, and it is bringing about an atmosphere of geniality, which is adding very materially to the entertainment at each meeting.

CHICAGO FLORISTS' CLUB.

The Chicago Florists' Club held its regular monthly meeting Thursday, May 6, with a large number in attendance. The chief event of the evening was the lecture on Business Building and Salesmanship. The arguments struck home, and so great was the interest shown that many pronounced it to be the most successful meeting in the history of the club. The speaker was G. H. Fogleman of the Sheldon School, who emphasized the importance of perfect harmony between the four parts of any business, viz., financial, executive, producing and selling. He likened the parts of a business to a chain, which would be as weak as the weakest part and said each employee was an important link.

The death of a member, John Zeck, was reported and a committee was appointed to draw up resolutions regarding the same. The following were elected to membership: P. M. Palez, Little Rock, Ark.; P. J. Foley, Jr., 31st street and Spaulding avenue, Chicago; H. O. S. Nichols, 1323 E. 57th street, Chicago; C. J. Michelson, 172 N. Wabash avenue, Chicago; F. S. Webb, 30 E. Randolph street, Chicago.

The proposition of holding a fall flower show was discussed at length and will be taken up again at the next meeting. Sentiment is generally in favor of the show.

AMERICAN DAHLIA SOCIETY.

The busy campaign of R. Vincent, Jr., during the past few weeks in the interest of a national dahlia society culminated in a well-attended and really enthusiastic meeting at the Grand Hotel, New York City, Monday afternoon May 10th. Richard Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., presided and Jos. Lane of the Garden Magazine, Garden City, N. Y. was secretary. The secretary has promised to send us an official report of the meeting and as his report will no doubt appear in our issue of next week we shall not undertake to forestall it with any details now. Full organization was effected, constitution and by-laws adopted and many ringing speeches eulogistic of the dahlia and proclaiming the need of nomenclature revision and classification were made. Altogether it was a busy and hustling afternoon and the American Dahlia Society should grow to a lusty youth if the circumstances of its birth count for anything.

NEW JERSEY FLORICULTURAL SOCIETY.

A regular monthly meeting of the New Jersey Floricultural Society was held in Orange on May 3rd, 1915. There was a fine turn-out of members. The chief topic was the preparation of the schedule for the fall show. The society wishes to thank all those who donated prizes. We feel sure that the show will be a success. Schedules will be in the hands of the secretary by June 1st and will be mailed to anyone on application. Awards were made as follows: Peter Hauck, Jr., gard. Max Schneider, lilies, 80 points; carnations, 75 points; sweet peas, 55 points; calceolaria hybrida, 65 points. Mrs. Wm. Barr, gard. Emfl Panuska, Lantana elegantissima, 55 points.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

The St. Louis Retail Florists' Association will hold a regular monthly meeting on May 17, at the Washington Hotel. This will be the last meeting until fall.

The second meeting of this month of the Missouri Botanical Garden Students' Club will take place Friday night, May 21. Herman Von Schrenk will lecture on "Preservation of Woods."

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Club of Washington, D. C., scheduled for last week, has been postponed. A heavy rainstorm prevented many of the members from turning out. All pending matters will come up at the June meeting when a special entertainment will also be held.

The St. Louis County Growers' Association held their annual meeting on Wednesday, May 5. Officers elected were as follows: Fred W. Ude, Jr., president; Wm. Edwards, vice-pres.; Hugo Gross, treasurer; Joseph Deutchmann, secretary. A long discussion took place on the season's business and prices.

The new rose Hoosier Beauty raised by F. Dorner & Sons Co., of Lafayette, Ind., has received the gold medal of the National Rose Society of England at a recent exhibition in London. This is certainly a high achievement for an American rose and in addition the British horticultural journals mention the rose in terms of superlative praise.

THE GOLDEN RULE AS A PRACTICAL BUSINESS PROPOSITION.

A. L. PIERSON, W. D. HATHAWAY, and before THE GOLDEN RULE ASSOCIATION.

No man lives in a vacuum. We are all dependent and many times inter-dependent. No one of us could subsist for any considerable time on the products of his own individual industry. This being so, our very existence is dependent upon our ability to exchange some of those commodities which we produce for those produced by others. Hence the necessity of trade. We MUST trade; our comfort and well-being and our very existence are dependent upon it. Every worthy citizen produces something in excess of his own requirements, with which he seeks to procure those other necessities which he and his family need; but which he does not and cannot produce himself.

To adjust this exchange justly is the ethical question. In all the ramifications of this interchange of products which we call Trade, the great problem is to adjust the machinery so that every man will get the value for the products he desires to dispose of, and be given in return, a just equivalent. In every just exchange both parties are benefited.

Many factors enter into this great problem. The law of supply and demand is one of them, that cannot be ignored. The same commodity at one time will yield much more of a given product than at another time; values fluctuate from day to day. Wheat is just as nutritious when abundant as when scarce, and vice versa. When the catch of fish is large, the value of a single pound as an article of food is as great as when the catch is small. But in the event of restricted production it will require a less number of pounds of fish to procure a given number of pounds of wheat, than when the yield is large. This law is universal in its application with respect to any and every product of the brawn and the brain of man.

To find the right law for the adjustment of these various values, is the problem. With this subject men have been struggling more or less blindly ever since they determined no longer to follow the law of the jungle. The law of the barbarian is to take whatever Force can appropriate to itself, regardless of right. In the minds of the best of men there always has been a repulsion to the law of the jungle; but a concise statement of that better desire on the part of men did not find adequate expression until some 2000 years ago, when there appeared among the common people of Judea a man, who crystallized that innate longing of the best men of the ages, when he said these words, so sweet and simply, which if followed, would settle most of the social problems and bring peace and happiness to men. That saying of Jesus of Nazareth has been styled: "THE GOLDEN RULE." "As ye would that men should do unto you, do even so unto them." And we are asked: "IS THE GOLDEN RULE A PRACTICAL BUSINESS PROPOSITION?" We shall answer the question by asking: What is there impractical about it? In so far as men find themselves removed from the law of the jungle, they seek to measure their transactions by that standard. When that law is adopted in the transactions between man and man, both parties are the gainers thereby. When it is ignored, both are ultimately the losers, for no man can long succeed when the other man with whom he deals does not. When one suffers, all the members of a community suffer with him. We like to do business with that man or set of men who sell fairly and pay promptly. No one objects to this hypothesis when worked by the other fellow. It may be said that this is idealism, and some may affirm, as we are aware that some do, that this law will never bear up in the mad scramble for existence. With a few working at it and many disregarding it, it would seem quite difficult of expression. But suppose everyone were working by that principle, what a delight it would be to do business. If all men dealt by us as do some; if all men paid their bills promptly, as do many, what a delight business life would be. Then would come to pass again the experience of the children of Israel, when it was said: "He that gathered much had none over, and he that gathered little had no lack. They gathered every man according to his eating."—that is, according to his needs.

So much for the theory. But when—ever that principle has been put into active operation what has been the result? Those men who aim to square their transactions by this rule may not get rich quick, and quickly-gotten riches is more often a curse than otherwise. But the adherent to The Golden Rule is found generally doing business long after the man who ignores it has gone out of business.

In every city there are firms whose trade-mark is all the guaranty the public requires. Their names stand for something of worth. However high our ideals, our performances will necessarily fall below those ideals; but those who "aim at the moon will shoot higher than those who only aim at the bush." It is our conviction that those who adhere to the principles of THE GOLDEN RULE succeed best in the long run, and therefore, that rule must be a practical business proposition.

Pillsbury's patented carnation staples for mending bursted blooms, made by I. L. Pillsbury of Galesburg, Ill., have evidently proved their indispensability to the florist for they are now used in enormous quantities in every part of the country. The price has been reduced to 35 cents per 1000 and everybody is buying them, not by thousands but by ten thousands.

VIBURNUM CARLESII.

The Korean Viburnum Carlesii is rightly considered one of the handsomest plants recently introduced into American gardens. Its value is in the white, extremely fragrant flowers which are produced in rather small compact clusters and open from bright pink buds. As the flowers in a cluster do not all open at the same time the mixture of white flowers and pink buds adds greatly to the attractiveness of the inflorescence. It is a rather dwarf shrub of compact habit with pale green leaves and has not yet produced fruit in the Arboretum. There is a Japanese species, V. bitchuense, which somewhat resembles V. Carlesii, but the flowers are smaller and the habit of the plant is not so good. Mistaken by Japanese botanists for V. Carlesii, this plant has been propagated in Japanese nurseries and sent to the United States and Europe as V. Carlesii. In buying that plant care should be taken to secure the right species.—Arnold Arboretum Bulletin.

Springfield, Mass.—Proceedings in equity were started in Superior Court on May 8, by A. N. Pierson, Inc., of Cromwell, Conn., to collect a debt of $517.28 from Nelson F. Higgins, a florist and a temporary restraining order was issued by Judge William Hamilton preventing Mr. Higgins from collecting on a certain note, and Sidney A. Saunders from making any payment on it, until further order of the court. The plaintiff seeks to have his claim against Mr. Higgins satisfied out of the proceeds of the note.

Mt. Sterling, Ky. A Robertson pair chased the wind and the Bluegrass Seed Company of April 1st for $10,000.

The value of horticultural imports to New York for the week ending May 1 is given as follows: Fertilizer, $28,287; clover seed, $11,538; grass seed, $2,660; trees and plants, $9,286.

We are informed by a leading seed house that the California seed growers experienced considerable of a shock when they learned that it had been reported in the east that California had a blizzard, on April 30. The report proved to be somewhat exaggerated and California crops are said to be in excellent condition.

Chicago With the warmer days, the counters of the seed stores are surrounded by customers once more. The week's lull has not come amiss. The large department stores are advertising the sale of shrubbery, trees, etc. preparatory to clearing the department for the season.

Wholesale seed men are having many repeat orders. Because of the dry soil and high winds, seeds have failed to germinate.

BUFFALO BOTANICAL GARDEN.

H. H. Elbers has been appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the death of J. F. Cowell, director of Buffalo Botanical Gardens. Director Elbers has been in charge of affairs at South Park since last Wednesday and will also continue supervision of Humboldt Park work until a successor is appointed.

Director Elbers has made a study of plant life since infancy, and has made Humboldt Park one of the most beautiful in the country and has also been with the Park Department here almost a fifth of a century. His efficiency in this work brought about his promotion without solicitation on his part.

Mr. Elbers loves the work and is sure to make a success at South Park. His early life was spent in the Royal Garden of Duke Salm Salm in Westphalia, Germany, where he got the practical experience which he has put into practice here.

There are many candidates in the field for the vacancy of director of Humboldt Park, though no one has as yet been appointed. Congratulations are extended Mr. Elbers by the Buffalo Florist Club and fellow florists.

Of Interest to Retail Florists

Kansas City, Mo. Samuel Murray has his new place at 1917 Grand avenue nearly ready for occupancy and expects to move in about May 25.

C. Betscher states that in Canal Dover Ohio, Mothers' Day business greatly increased over 1914 and was quite as good as Easter with many calls for plants—demand greater than supply.

The Associated Retail Florists, Inc., maintains a list of names of florists out of positions and would be pleased, at any time, to hear from persons connected with the retail business who are looking for a position or who are looking for employees.

David S. Miller has accepted the position of superintendent on the estate of J. Insley Blair, a new place of about ninety acres in Tuxedo, N. Y. Duncan MacGregor, who was foreman with Mr. Miller for several years, succeeds him in charge of Kincaid, Tuxedo.

Prof. D. S. Lumsden of Ithaca has recently been appointed superintendent of the department of floriculture of the New York State Fair by Hon. C. S. Wilson, Commissioner of Agriculture for New York State. The building originally erected for the Manufacturers and Liberal Arts will be used for all horticultural products.

Marie Westcott, granddaughter of John Westcott, of Philadelphia, is announced as one of the charming array of June brides that the month of roses annually gives us to add effulgence to smiling morn and to hail Aurora and the break of day! On that bright June day, may the rosy fingers of the goddess tip the hills with gold, and may all nature rejoice with gladness. If the young lady gets a more sincere bouquet than this from your scribe, on her wedding day, he would like to see it. May the Goddess of Good Fortune be ever watchful of her well-being.

NEWS ITEMS FROM EVERYWHERE

BOSTON.

The plants in the Public Garden are getting into the green.

Don't forget the May exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, which takes place Saturday and Sunday, May 16 and 17.

Thomas Corger of Melrose has just received a very large consignment of araucarias from Europe which happily came through in excellent condition.

Leonard Cousins, Jr., of Concord Junction is having fine success with his pansy crop this season. The large field of rioting colors is a sight worth going many miles to see.

Keen competition is expected this Thursday night between the bowling teams representing the Boston Flower Exchange and Carbone's. The game is being played in the Waldorf Alleys.

Thomas Roland cut the first ripe fruit from the tomatoes which form the spring crop in his big Revere greenhouse. He estimates that the crop from now until July 1st will aggregate forty tons.

John Burke, formerly with Thos. F. Galvin, has gone into business at 250 Boylston street in the retail flower business. The location is good and should develop rapidly with the opening of the Arlington street station.

Some specialties noted this week are anemones from Perry Green, of Quincy; Gypsophila elegans from R. E. Wadsworth & Co., of Northboro; pansies from W. C. Ward, of Milton; sweet peas from H. S. Chandler, of Tewksbury.

The new wholesale flower store opened by Patrick Welch at 262 Devonshire street, enjoys continued prosperity. It is centrally located and under the able management of Paul Regan consignors are receiving very satisfactory results.

Mother's Day business was very good, due in large part to the newspaper advertising by the retailers. As usual, there was a shortage of carnations, but not to so great a degree as in former years. Other flowers were called for in large numbers.

Penn was busy this week with the decorations for the Dartmouth Junior Promenade, which is to be held in the gymnasium hall, the second largest in this country. The color scheme is red and green, consisting of red roses and greens, trees, etc. A car load of material was shipped from Boston.

The Flower Growers' Protective Association are actively pushing the campaign to get the local growers in line with their proposition. Papers are still in circulation for prospective members to sign. Returns so far have been very satisfactory, and with the co-operation of several prominent retailers who are encouraging the movement, we hope to soon have a live credit association.

A large delegation of students from the New Hampshire State College, under the guidance of Prof. Wolfe, Mr. Scherrer, instructor, and Prof. Lumsden of Cornell, visited various points of interest around Boston the first few days of the present week. The places visited included the Bay State Nurseries at North Abington, R. & J. Farquhar & Co., nurseries, Dedham, the Larz Anderson and Sen. Sprague estates at Brookline, Arnold Arboretum and various truck farms in Arlington and Belmont.

W. F. and Adolphus Gude of Washington, D. C., were visitors in Boston in the early part of this week in attendance upon the sessions of the National Bowling League of which W. F. Gude is president. We are pleased to announce that Mr. Gude was re-elected for another year in a very hotly contested election. A visit to the new greenhouse range of Thomas Roland and to some interesting points in the park system was enjoyed by the visitors under the escort of Deputy Commissioner Jas. B. Shea, Thomas Roland and Patrick Welch.

Lewiston, Me.—A. L. Kavanaugh has come forward with a splendid offer in aid of the Lewiston and Auburn Gardeners' Union. He is the owner of 25 lots on East avenue and Lafayette street, which he offers to give the use of for summer gardens. These lots are 100 x 50 feet in size and their use for that purpose can be had gratis. This offer applies to adults as well as children. He will also give a prize of $10 in gold to the person who raises the finest all around flower and vegetable garden. It matters not whether the garden is flowers or vegetables, although both will be preferred.

CHICAGO.

A light frost was reported the night of May 9.

George Reinberg had probably the lion's share of white roses for Mothers' Day. His plants were in crop at just the time to bring in a harvest for every rose sold and more could have been disposed of.

Wm. Schofield, 734 N. State street had a narrow escape from serious injury Monday, when he took the alternative of guiding a runaway horse into an automobile, rather than injure passengers just alighting from a street car. Mr. Schofield was considerably shaken up and bruised. The horse was badly injured.

There is a steady demand for plants. There is nothing now in large blooming plants except roses, principally of the baby rambler type, and rhododendrons, with a very few hydrangeas. The trade has to rely largely on decorative foliaged plants. Though early for trade in bedding plants, the warm days have made that class of stock very much in demand.

The leaving of C. G. Anderson and his son and daughter for Minneapolis in the very near future will be regretted by many in the trade. Mr. Anderson is a well-known plant grower, for many years with the Geo. Wittbold Co. and in charge of the Poehlmann Bros. plant range since that branch was opened four years ago. Miss Pauline has proven herself very capable in the Morton Grove office and George has been employed in the city office. Mr. Anderson has taken the management of the Minneapolis Floral Co., Minneapolis.

Mayor Thompson issued a proclamation May 4th, formally naming the following Sunday, May 9th, as "Mothers' Day." In this proclamation he calls upon all who can to wear a white flower. Had this matter been taken up with the Mayor previously, and the reasons shown him why the white flower should not have preference over the colored one, it might have made a decided change in the attitude of customers. In the local papers the white carnations was repeatedly referred to as the flower of the day. Not a word was noticed as advocating flowers in general, yet here was a splendid opportunity for publicity by the florists. Mothers' Day has been thrust upon the trade and a few well written articles for the daily papers would help direct the business into broader channels. Notwithstanding the demand for flowers was so great that the retail florist could not provide enough for his customers, the flower sale on the streets in the loop district netted the Mothers' Emergency League, May 8, $1,100, which goes to show what can be done to work up sentiment and so use up more flowers.

PACIFIC COAST.

Geo. C. Roeding of Fresno, Cal., has taken 1000 square feet in the S. A. F. Convention Garden.

Domoto Bros. of Oakland, who have taken 1500 square feet in the Convention Garden, are preparing to make a big showing of Japanese plants and trees.

At the next meeting of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society, Prof. R. T. Stevens of the University of California will deliver a lecture on, "The History of Landscape Gardening," with lantern slides.

An exhibit by Henry Turner, noted rose grower of Mentebello, Los Angeles County, was the first entry to be installed at the Convention Garden. It consists of a fine showing of September Morn, bordered by Triomphe Orleans.

S. T. Beatie has resigned as sales manager of the United Flower & Supply Co., which was organized a short time ago to take over the shipping department of the California Flower Market on Bush street, with the intention of going into the shipping business for himself.

The Aggeler & Musser Seed Co. of Los Angeles, Cal., has an extensive exhibit in the Southern California section of the state building at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition. An attractive feature is a number of panels made from seeds in natural colors, depicting men, flowers, etc.

Chas. H. Totty of Madison, N. J., is serving on the International Jury of Awards of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition in the horticultural section. Geo. C. Roeding of Fresno, Cal., is here also, serving in the same capacity. Besides several members of the trade in the Bay district are among the jurors, including H. Plath, E. James, J. R. Fotheringham and F. Pelicano.

PITTSBURGH.

Mrs. E. A. Williams left last Friday for Atlantic City, where she is spending a fortnight.

In connection with its new house furnishing department, the Rosenbaum Company has opened an extensive seed, bulb and garden implement section in the basement of the handsome new store.

Randolph & McClements are adding much to the attractiveness of Motor Square Garden by contributing practically all their palms and other foliaged plants for the Prosperity Carnival (made in U. S. A.) being held this week under the auspices of the Pittsburgh Commercial Club.

One of the most suggestive show windows in anticipation of Mothers' Day was designed by Louis W. Biehl for the E. C. Ludwig Company on the North Side. The background was formed of cibotium ferns and white carnations, the central figure being a well modeled, snowy-haired mother, gowned in black and holding the symbolic carnations.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON Mothers' Day business came up to all expectations and all parts of the trade are quite satisfied. Prices began to rise about Wednesday, especially on carnations. Very ordinary stock secured $6.00 per 100, the better quality and specials reaching $8.00 and $9.00. White stock of all flowers was in greatest demand. The efforts of the retailers to induce the public to buy other flowers besides carnations brought about a noticeable demand for roses, sweet peas, marguerites, pansies, etc., as well. Since Sunday business has fallen off and at the present writing, Thursday, the stalls are overcrowded and goods move but slowly. The only stimulating feature of the week has been a few large decorations secured by prominent retailers.

The market was brisk and the supply good up to Thursday last, with only a slight price advance on anything. Mothers' Day was certainly a success here but the price on carnations was not notched up as high as in other cities. The $5.00 mark was reached for the best white carnations, Enchantress and other varieties bringing $3.00 to $4.00. The supply was just about enough to go around. Roses had a good demand and cleaned up well. The end of the week saw the best cleanup the market has had in some time.

CHICAGO Mothers' Day made the history of the market during the past week. The supply of stock for that day was the chief thought during the week previous and predictions of a scarcity of carnations were fulfilled. The experiences of other special days were reversed and instead of selling below quotations, carnations sold at advanced prices and good stock easily brought eight cents. White was the first choice usually, but soon it became evident that the retailer would be fortunate to secure enough carnations of any color for his trade, and then the demand reached to almost any kind of a flower. So completely was the market sold out that growers were urged to bring in everything that could be cut, and carnations half open were sold to anxious customers. Roses were sold out so close that Monday found ice boxes empty and no stock to fill them. Tuesday, there was a return to something more like normal conditions, but stock was still very scarce in some lines, and not too plentiful in any. The early peonies are coming from southern Illinois and are fair in quality. Southern gladioli Mrs. Francis King are selling well here.

NEW YORK The cut flower market here is very, very far from satisfactory. Neither growers nor wholesale dealers can contemplate the present situation with any feeling of comfort. The product is not finding anything like adequate distribution and anyone with any knowledge of the business must view with alarm the tremendous heavy receipts that come daily to the wholesale district in quest of a sale. Added to the general lethargy which is no doubt partly due to the abundance of outdoor flowers and the auto facilities for seeing them, is the almost total cessation of the steamer trade which in normal times is quite a factor in the business of the high class stores. These stores and those of medium class are doing very little business this month although the wholesale values of flowers are so low that the business would be extremely profitable if there were any call. The cheaper classes of retailers are doing all right as they buy for a song and expenses are a small item with them. On Saturday the "Mothers' Day" pressure from out-of-town places was responsible for a large advance in the price of carnations also for the appearance of quantities of "pickled" blooms, and much subsequent upbraiding and bad feeling. The net effect upon the public and its estimate of the florist business could not be other than bad, and permanently injurious. The recklessness and utter disregard of consequences by some growers was well exemplified in the receipts from two parties who, together, sent in on Saturday morning 25,000 carnations which is just about the size of one week's normal cut for these two places. From one-half to two-thirds of this stuff—mostly colored—was unsaleable. No observance of "Mothers' Day" was noticeable in New York. On the streets and cars and among the countless myriads that thronged the accessible points to see the great warship assemblage, scrutiny failed to disclose a single buttonhole carnation white or colored. Lilies and dogwood flowers are very abundant in the market and of unusual quality. Orchids are very difficult to dispose of and lily of the valley of best quality goes slowly at the price of culls. Sweet peas are beautiful but difficult to move. Darwin tulips of glorious color and form are seen and the old fashioned varieties are practically outclassed by these splendid flowers.

PHILADELPHIA Judging from what the commission men say last week was quite an improvement

caused mostly by the Mothers' Day demand. The shipping trade seemed to feel the impetus most, as provincial points are evidently more in touch with this rather queer way of expressing filial feelings. In metropolitan centers the general thought is that every day is Mother's Day. But there is no accounting for the backwoods. So the trade takes the matter philosophically and shows itself equally alert to take advantage of a whim or a foible as of something legitimate for the marketing of their product. Somebody started a "clean-up-week." It is a sad reflection on householders. Every week ought to be clean-up-week. I wish somebody would start Return-Umbrella-Week. There would be a few coming to me. There was the usual scramble for white carnations, the usual salting and the usual heartburning. But most of the trade are now wise to the importance of talking other things besides white carnations first, last and all the time and thus the silly part of the effect is somewhat modified. Nothing much was left over at the wind-up except some long roses and other high-priced stock. Everything fairly good at moderate prices cleaned out well. And we regret to say that a lot of stuff that ought to have gone on the dump was thrown on the market, very much to the discredit of the trade. The innocent suffer as well as the guilty in the long run. Marketing rubbish is a very unwise policy. It disgusts the public and hurts future business.

The offerings in some lines were lighter the past week as a result of damage to outdoor stock by a severe three-day wind and rain closing April. At the same time the early May festivities created a little extra demand for cut flowers, which further relieved the condition of oversupply. Sweet peas are less plentiful, but there are plenty for the demand. Carnations are firmer in view of lighter supplies, and peonies were damaged to a considerable extent by the unfavorable weather, and it will be several days before the market is well supplied again. Iris is just beginning to come in in ample supply after a light cut for several days. Roses are being featured extensively in the window displays of the larger downtown establishments this week. Single Irish roses appear to excellent advantage, and a satisfactory demand is reported. Cecile Brunner continues plentiful, but with a good call and well maintained prices. Some fine gardenias are offered, and the market is well supplied with orchids. Gladioli have been retarded by the weather, but a large cut is expected shortly.

Mothers' Day business
ST. LOUIS was greatly curtailed owing to the sudden advance in retail prices from 15 cents a dozen to $1.00 which was too steep for the public. In the West End they report business good for this day. It was the down-town florists who "got his" for his cheap sale the week before. The flowers that came in last week were not of high standard quality and especially so in carnations. Roses were excellent all through, also lilies and peonies. Carnations for Mothers' Day were many, but the sudden jump to $5 per 100 for good quality when the same stock a week ago sold in 1000 lots at that figure was a bad stinger. Other stock did not show so great an advance. Business all through is not as good as it should be at this time of the year.

Retailers and wholesalers report a most satisfactory Mother's Day business. The out of town orders were exceptionally heavy and placed as they were several days in advance they served to clean up the market of white carnations and created a good demand for some few of the colors. There has also been a very good sale of expensive stock brought about by the horse show which is now in progress and by a number of society events and various benefits of a charitable nature, but the bulk of the stock for the latter is said to have been donated by charitably inclined retailers. The cool weather has caused a lessening of the quantities of stock. The stock seen here last week came from other points. Collections have improved somewhat, but money remains tight.

NEWS NOTES.

St. Louis.—J. J. Windler has succeeded his brother, Robert J., as proprietor of the retail establishment on South Grand avenue. R. J. Windler, with his family, left May 1 for Chicago, where he in future will make his home.

Newark, N. J.—Edward Larkin, a florist, seventy-one years old, was seriously hurt last Wednesday forenoon by being run down by a two-horse truck at the "Four Corners." Mr. Larkin was crossing the street and had reached the first car tracks, when the "honk" of an automobile horn caused him to jump backwards. He struck against one of a team of horses and fell to the pavement on his back, and a front wheel of a double truck, bearing a 600-pound load of waste paper, passed over his abdomen. He was taken to the City Hospital, where it was found that he had suffered internal injuries of a serious nature.

New York.—John B. Nugent announces that after June 1, his flower store will not open on Sunday under any circumstances. We understand that others are seriously considering a similar course. Mr. Nugent's place on West 28th street is being partially remodelled. A new glass refrigerator front, with mirrored back and an enclosure for ferns and palms are among the new features.

A FEW SHOP-WORN LAMPS AT A BARGAIN

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Rochester Chamber of Commerce has started a movement for the beautification of Rochester. The committee is known as the Flower City Committee of the Rochester Chamber of Commerce for the City Beautiful, and this committee has divided itself into ten districts, each district headed by a captain, with a sub-committee called a team. The movement has been received very enthusiastically by the press of the city, and has the co-operation of city officials, the endorsement of the Rochester Florists' Association, the Federation of Women's Clubs, and the clergy. Some of the larger corporations of the city have taken up the idea, and are not only going into beautifying their own properties, but are lending valuable aid to the movement by loaning the services of their expert engineers, etc. The landscape architects of the city, and the florists, as well as seedsmen are all taking up the idea and pushing it with vigor. There will be prizes offered for the general effect of lawns 50 feet and under, and 50 feet and over, and the best general effect of buildings in the business center of the city.

Of course, this idea has been carried out successfully in other cities, but Rochester is the first in this section of the State to take up such a movement in earnest. The committee has just gotten under way, and are holding meetings in various parts of the city, working through schools, churches and community centers, and while it is too early to judge as to results, the indications are that Rochester in another year will be a more beautiful city than it is at the present time.

Another thing that will be of interest to readers of HORTICULTURE is the fact that the Rochester Exposition which is to be held the last week in August, and the first two weeks in September, has turned over to the Rochester Florists' Association and vegetable growers of central and western New York State building No. 5 150 feet in length, and 100 feet in width, for the purpose of a flower show and vegetable exhibition. Stationery is being printed, and the committee on the Flower Show is now at work, so that notice will be sent out to various growers and exhibitors in the very near future, interesting them in this coming show. There will be no charge for space to exhibitors, which should be a very attractive feature.

The idea is to bring as many growers and those interested in horticulture and floriculture as possible, together at Rochester, the last week in August, and from present indications they will see an exhibit of representative horticulturists that will class up very favorably to any shows given in the past.

FISHKILL, N. Y.

Fishkill still blooms on the map, although the old "Fishkill-on-Hudson" section has been set off as Beacon. We took occasion to slip up to Fishkill a few days ago and found it, as always at this season of the year particularly a veritable paradise. Apple trees were huge bouquets of pink and white, lilac in rare exuberance nodded a fragrant welcome over the rural fences and doorways and wisterias rollicked over piazzas and verandas in inimitable festoonry. We have written before about Wood Bros., Fishkill's leading horticultural establishment—their extensive range of plant houses, the central feature of a 50 acre tract of rich upland meadow, where bedding plants, young chrysanthemums, roses and carnations seem to find their ideal of pure air and stimulating elements.

We found business humming along as usual and seasonable young stock being crated for transportation East, West, North, South to florist buyers.

The bedding plant demand is fully up to the record this season, Mr. Wood told us, but the nursery trade (which with them is principally retail) has been rather slow. In the sales of young roses Hadley, Sunburst and Russell are prime favorites this year. Of the older kinds Bride and Bridesmaid still sell well, as does Sunrise. Hillingdon will be dropped from the list next season. The chrysanthemum sales hold up well, amounting to 150,000 young stuff this season. In carnations the interest centres largely about Matchless. In geraniums the old favorites—Nutt, Poitevine, Doyle, La Favorite, Ricard, etc.—still maintain their place, Harrison being preferred by some over Ricard; Rev. Wm. Atkinson single scarlet, Mme. Julien, semi-double pink, Mme. Chas. Molin, single salmon pink, Countess of Harcourt, double pure white and Mrs. E. G. Hill a grand single pink, are all placed in the first class by Mr. Wood. The propagating house has no empty spots or idle moments these days.

Washington, N. J.—The Warren, N. J. Tidings' Industrial Booster Edition, published May 5, gives an illustration of the greenhouses and grounds of Alonzo J. Bryan and a very complimentary descriptive article occupying a quarter page space. It refers to Mr. Bryan as a "wholesale florist with a national reputation," which is correct, as Mr. Bryan is a regular advertiser in HORTICULTURE. Mr. Bryan contemplates making many changes and improvements during the coming summer, which will greatly beautify and enhance the property when completed. The place comprises about 130 acres.

Obituary

William Houser.

William Houser, a florist's assistant, died on May 4 at his home, 763 Seneca avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y. He was born in Brooklyn forty-eight years ago and is survived by an only daughter.

Charles E. Wadsworth.

Charles E. Wadsworth, twenty years a retail florist in Brooklyn, N. Y., where he was active in Democratic circles, died at his home, No. 197 Bridge street, that borough, on May 5. He was born in Newburgh, N. Y., in 1869, and is survived by a widow, one son and a daughter.

Mrs. F. W. Martin.

Mrs. F. W. Martin passed away at her home at 609 E. 40th street, Chicago, on May 5. Mrs. Martin was born in Hanover, Germany, Feb. 17, 1859, and came to this country when a young woman. She has been active in the greenhouse work and with her husband they have established a good business, only giving up her part of the work when illness came upon her eight months ago.

NEWS NOTES.

New Bedford, Mass.—Spring work is just opening up and promises well. Pansies are unusually fine and are selling well at very good prices. The more general observance of Mother's Day in this vicinity has been a great advantage to florists. It has created a great demand for cut flowers, especially carnations.

Amherst, Mass.—A gift of $5,000 has been made to Amherst College by the will of the late Mrs. Eliza S. Tuckerman. It is to be known as the Edward Tuckerman Fund, in memory of her husband who was for some years a member of the Amherst College faculty, and will be used to increase the facilities for botanical study in the college.

SCOTCH SOOT

Where there is a house that is just full of buds almost ready to show color, nothing will turn better color into the flowers than a little soot, that can be scattered over the benches before watering. The amount applied should not be excessive, as the soot is very strong and may damage some of the foliage somewhat. Apply just enough to blacken the surface of the soil in the benches, and let it go at that. Better a little oftener than too much all at once.

We offer the genuine in original cwt. Sacks, at:
$4.00 per 112 lbs.; $17.50 per 560 lbs.

Our Half Iron Frame House

Some Important Construction Points

*Angle Iron
Furlin*

*Angle Iron
Furlin*

BETWEEN the all iron frame house and the cypress or oak frame are a number of constructions as different as the species they are in construction.

In estimating materials on such houses, growers frequently make only the estimates; and fail to go into the necessary details.

In comparing our Half Iron Frame house for instance, with the usual cypress fitting pipe frame one, is surely surprised to find that, because they are so entirely different, they are not the same house among our standard construction. No one can give an estimate for one unless he has seen a house of the kind. We do not recommend them. We do not go to columns, but never for purlins.

Our Half Iron Frame house for the full iron frame purlins, is made of angle iron. The size angles are of such a size that the pipe sizes generally used are of such a size that the bars are held together by a screw secured to the flat face of the angles. These are pipe purlins, the round surface of which is not far from a small joint and are held together by light metal plumbers' straps. These straps if not put on with great care, are sometimes twisted and broken. A good many times not.

Mr. Schumann on the pipe purlin then on the bars, and put into the wood and before you know it, the house is broken. The bars up and down and you know it. The most of it is ten chances to one that it is broken.

Interior Schumann's Sweet Pea House, Showing Mr. S. Fickling Peas.

Bolted Through and Through Fittings

Then there is the question of the way the columns are fastened to the purlins; and the purlins to the cross ties.

Long years ago 30, in fact, we decided that clamp friction fittings were not sufficiently secure to be dependable at all times.

So we started bolting the column fitting right through the pipe; and bolting a special fitting to the purlin to which the column fitting is also bolted.

Even the cross ties are bolted through and through both the fitting and the pipe.

Side Posts

For the posts, we use the guaranteed wrought iron instead of steel, because where it is used below the ground, it outlasts steel three to one, unless galvanized.

Cables

With cables there is a chance to skimp, to cut down the price. In our cables you will find the bars secured to angle iron purlins and nothing left out that is necessary for a solid wind proof result.

Next to our Full Iron Frame, you will agree with us, that there is no construction made which equals this in every detail. As long as it costs practically the same as the pipe frame kinds, why not have it? You know you can depend on depending on anything that Hitchings makes. And we go anywhere for business. Or to talk business.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Bay Trees, Box, Etc.

Those that are rather pot-bound can have some weak liquid feeding once a week which will greatly help them to make good wood and foliage. When bay-trees have not been potted for two or three years and want more root room now is a good time to give them a shift. Use any good heavy loam with a little decayed cow manure and bone meal. Where the bays look brown and are out of shape they should be carefully trimmed to induce a new growth. They should be plunged outside where they will be convenient to water so the hose can be played on them freely during the summer. A little liquid manure will help them. This treatment can be given to all pot or tub evergreens, such as hollies, laurels, araucarias, aucubas and yews.

Chrysanthemums

The question of soil in benching chrysanthemums is perhaps not of so much importance as it is for roses or some other crops. The more fiber there is in the loam the more we like it, as it is almost impossible to make such soil sour by watering and the first thing to do, above all others, is to get a good rooting medium even though the soil may incline to be poor because when there is good strong root action feeding can easily be applied in liquid at any stage. Fill the bench level and then after the soil settles there will be ample room for watering at all seasons. The earlier they are planted the better. It is not too early at any time.

Ericas

Climatic conditions in most sections of this country make erica culture very difficult and a risky business. We have neither the soil nor the humid atmosphere in which they delight in Great Britain. Most of the species have now done flowering, and the next move is a severe cutting back of the plants. This should be done before the new growth starts too much. All the long canes and the old wood are cut away, merely leaving short stumps of one or two inches in length. In a temperature of about 50 degrees the new growth will soon start from these remaining stems and when the break is completed is the proper time for transplanting. Some of the old soil is taken off and the plants go into new pots, which should be more wide than deep, like azalea pots. Plenty of drainage material should be placed in the bottom. I have found well-fibred, turf-like, sandy soil, six months old, roughly broken up and mixed with a goodly quantity of spent hot bed manure to be the best mixture. Frequent syringing is essential, but in watering great care should be taken not to overdo it.

Flowers For Memorial Day

It is a hard proposition to hold lilies back where they have been allowed to advance too much up to now. Place them in a house where they can have plenty of ventilation with a good syringing on bright days. Fumigate weekly for aphids. For hydrangeas 55 degrees night temperature is to be preferred, but in case they are late give them 10 degrees more for a time. Spraying overhead on clear days will greatly refresh them. They will take water in great abundance and manure water can be applied two or three times a day until the flowers are well out. Benches containing ten weeks' stocks, gladioli, snapdragons, candytuft and other Memorial Day crops should be scratched over at least once a week and have all weeds removed. Spiraea japonica and its various forms should be brought along now. 55 to 60 degrees at night will suit them better than a higher one.

Forcing Lily of the Valley

Lily of the valley will do fine after May in frames. All that is necessary is a well built close frame. Put six inches of sand over the manure and plant the pips as you would in the greenhouse. The frame can be partitioned so that two or more batches can be kept coming on. Keep close and dark until the stalks are half grown. Then gradually increase the light. Don't overdo the heat or you will get leggy stalks. Use no water overhead after the flowers are expanding for fear of spotting them. At this season there is less danger from this cause than in winter. It takes about three to four weeks to flower lily of the valley, provided the proper bottom heat and top temperature can be given. For June cutting when the demand is quite heavy a frame should be prepared at once. See that they are kept nice and moist at the roots.

Ventilation

At this time of the year close attention must be given to ventilation. It is very easy to ruin a lot of stock by neglecting this. On all bright days start early in the morning by putting on air. All houses that are growing cool stock should have it on all night.

Next Week: Amaryllises; Cymbidiums; Dahlias; Outdoor Sweet Peas; Violets; Sowing Late Annuals.

University graduation exercises will take place on June 7 and for the first time in the history of the College the girls will contrast the recipients of floral gifts from their friends. At a class meeting it was decided that to be done away with. It seems hardly credible that a class of normally constituted young women should take such action and it certainly suggests that the girls of today are drifting away from the old moorings and must be deficient in the finer tastes which graced their mothers when the charm of flowers to them makes irresistible appeal to them. Simultaneously comes the information that Harvard students who dine at Memorial Hall have this spring established the precedent of decorating their tables with lilacs, sweet peas and other flowers every day. This seems like reversing the old order of things. The young men deserve commendation on their exhibition of refined sense and good taste. As for the girls—well nobody can predict what they will do next!

A campaign well started

The list of local amateur organizations that have come into affiliation with the American Rose Society as given in this issue, looks very encouraging and bears the stamp of practicability as a solution of the long-standing problem of how to secure the joint support of both amateur and trade interests. HORTICULTURE earnestly advocated this plan a number of years ago and we are pleased to see it adopted and put into operation so effectively as the information now given out by Secretary Hammond seems to indicate. By this course no less than five hundred enthusiastic new adherents are acquired and without any disturbance of existing methods or of the active professional element in the central body, without whose unswerving loyalty and ever-ready generosity the American Rose Society would long ago have passed into oblivion. It is reasonable to assume that with judicious handling of the situation as it now takes form, many more affiliating groups may be constituted throughout the entire country and the resultant benefit to the commercial rose industry will be well worth all its costs.

Memorial Day

No occasion in the year carries a finer human sentiment and none more appropriately suggests the profuse use of flowers than does this essentially American holiday. Instituted originally by a people overjoyed in the attainment of peace after a terrible civil war, in grateful recognition and honor to the memory of those who had given up their lives in the service of their country, the custom in time took on a wider significance until it has become a firmly established perpetual annual observance in remembrance of the dear ones who have been taken from us. This is no florist-made holiday. It had its birth in the hearts of the people and no florist has ever thought it necessary, so far as we know, to beseech the public to prove to the world their patriotism or their remembrance by buying some of his flowers. But there are many ways in which the florist may assist to inspire the people in his community with a greater appreciation of the eminent fitness of fresh flowers and blossoming plants for this hallowed celebration in the midst of the spring glory. We are told that there are many localities where Memorial Day is accorded a very scanty observance. It should not be allowed to so continue. The people are all right at heart on this subject, but they need a little waking up, not, however, by means of advanced prices or embalmed flowers, or metal wreaths or window-card admonitions of duty. "Where there's a will there's a way."

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

AMERICAN DAHLIA SOCIETY.

As briefly announced in our last issue, on May 10th in New York a group of twenty dahlia enthusiasts met and formed an organization under the name of the American Dahlia Society.

The purpose of this organization will be to promote knowledge of the dahlia and gain for this flower the recognition that it deserves from the American people. It is the intention of the organization to issue an information bulletin from time to time to its members and to hold at least one National Show each year which will be supported by local shows throughout the country at that period of the year which is most favorable to the showing of dahlias in that locality.

Richard Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., was elected president and Joseph J. Lane of The Garden Magazine, New York City, was elected secretary. Four vice-presidents were elected—George L. Stillman for the East, E. Stanley Brown for the North, L. K. Peacock for the South and W. W. Wilmore for the West.

This organization plans to hold a Dahlia Show in New York City during the month of September of this year. Members joining before September 1, will come in as charter members. Further information may be obtained by writing to the secretary.

Minutes of Meeting at Grand Hotel, New York.

The meeting was the outcome of diligent work carried on by Richard Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., since the flower show which took place in New York a few months ago. At that time the idea came to Mr. Vincent for a national organization devoted to the promotion of knowledge of the Dahlia in this country and after writing to 150 people he received such enthusiastic response that he felt encouraged to call a meeting for organization and the gathering on Monday was the result.

Among those present were—E. Stanley Brown, Dahlia Farm, East Moriches, L. I., N. Y.; F. H. Hall, Editor and Librarian of Experiment Station at Geneva, N. Y.; J. Harrison Dick, Florists' Exchange, New York City; Harry A. Bunyard, President N. Y. Florists' Club, New York City; George Stillman, Grower, Westerley, R. I.; James Kirby, Huntington, L. I.; P. B. Rigby, New York City; William J. Stewart, Editor HORTICULTURE, Boston, Mass.; I. H. Hendrickson, of John Lewis Childs Co., Flowerfield, N. Y.; M. C. Ebel, Gardeners' Chronicle, Madison, N. J.; Hugo Kind, Hammondton, N. J.; Frank R. Austin, Tuckerton, N. J.; James Duthie, Oyster Bay, N. Y.; John W. Merritt, Farmingdale, L. I., N. Y.; J. Austin Shaw, Florists' Review, Brooklyn, N. Y.; J. R. Benjamin, Calverton, L. I., N. Y.; L. K. Peacock, Peacock Dahlia Farm, Berlin, N. J.; George W. Kerr, Doylestown, Penn.; John S. Vincent, White Marsh, Md.; R. Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md.; J. J. Lane, Garden Magazine, New York City.

Great enthusiasm prevailed throughout the meeting, which augured well for the success of this new organization. A constitution was adopted at this meeting and the following few facts taken from the constitution may prove of interest to the readers.

There are three types of membership—active, associate and honorary. Dues of the organization are as follows—Initiation fee $1.00. Annual dues shall be $2.00 for active membership and $1.00 for associate membership, which amounts will be payable in advance. Those members joining before the annual meeting in September will be accepted as charter members. An honorary member shall be such person as by financial or other contribution to the advancement of the interests of this society shall be considered worthy of the honor by the executive committee.

A list of officers are as follows—President, Richard Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md.; Secretary, Joseph J. Lane, Garden Magazine, New York; Treasurer, Frank R. Austin, Tuckerton, N. J.

Executive Committee—George W. Kerr, I. H. Hendrickson, James Duthie, John S. Vincent, Hugo Kind.

Committee on Nomenclature—E. Stanley Brown, James Kirby, L. K. Peacock, Leonard Barron.

MASSACHUSETTS HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The annual May Exhibition at Horticultural Hall, Boston, on Saturday and Sunday, 15th and 16th inst., was up to the standard of its predecessors in the display of late flowering tulips, calceolarias, narcissi, etc.

F. J. Dolansky won a silver medal with an exceptionally fine display of Cattleya Mossiae and E. B. Dane got a similar award for Brasso-Cattleya Warneri. A cultural certificate was given William Thatcher, gardener to Mrs. J. L. Gardner, for superior cultivation of Clarkia elegans var. Orange King. S. R. Cowey received a certificate of honorable mention for display of zonal pelargoniums and carnations. The principal exhibits were from the leading private estates, including E. A. Clark, Mrs. C. G. Weld, Mrs. Lester Leland, Miss Cornelia Warren, Weld Garden, Faulkner Farm, Mrs. Frederick Ayer, Wm. Whitman, A. W. Preston, Mrs. J. L. Gardner; also A. M. Davenport and James Wheeler in the trade.

TEXAS STATE FLORISTS' CONVENTION.

Notice the change of date of the Texas State Florists' Association's Convention at Ft. Worth, Texas. Due to the fact that this date conflicted with other State meetings, and as a number of the florists in the State felt that a week earlier would be of better advantage to the florists in general, the date has been changed from July 13 and 14, to Tuesday and Wednesday, July 6 and 7. We feel that this date will give us better attendance—therefore we make the change.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

At the Executive Committee meeting of the American Rose Society held in New York City, May 10th, the registration of the new rose—Champ Weiland—was ordered published. The description of it is as follows by Messrs. Weiland & Risch, Chicago:

"A sport of Pink Killarney, originating in our establishment at Evanston, Ill., and under deepest scrutiny for the past three seasons. Buds large and full. Color a bright clear glistening pink, inner and reverse side of petals identical and fadeless. More free than the parent and more sweetly scented. Foliage of a glowing reddish character prevalent from planting time to end of season. It may be said that this rose represents a distinct advance in growth and grandeur over any of its predecessors."

According to the rules adopted by the American Rose Society for registration of new roses, at the end of three weeks if there is no objection received it will stand as a registered variety.

The June Rose Show to be held in Bronx Park was a matter of discussion and it was resolved to offer one silver and two bronze medals as special prizes in addition to the regular prizes offered in the schedule of the New York Horticultural Society, that is, to offer these three medals as sweepstake prizes for the following:

A silver medal for the best collection of outdoor grown roses.

A bronze medal for the best vase of hybrid teas outdoor grown.

A bronze medal for the best vase of hybrid perpetuals outdoor grown.

The matter of affiliated societies was considered. The societies that have already joined under the present arrangement are: The Syracuse Rose Society, Rev. E. M. Mills, president, with 244 members; Garden Association of Newport, R. I., Dr. Roderick Terry, president, with 100 members; The Newport Garden Club of Newport, R. I., Mrs. C. F. Hoffman, president, with 50 members; the Brooklands Rose Society of Brooklands, D. C., Mrs. Carrie Harrison, secretary, with 39 members; the Country Club of Joplin, Mo., Burt W. Lyon, president, with 72 members.

This club held its May meeting, May 11, in the Gallivan Bros. greenhouse at Smith' Ferry. A large attendance was present to hear Mr. N. Hennessey, of Northampton, read a paper on "Violet Culture." Mr. Downer, of the Smith College greenhouses exhibited some specimens of "Chinese Lantern plants."

During the evening the members of the club presented Mr. and Mrs. Daniel J. Gallivan with a large cut glass dish. E. J. Canning making the presentation speech. Mrs. Gallivan served a dainty buffet lunch.

The June meeting will be held with O. D. Allyn, of Holyoke, Mass.

MAINE

GARDENERS' AND FLORISTS' CLUB OF BOSTON.

This club held its regular monthly meeting on May 18. It was decided that a "Strawberry Festival" be held in June, fee 50c., admitting lady and gentleman. The date of the annual picnic was definitely fixed on July 22 at Cushing Park, E. Milton.

After regular routine business, Prof. Arno H. Nehrling, of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, gave an extremely interesting talk on "Horticultural Education." He graphically traced the history of floricultural education in the United States from its beginnings in the 18th century up to the present time, when societies, trade papers, schools and colleges are creating a national spirit of keen interest and enthusiasm in matters floricultural. Prof. Nehrling then described the work at the Massachusetts Agricultural College and expressed a hope that the present equipment would be increased shortly to meet the demands of the students. He completed his talk with an earnest appeal to the floriculture industry of Massachusetts for its moral and material support.

Although the attendance was rather small, the members present were much interested in Prof. Nehrling's lecture and an active discussion arose at its close.

There were but two exhibitors, Alex. McKay, gard. for E. A. Clark of Jamaica Plain, showed some fine specimens of hydrangeas and calceolarias. W. N. Craig displayed a handsome odontoglossum.

WESTCHESTER AND FAIRFIELD HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

At the regular monthly meeting, May 14th, schedules for the summer exhibition were distributed. The exhibition will be held in the Town Hall, Greenwich, Conn., June 18-19. Fifty-five classes are provided for. Copies of schedule may be obtained from the secretary. The fall show committee reported progress and a preliminary schedule was read that will be of interest to all exhibitors. It was voted to hold the annual outing at Edward's Rye Beach Inn, the date to be announced later. Among the visitors was Harry Turner of the Morris Nursery Co., who made a few commendatory remarks. A paper on Dahlia Culture was read by P. W. Popp.

The exhibits of the evening were of high quality. The awards are as follows: Calceolaria, from Jas. Stuart, cultural certificate; Eucharis amazonica, from Wm. Morrow, hon. mention; tulips, from Robt. Williamson, and A. Whitelaw, hon. mention; Calceolaria, from Jas. Linane, hon. mention; Aralia cordata, from J. Guerenonsprey, hon. mention; Halesia tetraptera and dwarf calceolaris, from P. W. Popp, flowering shrubs and perennials from Dehn & Bertolf, vote of thanks to each.

LENOX HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The Lenox Massachusetts Horticultural Society held their monthly meeting on Wednesday, May 12th, when George H. Instone, who has been secretary for the past eight years, tendered his resignation. As Mr. Instone had left the neighborhood his resignation was reluctantly accepted. S. Carlquist spoke in high terms of the service Mr. Instone had at all times rendered, and made a motion that in appreciation of the same the Society make him a life member, which was unanimously carried.

The campaign against the tent caterpillar resulted in the children of the neighborhood collecting 24,900 egg clusters. Oliver Lines, orchid grower for Mr. Arthur Cooley, was awarded a first-class certificate for Odontoglossum crispum Xanthoides Charlesworthii. Edward Jenkins was awarded a diploma for a display of novelty sweet peas. Mr. Jenkins who gave a lecture on "Horticulture Miscellany," had an appreciative audience and a good and lively discussion followed.

John Carman was unanimously elected secretary.

CONNECTICUT HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The society was treated to an unusually fine exhibition of tulips and hardy flowers and shrubs at its regular meeting Friday evening, May 14, the display being staged by President Warren S. Mason and by ex-President John F. Huss, each of whom received a first class certificate. The collection of Mr. Mason contained such tulips as Physche, Edne, Clara Butt, Baroness de Tonnegge, Glow, Pride of Haarlem, Parrot, Madam Kielage, King Harold, Isis and Rembrandt. The exhibit of Mr. Huss was composed of primulas, polyanthus and other gems of the spring garden.

Much interest was manifested in the National Floral Corporation

The only organization in the United States for the sole purpose of educating the general public—the people who buy—to buy more flowers, especially as gifts to friends out-of-town in place of other presents.

It does not conflict with the Florists' Telegraph Delivery, or any other reciprocal arrangements between florists.

No commission to be paid for the orders received.

The business will come direct from the customer. All the National Florist will have to do is deliver the flowers in good taste and in good order, and keep the cash. It will be a cash with order business.

The National Floral Corporation wants one exclusive representative florist in each city in America to take care of the orders which will be created by the advertising service this corporation will render. The best florist is wanted.

ST. LOUIS FLORIST CLUB

The St. Louis Florist Club held a very interesting meeting on Thursday afternoon, May 13th, in Odd Fellows' Hall. Ex-President W. J. Pilcher, presided over the meeting. All committees reported progress. The trustees were instructed to prepare plans for the annual picnic during the month of July. The committee who has the arrangements in hand for the American Carnation Society meeting, January 26-27, 1916, were invited to meet with the County Growers' Club on Wednesday, June 2. Chairman Fred Ammann accepted the invitation for the committee. This meeting will take place at Hugo Gross' place in Kirkwood.

Letters from President Welch of the S. A. F., and the Cleveland Florist Club were read with interest and filed for later reference. Delinquent members were given until next meeting to pay dues. The next meeting, June 10th, will mark the 29th anniversary meeting of the club and plans are being made to entertain the members.

Applications for space in the Convention Garden of the Society of American florists at San Francisco continue to come in, and some of the exhibits are already being installed. C. W. Ward, of Eureka, Cal., and Queens, N. Y., will make a display of annuals and flowering plants. Frank Pelicano, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., has taken space for a fine collection of dahlias. The Santa Barbara Nurseries will install a collection of ornamental plants. An exhibit of dahlias and peonies will be made by Fred Grohe, of Santa Rosa, Cal. Early flowering chrysanthemums will be shown by Chas. H. Totty. W. Atlee Burpee has reserved space for a fine collection of sweet peas. Cinerarias will be replaced from time to time with other plants by E. James, of Elmhurst, Cal. Richard Loring, of San Rafael, will display dahlias. Domoto Bros. will make a big display of Japanese trees and shrubs. A special line of ornamental plants and oranges in tubs will be shown by the Fancher Creek Nurseries, Fresno, Cal. An exhibit of new dahlias will be made by Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia. Henry Turner, of Montebello, Cal., has installed a large display of rose September Morn. The MacRorie-McLaren Co. will exhibit plant material used in landscape work in California, the display being arranged more to show the different specimens than for landscape effect, as the varieties are too numerous to permit of such an undertaking in the limited space. Other exhibitors will be mentioned later.

NEW ORLEANS FLOWER SHOW.

The exhibition given under the direction of the New Orleans Horticultural Society, both from the standpoint of exhibits and interest taken by the public, was a gratifying success. Financially it is not unlikely that there will be a surplus. Any surplus is to be divided among the several ward leagues having in charge the direction of the "City Beautiful Campaign" in the several sections of the city.

The measure of success already assured, according to Peter A. Chopin, president of the New Orleans Horticultural Society, assures the repetition of the event every spring. Future shows, said Mr. Chopin, speaking for the association, will far out-do the recent one, for in future there will be more time to grow exhibits. The present show was arranged on short notice in connection with the "City Beautiful" movement and so was not so thoroughly prepared for as it might have been otherwise.

Instead of being an exhibition of rarity and so of interest chiefly to those well versed in flowers it was what it started out to be, a massed illustration of the uses to which flowers may be put in making homes more beautiful. Landscape work, beds, both foliage and flowering, window boxes and hanging baskets were largely featured.

One of the big features of the exhibit, a miniature bungalow with garden attached and showing the use of window boxes and hanging baskets and all other floral artistry applicable to homes, was shown by Peter A. Chopin. Mr. Chopin also displayed a fine bank of hydrangeas as an entrance attraction. Newsham & Scheurmann showed orchids and a bridal arch of smilax, roses and orchids. A bridal bower by J. Reyes & Co. was a prime attraction. Carpet beds of foliage, plants were arranged by A. V. Dammara, American Beauty roses and ferns by Abele Bros., and Bermuda and back to the garden by H. E. Doerschel, T. J. Seino, showed plants and pot-holders.

Chas. Eichlmair's pot-holders garden, with its urns laden with blossoms and foliage, and the arch to the entrance covered in verdure and blossoms outlining the word City Beautiful, represented a splendid idea and was well worked out. Red and white blossoms were the only color used in this feature of the Avenue Floral Company's display. The background was made of palms and other foliage plants.

Carpet beds by E. A. Fraley and Mr. Kraak, plant groups by Mrs. J. H. Menard, home grown araucarias and ficuses by A. Verlinde and M. Vandereeken, hardy plants by Steckler Seed Co., day-blooming cereuses by M. Wichers, and geranium groups by F. X. Becker were some of the notable things shown. The exhibition lasted from Thursday till Sunday afternoon.

BLOSSOMS OF PEACE.

The Spirit of Peace to the world came,
The children of men and the world with its flame,
The drums were silent, the bugles were still,
The stars were silent and the moon
was dim,
The swords that were pointed at it were not with rust,
Were broken and tarnished and ground in the dust;
And she gazed with a tear at the blue and the grey,
Where the stars were dark and the stars they lay.

She came from the forest to give them a mass,
While she wove them a pall of the daisies and grass;
She fastened of violets and lilies for the swords,
For better lips and hands and the swords,
And out of the forest of the grave
Came a child of the forest and the wife;
And her name was peace and she died,
The name of peace and she died.

She bade from the forest the woodpeckers come,
And the birds of the forest drum;
Then, calling the wood thrushes brown, on the
She gave them the bugles that herds had played,
The trumpets she hung on a slender green vine,
That she taught her the door of a cottage to
And when she had done her and
Her name in white clover, her labors were done.

TO INCREASE FLOWER SALES.

Every day during the year has its myriad of birthdays, anniversaries, weddings, funerals, etc., when flowers should be the leading gift. Not to mention the great holidays when the mails and express are loaded with gifts of every kind except flowers there are abundant occasions to use up all the flowers that are grown and more, if the public could only be made to realize it. Any proposition which tends to a wider and more thorough distribution of the product of the flower growers always appeals to us and we are glad to welcome it and accord such support as lies in our power.

The National Floral Corporation has an announcement in this paper which seems to present a practical means to this end, in well-organized, economical and efficient manner. Its avowed object is to educate the public to give more flowers, to send flowers out of town and to enable them to thus send them anywhere and everywhere by a business-like arrangement with one approved florist in every city and town in every state in the country. The literature of this organization which we have seen bears every mark of a well-considered and well-matured enterprise and will deeply interest every florist however big or however little he may be. From the very fact that only one florist will be chosen in each community to be a direct beneficiary in this arrangement an immediate application by those interested is advisable.

CULTIVATION OF MEDICINAL PLANTS.

Any agriculturist interested in the cultivation of medicinal plants may obtain a copy of an interesting paper, including an extensive bibliography, read by Dr. Fred B. Kilmer at the 1915 meeting of the National Association of Manufacturers of Medicinal Products, by sending his address and a two cent stamp to cover postage to C. M. Woodruff, secretary, 475 East Grand Boulevard, Detroit, Mich.

The Executive Committee of the Gladiolus Society of Ohio authorizes the announcement that the next Annual Exhibition and Flower Show to be held by the society, will be given in the assembly rooms of the Hollenden Hotel, Cleveland, Ohio, August 13-14, 1915. An attractive premium list is now in course of preparation, and a fine display is confidently expected.

MEMORIAL TO THE LATE GEORGE DICKSON.

The Secretary of the Newtownards Horticulture Society announces that, in response to a circular sent out by a committee, he has received about £100 towards a memorial to the late Mr. George Dickson (of Messrs. Alex. Dickson and Sons), Newtownards. The committee has decided to provide a cup, to be called the George Dickson Memorial Cup, to be offered for competition annually, but among a different class of competitors each year; the cup is to be held for one year, and at the close of the year the holder will be presented with a small replica of the cup.—Journal of Horticulture, London.

MEMORIAL DAY.

Down the dusty village street
With their faded flags they come,
Marching to the measured beat
Of the mournful muffled drum.

Haltingly the files go by,
Shrinks the column year by year;
Once they shook the very sky
With their lusty battle cheer.

Old and bowed with many griefs,
Bearing wounds of shot and shell;
How they fought for their beliefs
Scores of battlefields can tell.

They have seen the meadows red
Where the clanging cannon cried;
They have left their gallant dead
Half the southern streams beside.

There it was, when carnage reigned,
To unsheathe their battle steels;
Ours it is to keep unstained
All the nation's old ideals.

Aye, our fathers fought and bled,—
Ours the profit, theirs the woe!
Shall it ever then be said
We've forgot the debt we owe?

Nay, we'll not forget, indeed;
North and South, our lives we'll give—
It again shall come the need—
That the dear old flag may live.

Roses for the boys in blue,
Roses for the boys in gray,
All impartially we strew,
There's no North nor South today.

In the mountains, on the plains,
In the cities by the sea,
"Dixie" mingles with the strains
Of "My Country, 'Tis of Thee."

On the fields that erst did prove
We were one in bravery,
Springs the lily white of love,
Blossoms the rose of loyalty.

And we dream that in the skies
Little Mac and brave Stonewall,
Grant and Lee, walk friendly-wise—
Lincoln smiling on them all!

Walter G. Doty, in Farm Journal.

MAY FLOWER SHOW.

The May Flower Show held the end of last week in the Palace of Horticulture, Exposition grounds, under the auspices of the California State Floral Society and the Alameda County Floral Society in conjunction with the department of Horticulture of the Panama-Pacific exposition, was a splendid success both from the standpoint of participation and attendance. The exhibits were divided into three classes—cut flowers by amateurs, cut flowers by amateurs who employ skilled labor, and all varieties by professional growers. In the latter class, the judges awarded prizes as follows: Roses grown under glass, Domoto Bros.; roses grown in the open, first, E. Gill Nursery Co., second, Vallance Nursery; carnations, first, Peninsula Nursery Co., second, Holland Nursery Co.; lilies, Y. Okimo; iris, first, Mrs. R. E. Darbee, second, Fred Agari; herbaceous peonies, Paul Grallert. Besides special prizes were given as follows: for pink oriental poppies, Paul Grallert; for artistic arrangement of tables, Mrs. Neal Childs; for trees and shrubs, E. Gill Nursery Co.; for tulips and aquilegia, Dr. John A. Scannavino; for iris, Dean Iris Gardens; for sparaxis, Mrs. Muhlmeyer; for blue perennial pea, Mrs. R. H. Grey. Roses were in assertive predominance at the show and some excellent displays were made in all three classes. A Mme. Edouard Herriot, grown and exhibited by E. E. Curtis of Berkeley, attracted much attention.

The time of the blooming of roses is now approaching. Scenes such as that depicted on our cover page this week are the irresistible "silent salesmen" for the rose grower. If every nurseryman and florist would only adorn their grounds in like manner and call the public in to see and admire the June splendor, how the sales of such roses would mount up. The picture was taken on the Thomas W. Lawson estate at Scituate, Mass., last summer. Let us hope that the time may yet come when American rose hybridists will give us a race of hardy ever blooming rambling roses so that such scenes may be possible also in late summer and fall.

Obituary

Edward Larkin.

Edward Larkin, 71 years old, of Newark, N. J., whose injury by being run over by a truck was recorded in our last week's issue, died at the Newark city hospital on Thursday, May 13.

Mrs. Margaret Eberhardt.

Mrs. Margaret Eberhardt, 39 years of age, wife of August E. Eberhardt, florist, passed away at her late home at 2875 West Baltimore street, Baltimore, Md., after a prolonged illness. Mrs. Eberhardt was a native of Baltimore, and was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Michel. She is survived by her parents, her husband and three children.

E. J. Welch, Jr.

Edward J. Welch, Jr., eldest son of Edward J. Welch, of Welch Bros. Co., of Boston, died on Monday morning, May 17th, after an illness of but four days with pneumonia. Mr. Welch, who had recently turned 21 years, was a young man of much promise and as an employee in Welch Bros.' wholesale flower establishment made many friends by his earnestness, industry and fidelity. He was a conscientious and thoroughly good young man whose sudden taking away has stirred the hearts of the florist trade of Boston with sorrow and with deepest sympathy for the bereaved family. At the funeral on Wednesday there was a vast number of beautiful floral tributes.

Frederick Weir.

Frederick Weir, 59 years old, known affectionately to thousands of residents of Bay Ridge, N. Y., as "Uncle Fred," and who as junior member of the florist firm of James Weir & Sons, at Fulton and Pierrepont streets, Brooklyn, had charge for many years of their greenhouses in Bay Ridge, died on May 14, in the Norwegian Hospital from blood poisoning resulting from enlargement of the glands.

Mr. Weir had been suffering for some time from his ailment, and it was finally decided to have an operation performed, but when he was taken to the hospital it was found that the disease had progressed too far, and he was beyond medical or surgical aid.

Mr. Weir was born in Brooklyn and educated in the public schools and at the Polytechnic Institute, and resided most of his lifetime in Bay Ridge. When the florist firm was reorganized a few years ago he went to Jamesport, L. I., to make his permanent home, and to supervise the greenhouses of the firm of that place.

He is survived by his wife, formerly Miss Annie Waters, and a daughter, Miss Phoebe Weir.

accepted theories our rhododendrons on northern exposures suffered more severely than any others and strange to say maximum suffered equally with hybrids.

In another plantation all hybrids came through perfectly, while Juniperus procumbens communis, Thuja Standishi, globosa and ericoides, Retinospora plumosa, filifera and the golden forms and Azaleas Hinodigiri, Jap. alba and Yodozawa suffered severely. Pinus strobus got an awful scorching too. But we shall not give up; perhaps we may find some way of overcoming all these difficulties if we keep on trying. Besides we have a lot of Wilson's seedlings coming along to help us build up a stronger and hardier race of these beautiful plants.

Pea and Bean Vicissitudes.

Two or three months ago we predicted that peas, with the exception of what are known as canners' varieties, would be well cleaned up by the close of the season. We based this opinion on information that was reaching us from different parts of the country, and the sequel has amply proved the truth of our predictions. There will be a very small carry-over of beans, especially of the wax pod variety. In fact, at the present time, it is next to impossible to buy more than one or two varieties of wax beans in bag lots. The situation on green pods is a little easier, but we believe that when stock for second planting is called for there will be nothing left in the line of green pods.

It is the verdict of the growers of peas and beans that very liberal contracts for beans were placed by the trade for their next year's requirements, but that they dipped rather lightly into peas. We will venture the opinion now that it should have been the other way, and that peas will be worth a considerable premium over the growing prices as they have ruled on most varieties when deliveries are made next autumn and winter. Should green beans prove slow sellers and prices rule low the coming season, many farmers will allow their beans to ripen and will save every one, bearing in mind the great scarcity of the past season and the difficulty in securing the varieties desired, and the very high prices which market gardeners have had to pay. Should there be in addition to this a good average crop of seed beans, the situation of the past winter is quite liable to be reversed. Of course everything will depend on the crop, but a complete reversal has more than once occurred within one year. In the matter of peas it must be remembered that we will get nothing from New Zealand or Europe the coming year, but on the contrary we are liable to be called upon to supply more or less pea seed to Europe. We are informed from sources we consider reliable, that the growers are not planting an acreage much in excess of that required to take care of their future orders. It will be seen, therefore, that anything short of a bumper crop will be bound to advance the price of garden peas, and that a short crop will probably produce some fancy high figures. We do not venture into the "danger zone" of prophecy very often, but feel just like taking a flyer at this time.

The Proposed Wisconsin Seed Law.

We are informed that a final hearing will be given on the amendment to the Wisconsin seed law, fathered and advocated by the Wisconsin canners, on the 18th instant. Most of those seedsmen who attended the former hearing came away with the fixed idea that the legislature was going to pass this amendment regardless of any opposition by the seedsmen, or the equitable of the case. A member of the Wisconsin Senate told one of the seed men that they had made an excellent argument against the bill, but that as the canners wanted it they were going to give it to them. This is a specimen of the way much of our legislation is passed. We expressed our opinion of this measure rather forcibly some weeks since, and have had no occasion to modify anything we then said. It certainly is going to make it exceedingly difficult for seedsmen to comply with the provisions of this act. Perhaps it will be so extreme that the courts may declare it unconstitutional and we believe herein lies the best hope of the seed growers.

The San Francisco Convention.

The time is rapidly approaching when the seedsmen who expect to attend the Convention in San Francisco on June 22nd will have to start for the City at the Golden Gate, and those who contemplate going should immediately write S. F. Leonard, care The Leonard Seed Company, Chicago, Illinois, and advise him of what space they will require in the Pullmans. We believe it is very generally known that an effort is being made to secure a special train for the use of the seedsmen who expect to attend the Convention and see the Exposition, but it is necessary that not less than 125 tickets be sold to insure this special train. We are informed that not over half that number has thus far been secured by the committee. There is no question about the desirability of having a special train for the exclusive use of the seedsmen, their wives and friends, but it must be understood that at least fifty to seventy-five more tickets are necessary to make sure of it. We therefore urge everyone connected with the trade who expect to attend the Convention to send in their requests for reservations without delay. Do it at once.

Of Interest to Retail Florists

WHAT FLORISTS CAN DO FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

Memorial Day is the next big business opportunity for the florist, and unless he has a back number of work by this time he will find the post for the holiday very well foretold. Some increased business is bound to come to even the most unpretentious of retail florists. But to prepare beforehand for the day and plan an advertising campaign is good sense.

Memorial Day this year ought to be a record breaker. It is preceded by Sunday, thus providing two days for flowers. Experience has shown that when May 31 comes immediately before or after Sunday business on that day increases wonderfully. We can make it a real Flower Day, a day of national floral tribute to our beloved dead. "Decoration Day" has developed into a day of universal homage not alone to Civil war heroes but to the departed of all our people, of all classes, races and creeds. In many respects it is the greatest flower day of the year.

The great growth of business in artificial flowers has undoubtedly hurt the trade in natural stock, but it has become a necessary evil—one in fact, that is very popular. Retailers all over the country have been making up preserved and artificial wreaths for several weeks past, in anticipation of a big day's business. The popular demand for this material rather than for fresh natural flowers makes its use obligatory as successful business means giving the buying public what they want. There will also be a big demand for flat bunches of fresh flowers, and the growers are depending much on this feature of the business.

So much has been said about the place of advertising in the florist trade that it hardly seems necessary to dwell upon it at any length. It is only sufficient to say that the good and judicious advertiser will reap the full benefit of his publicity at this season, especially in mail orders for wreaths, etc. Active retail florists are now sending out letters to all former mail order customers and count this part of their business as highly profitable.

Symbolic window effects will do much to attract attention to your store. Wax models are being much used in florist windows to carry out ideas. A military window will go well this season. We once noted an especially effective display that we shall always remember. It represented an old Civil War veteran placing a spray on the grave of a comrade, who had died in the attempt to save him from the attack of an enemy. The story was told in a fine painting of a conflict, which was at one side of the kneeling figure.

If you are going to brighten up your window at all, make the display of some special significance. Memorial Day ideas are plentiful, and to embody a good one in window advertising will attract the attention of all passersby. This short note is but a reminder; but a reminder is all that is necessary for the wide-awake, ready-to-do-business florist.

NEWS ITEMS FROM EVERYWHERE

BOSTON.

The florists of Boston report good business. The weather is so warm that people are out in the parks and gardens. There were many people in the parks and gardens.

The florists are reporting the fact that the weather has been so warm that people are out in the parks and gardens. The florists are reporting the fact that the weather has been so warm that people are out in the parks and gardens.

James M. C. has returned from a sojourned ever since last fall and a host of friends will be glad to learn that he is greatly improved in health and spirit.

Few retail stores within city limits have the advantage of a front garden display such as Harry Quint's, Bolyton street store possesses. The bulbous plants are now in full bloom and make an attractive appearance.

We regret to report that M. J. A. is seriously ill with stomach trouble and at the present writing is in a dangerous condition. The sympathies of the local trade are with Mr. Aylward, who is a well-known local florist.

Local retailers seem to be going in heavily for artificial flowers for Memorial Day. Two of them, especially, have been making up the prepared wreaths for over a month now, in anticipation of a tremendous demand. A little educational campaign on the appropriateness of fresh flowers would seem advisable.

The Horticultural Club of Boston had a special meeting at the Parker House and outing to the Arnold Arboretum on Wednesday afternoon, May 19th. The lilacs and many other rich spring flowering shrubs were in their full glory and under the conduct of Jackson Dawson and E. H. Wilson the visitors enjoyed a rare treat. Particularly interesting were the Wilson novelties from China, many of which are now at an age where their full character begins to show forth.

NEW BEDFORD.

Business, ever since Mother's Day, has been coming in very slowly.

Joseph V. Pierce of Cottage street, contemplates tearing down two of his smaller greenhouses and building one large one in their place.

Post & Gray have temporary quarters at the Steiger, Dudkeon store near the Purchase street entrance, where they are displaying many fine wreaths and flowers appropriate for Memorial Day.

The window of William Peirce's shop on Pleasant street is attracting a great deal of attention by its beautiful and appropriate decorations in yellow, in honor of the mass meeting for equal suffrage to be held here on the eighteenth of the month.

PITTSBURGH.

In the Flower Garden at the City Park, foreman John W. Jones has a really wonderful showing of color. One entire lot is devoted to this. Mr. Jones' interest seems largely centered, however, on his collection of Darwin tulips, which is very fine.

Mrs. E. A. Williams contributed the floral decorations for the wedding of Miss Eleanor H. Smith. Both the home and church were beautifully decorated with a combination of pink snapdragon and white lilacs. The bridal bouquet was formed of a shower of lilies of the valley with a center of Sweetheart roses, and the six bridesmaids carried Mrs. Taft roses tied with broad, pale blue satin ribbon.

Never has the flowering shrubbery been as luxuriant as this year. Beginning with the season of forsythia, suburban estates have since been a mass of bloom weigela, lilacs, and now bridal wreath. Snowballs also are here and two weeks ahead of scheduled time. Unfortunately owing to the recent excessive hot weather the flowers usually depended upon for Memorial Day will be things of the past this year. If the present cool weather continues, there will be no peonies, except the few very early bloomers, for decorating either. The cool weather has also postponed the filling of porch and window box orders, which this year are exceptionally numerous, notwithstanding financial pressure on all sides. The seedsmen all have been reaping fine harvests and now the plantmen are in the midst of their season.

WASHINGTON.

A civil service examination will be held in this city on June 19, to secure a list of eligibles for the position of division park foreman in this city, which carries with it a salary of $90 per month. The requirements are that the applicant for the position shall be between the ages of 25 and 45 years, and shall for the past five years have been in charge of men engaged in gardening, and park maintenance and improvement. He must also have a thorough knowledge of the care of trees, shrubs, flowers and lawns, and an ability to ride a bicycle will prove an advantage.

Superintendent George W. Hess, of the United States Botanic Gardens, was chairman of the committee of judges of the main exhibit of the rose show held May 20 and 21 at Brookland, D. C. Other members of this committee were Furman L. Mulford, of the United States Department of Agriculture, and Miss Susan B. Sipe, director of school gardens. The committee on artistic baskets comprised Dr. W. Van Fleet, rosarian, United States Department of Agriculture, chairman; Helen Fowler, manager of the Shaw Gardens and William Reeves, the White House florist. This is the fourth annual exhibition given by the Brookland Rose Society.

CHICAGO.

A. Langer says that early spring weddings are beginning to be quite a feature in the retail trade.

At Amling's a novelty is seen in brilliant hued poppies. They come in red, pink and white and are quickly picked up.

Two large baskets have attracted much attention in the store windows of Geo. Weinhoeber, this week. They were exquisite blendings of yellow tints.

Phil McKee, of the Moninger Co., has returned from a trip through Michigan in the interest of his firm and reports the greenhouse outlook as good, especially among the vegetable growers.

Mathias Mann, of Zech & Mann, states that the extreme weather of the last of April hurried along the crop of carnations, so that a large supply seems an impossibility for Memorial Day, the plant being sure to be off crop.

John Kruchten will move into the store now occupied by Kyle & Foerster as soon as the latter can give possession. The move is a short one, being next door to their present place, on the second floor in The Atlas block, but it shows that the business under Mr. Kruchten's management is increasing, making larger space necessary.

Demonstration Gardens in parks, a new venture of a practical educational nature is under way in Chicago's large parks. A portion of the ground is laid out in vegetable gardens instead of flower beds and is to be used as an object lesson on how to properly grow vegetables and how to use a small amount of land to the best advantage by a proper rotation of crops. 5000 square feet is being used in these demonstration gardens in each of the West Side parks, Garfield, Humboldt and Douglass. The South parks may devote a larger space. This goes well with the movement started a few years ago, of giving the use of city vacant lots for gardens and which has each year become more popular.

At Garfield Park, Supt. Koch says that bedding out will be under way by the time this is in print. The shrubbery in the park never looked better, owing, he thinks, to the long season last year, when spring opened early. The geraniums are in fine condition for planting out being short, stocky, and showing plenty of color. Madam Barney has been tried here one year and was well liked by the growers. Louis Heidtman called our attention to its robust habit, low growth and very double light pink flowers. He said it would stand up well even under unfavorable circumstances. John Doyle, a light red, was covered with blooms and Jean Viaud with its delicate light pink petals and white throat, was very dainty in appearance. Among the show pelargoniums were many choice varieties but of the deeper shades. Goethe was conspicuous. The vivid red was heightened by the black centers and the clusters were large and solid. Two nasturtiums, one light yellow with red penciling, called Giant of Battles, and another bright velvet red, called Regelianum were especially handsome.

PHILADELPHIA NOTES.

J. P. Agre has opened a store at 21 South 11th street. It is nicely decorated in a two tone effect. He calls it, "The Green and White Shop." Very appropriate. Mr. Agre reports the business done there last week was very encouraging.

Dr. P. H. Lane, of Chestnut Hill, is now the proud occupant of a seven acre farm at Ambler. The elite at Dooner's during lunch hour—well, if they hav'n't got the earache about potatoes and onions and 'tmats and pigs and goats and hens, it's no fault of the good doctor. May he convert them all.

There will be an interesting free Flower Show in Lansdowne, Saturday, June 5th, afternoon and evening. Judging from past efforts, this is worth going to see, even by the trade. One of the strong features will be the outdoor roses. There are quite a number of ardent rose amateurs in the borough. Among other trophies to be competed for are three medals by the American Rose Society. The event will take place in the hall of the Twentieth Century Club, near the station, under the auspices of the Natural History Club, of which George L. Pennock is president. A strong supporter of the local event is the president of the American Rose Society, Samuel S. Pennock of the Pen-nock-Meehan Co., who lives in Lansdowne, and has quite a collection of outdoor roses—over two hundred varieties, we believe—which is remarkable considering the limited room on his home grounds.

SAN FRANCISCO.

H. Bayersdorfer, of Philadelphia, is spending a few days in San Francisco before sailing for Japan.

Chas. C. Navlet has enlarged his seed department at the rear of the first floor of the Emporium and is negotiating for larger space for his cut-flower section.

J. A. Carbone, of Berkeley, Cal., who has been largely supplying the Bay trade with orchids, says the demand has been increasing nicely for several weeks, with prices about the same as in former seasons. For the month of June he expects to have a fine cut of Cattleya gigas. He says dendrobiums are popular at present, and that odontoglossum crispum is becoming quite a favorite.

A SOLDIER'S GRAVE.

The dust that sleeps unthinking and unknowing,
That turf below.
That reeks no more of pale December's snowing,
Or long-dayed June amid the meadows glowing,
That knows not Summer's birth nor Winter's going
On field or bough,
Was once a soldier's heart. It ceased its beating
In duty's round—
We o'er the heedless sod today are meeting
To learn the lesson Time has been repeating
And give all patriot souls that sleep our greeting
From this poor mound.
—Frank H. Sweet.

Syracuse Visits Rochester

A delegation of the Florists Club of Syracuse visited the Rochester Florists' Association, Sunday, May 16, and were taken for a trip through Highland Park and other beauty points of the Flower City. Those of our readers who have ever visited the Rochester bunch need no further details in order to realize the reception extended to the guests from Syracuse. All are recovering nicely.

Flower Market Reports

The markets are quiet.

BOSTON The demand is only normal, concentrating mostly on the novelties and spring flowers, such as irises, gladioli, calendulas, marguerites, etc. Roses are plentiful and of fair quality, but only medium prices can be secured for even the best stock. At the present writing there are indications of carnations shortening up. There is a plentiful supply of orchids and gardenias which move slowly. The redeeming features in the retail trade this past week have been some large college and private decorations. Local growers anticipate serious competition with the sale of artificial flowers for Memorial Day. Last year's business was disappointing in this respect.

Nothing flourishing the BUFFALO past week; a few weddings and floral work lightly scattered brought a little business. Stock plentiful and there is no heavy speculative buying. Carnations come in good supply, roses are plentiful and there is a general lot of everything all along the line. It is an easy matter for the retail merchant to get about everything wanted at his own figure, high prices being out of the question on anything. Saturday was "lilac day" and loads of this stock had to be moved at any price obtainable and it had a tendency to lower the price and check the sale on other stock. Darwin tulips are good. Lily of the valley has a good demand, also sweet peas. Lilies, daisies and Beauties move well. Peonies are coming in, but there is no special demand on these at this time.

Toward the latter part

CHICAGO of last week trade was fairly good. An excellent quality of stock was coming into the market and there was a fair demand for it. Saturday morning retailers bought up a good supply, anticipating a brisk week-end trade but were doomed to disappointment, for a cold rain kept most people indoors. Sunday was like November and Monday found Saturday's stock still in the ice boxes so wholesalers had little trade. American Beauty roses are to be had in any quantity, some long ones of fine quality being offered though many medium and short lengths of an inferior grade are also seen. Roses are plentiful and every kind can be had as well as every grade of each kind. Miscellaneous flowers of many sorts are brought in and customers have plenty to choose from. Snapdragons are now seen in exquisite shades. Some of the most beautiful shades are much used in making up baskets for wedding decorations, etc., and as show window attractions they are most desirable. Carnations are plentiful because trade is light, but there is only a fair cut. Peonies are coming in but it is said that the usual number to date is not in cold storage. Opinions differ regarding the stock likely to be in the market for Memorial Day. Of the three mainstays, carnations, peonies and roses, the last appear to be most likely to be here in quantity. This is deducted from the expressions of the largest dealers who have been long in the trade. Opinions differ most regarding peonies.

CINCINNATI

The general tone of the market is better than it was. The call for stock is about the same but the supply of stock has shortened greatly. There are, however, plenty of flowers to go around. Peony receipts are becoming very large. The general quality of the blooms is exceptionally good. Roses are still plentiful. As a whole they have only a fair market. Carnations, too, are in a heavy supply but most of the blooms are rather off in size and color. More lilies are coming in than are necessary. There are very fine outdoor sweet peas, orchids and lily of the valley. Gladioli sell pretty well. Other offerings include corn-flower, snapdragon, iris and some outdoor shrub bloom.

NEW YORK

Business is very apathetic and, although the spell of cold weather which has been on all this week has materially reduced the receipts of many things at the wholesale markets this has not been followed by any recovery in prices or clean-up conditions on any desirable item. The effect of the chilly temperatures has naturally been good on most of the crops, particularly roses, which as a rule are of excellent quality. Orchids continue to move very slowly and prices rule very low. Peonies from points to the south are being received in good condition. The gardenia and lily of the valley market are at low ebb, the latter being sent in from outside beds in enormous quantities. Outdoor gardenias from the south are also due. Carnations and sweet peas over plentiful with all traces of the recent price disturbance gone.

During the early part of last week business was rather slow owing to the aftermath of Mothers' Day trading. But by the end of the week things picked up and the market assumed a better tone. This was caused to a large extent by the church processions. While these functions do not aggregate much in dollars—as they only consume low priced flowers—still they use up a large quantity of these; and on top of the regular demand this has a tendency to firm things up all along the line. The prices did not go up but they held fairly steady which is always something to be thankful for. Roses are quite plentiful considering the lateness of the season. American Beauties are in moderate supply only, but enough for all demands. Some new crop Beauties are now arriving and these, of course, rather get the preference. Russells are still very good and a marked improvement is noticeable in Jonkheer. The warm weather is telling on the Killarneys especially the singles. The doubles are now the best especially the double white which is wonderfully good considering the season. The carnation market held its own in good shape, these being in excellent demand for the church processions. The sweet pea crop is pretty well cut and supplies are not nearly so heavy. The iris is still a feature although the greenhouse-grown Spanish are about past and the cheaper outdoor German now takes their place. Gladioli of the large flowering types from southern points are in ample supply and there is also a fair showing of the baby forms from nearby under-glass. Early peonies like tenuifolia, officinalis, etc., from local sources are to be seen. The earliest of the big fellows (Festiva maxima) will be in this week from favored localities nearby. Looking at my own Festiva this morning I figure they will not be out before the 25th. But my patch is late, being shaded with trees. Outdoor and indoor lilac are both over.

Prices for the past week were much lower than the previous week. Stock of all kinds is in abundance, with demand fairly good every day. The extreme hot weather has caused a falling off in quality. Peonies, daisies, lily of the valley, etc., are coming in heavy and the coming of Cape jessamine from Texas this week will have some effect on regular local stock. Roses are many, with the bulk preparations for Memorial Day, and all indications point to ample supplies and an active demand. Current business continues on a fairly satisfactory basis. Carnations have been cleaning up closely the last few days. Iris is still plentiful and the demand is keeping up well. Gladioli are coming into the market in increasing quantities, and some nice offerings of spiraeas are still coming in. The supply of peonies is limited on account of damage by rain to the early stock. There is little change in the rose situation. Some varieties are in slightly oversupply, and there is no line in which a shortage is felt. Sweet peas are of poor substance, and wholesalers have had difficulty in moving their stocks the past week. The late crop looks promising, however, and the demand will no doubt revive as soon as quality can be offered. Orchids are unusually fine and have a good market. Good quality lily of the valley is being readily absorbed.

Business here has improved somewhat and has taken up very well the large quantities of flowers that have been coming in. The coming of warmer weather has had an ill effect on locally grown roses and carnations and increasing the desirability of northern grown stock. Cattleyas have been quite plentiful, exceeding the demand. Gardenias are small and in slight demand. Sweet peas continue quite good. Peonies are coming in large quantities but meet with little sale, plant sales are very satisfactory. In all lines prices are very moderate. Collections are reported as quite slow and money remains tight.

A FINE CARNATION HOUSE.

The above picture represents A. A. Pembroke's fine carnation house at North Beverly, Mass., immediately after the tremendous cut of Mother's Day crop. Mr. Pembroke secured the top-notch market prices for his product and for Memorial Day expects to do equally as well. The interest in this photograph lies in the neatness and thorough adaptability of the equipment and structure by Lord & Burnham Co., 60 feet by 450 feet. Mr. Pembroke is the man whose carnations captured so many prizes at Buffalo last January.

"EQUAL TO GOLD MINING."

Vegetable growing shows up very well in comparison with gold mining as a wealth producer in this country. Its total value in one year is estimated at $216,257,068. Of this grand total, New York State is credited with $15,936,000, Ohio with $11,394,000, and Pennsylvania with $10,014,000. If these states were producing that much gold, people would be patting them on the back as important mining states. The

New York State Department of Agriculture has been one of the most efficient in the country, and its Director of Farmers' Institutes, Edward van Alstyne, is a recognized authority on farm problems. His opinion of John W. Lloyd's "Productive Vegetable Growing" has great weight. He says of the book: "I consider it intensely practical and of great value to both the individual who may be interested in vegetable growing and also as a text book for students in our agricultural schools." You can increase your own prosperity and that of your state, by applying Professor Lloyd's methods of efficiency to the business of growing vegetables—there's money in it.

placed at 50c. per square foot of glass. The income to the producer is estimated to average 50c. per square foot annually.

For the borders, among other hardy flowers, for isolated groupings against a background of shrubs, or for combinations of delicate colors for effects of contrast in the flower-garden, the Darwin tulips are matchless.

THE PRACTICAL BOOK OF Outdoor Rose Growing

FOR THE HOME GARDEN

by

GEORGE C. THOMAS, JR.

Elaborately Illustrated with 96 Perfect Reproductions in Full Color of All Varieties of Roses, and a Few Half-tone Plates. Octavo, Handsome Cloth Binding, in a Slip Case. $4.00 net. Postage Extra.

We have sold a number of copies of this sterling book. One purchaser writes as follows:

HORTICULTURE, Boston, Mass.

Dear Sir: Some time ago we ordered a copy of Thomas' Book on Roses. We promised to send you postage as soon as we learned the amount. The book was so good that we forgot all about postage until today. Please forgive our lapse of memory.

We loaned it to a friend and he likes it so well we're afraid that we will have to buy another.

Respectfully,

New York.

EXPENSIVE PLANT FOOD.

The Pittsburgh Post has a big advertisement headed:

"RADIUM MAKES THINGS GROW"

It is a "coupon" scheme for sending out five-pound cans of Radium Plant Food. The retail price is 20 cents a pound, but if you use the "coupon" you can get the stuff at 89 cents for five pounds including postage! This means $356 a ton for a mixture without any guaranteed analysis and which the U. S. Government has advised people not to buy. How they do like to play with this word "Radium!" The Post ought to know better than to boost such a proposition. If it wants to give people a fair bargain in plant food why not get some reputable dealer to mix nitrate, dried blood, acid phosphate and potash? That mixture will surely give results and could be sold at 25 cents the five-pound can at 100 per cent. profit.—Rural New Yorker.

DO YOU KNOW THAT—

Soaking the seeds of sweet peas in sulphuric acid for five minutes increases the per cent. of germination, and at the same time kills all the spores which adhere to the seed coat.

The estimated value of greenhouse property in this country, including houses, boilers, and all fixtures, is

PUBLICATION RECEIVED

Citrus Fruits, By J. Eliot Coit. The latest addition to the Rural Science Series published by the MacMillan Company, New York. L. H. Bailey, Editor. Few works on any subject of this character have been prepared with greater thoroughness in practical details. All the most up-to-date information and advice on every phase of the great citrus industry are contained in the pages of this volume. History, propagation, tillage, the combating of insects and diseases, the handling and marketing of the fruits, are all fully covered to the end that the successful culture of oranges, lemons and grapefruit may be made known and the industry be made to yield an adequate income. The author has spent many years in close touch with his subject as professor of citriculture in the University of California and other positions of prominence gaining the experience which enables him to speak with authority on the underlying fundamentals of this comparatively new industry and to collate in orderly arrangement all the information available at this time. There are twenty-five chapters, with some three hundred or more sub-divisions, and the illustrations number one hundred and fifty-one. The price of the book is $2.00.

SCOTCH SOOT

We offer the genuine in original cwt. Sacks, at:
$4.00 per 112 lbs.; $17.50 per 560 lbs.

GLASS CUTTING MADE EASY.

Florists who wish to cut glass as easily as snipping off a bud, with a clean cut free from splinters, will find the "Red Devil" glass cutters very useful and economical for the purpose. We are told that they are the only glass cutters on the market with genuine hand-honed and tested steel wheels. Just as a horse is no better than its feet, so a glass cutter is no better than its wheels.

But because the enthusiastic users of "Red Devil" glass cutters proclaim that it's all in the wheel, sight must not be lost of the fatigue proof handles and the scientific shape of the entire tool.

"Red Devil" cutters are sold as low as 10c. each and they run up as high as 50c. with all the trimmings. Readers interested further in the subject will do well to write for a booklet of forty styles of glass cutters "Red Devil," to the makers, Smith & Hemenway Co., Inc., 181 Chambers street, New York.

(Brooklyn, N. Y.) At Top-Notch Speed.

Step No. 2. Erecting the superstructure and iron work took us two weeks.

Enough masons, iron workers and carpenters were put on the job to bring the work to an early completion. Laying the foundation, erecting the walls, superstructure and iron work took four weeks. That's speed. The life of a Metropolitan greenhouse is longer than that of any other make. If you contemplate building one, allow us to submit plans and prices. We show best results, and what's more we can save you money.

Plans and prices sent without obligation.

Greenhouse, garage and stable of J. S. Adriance, at Williamstown, Mass.

A Well Planned Layout of Especial Interest to Gardeners

IN the quiet college town of Williamstown, Mass., lives a very practical man. His name is J. S. Adriance.

Under his own personal supervision, he has just completed a stable, garage and greenhouse combination of decided interest.

The design and plan are his.

It was our privilege, as well as pleasure, to work out with him the greenhouse and its equipment.

The work room is downstairs, on one side of which is the boiler room; and on the other, the mushroom cellar. The Burnham hot water boiler heats greenhouse, garage and stable.

It is just another example of the increasing tendency to join the greenhouse and garage. The tendency is increasing, because it is such a decidedly practical practice. It's a matter of economy, any way you figure it.

If you are interested, we will gladly send you photographs and particulars of several very attractive greenhouse and garage jobs recently completed. Our Two G's Booklet, or Glass Gardens, a Peep into Their Delights, is just the thing to interest owners.

Glad to send you and your employer one.

Glimpse of the greenhouse interior, looking towards the fine light gable. The benches have galvanized cast iron sides and bottoms. Every bit of iron and steel in the house is galvanized and aluminum finished.

The mushroom cellar opens off the work room. The cellar is equipped with our latest mushroom beds.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Amaryllises.

There is no better place for these during the summer and until October than a cold frame where the pots can be plunged up to their rims. Give them a syringing every afternoon, but during spells of hot weather they will be better for two or three syringings. Place lightly shaded sash over them so they can have a free circulation of air. When growing seedlings it is better to devote a bench to the young plants. Keep shifting as they may require until they are in a 5 or 6 inch pot. Give a rather heavy fibrous loam two parts, well decayed cow manure one part, some gritty sand and bone with a dash of soot.

Cymbidiums.

When once well established, cymbidiums are not difficult to grow. There are some very handsome species in this genus. They must never be thoroughly dried out, especially the thin-leaved kinds, as then they are liable to lose many of their leaves. Although they are fond of plenty of water at the roots when growing, syringing overhead often injures them. If the drainage is defective the roots are sure to decay and the leaves shrivel. Those requiring new material, repotting, etc., should obtain it as soon as the flowering season is past. It is very annoying to find some plants continually getting into bad condition, but it will often prove that the trouble lies in the quantity of water supplied at the root or that the atmosphere is either too dry or too wet. Cymbidiums like a moist, intermediate temperature. From 55 to 65 degrees will please them. When not growing they should be kept somewhat cooler with plenty of air given on all suitable occasions, but avoiding all draughts.

Planting Dahlias.

Planting can be done any time from now and up to the middle of June. All dormant roots should be planted now. To attain the best results dahlias should receive no check from start to finish. They will grow in any fertile soil, but their preference seems to be for a deep, moist, and sandy loam. The ground should have a liberal amount of plant food well incorporated.

Well decayed stable manure will be found the most satisfactory, but when this cannot be procured sheep manure or any chemical fertilizer rich in ammonia and phosphoric acid will answer as a substitute. They should be planted at least two feet apart in the rows and about five feet between the rows. When planting out from pots see that they are thoroughly soaked through, and firm each plant well. When they are all planted keep them well cultivated at least once a week.

Outdoor Sweet Peas.

Take good care of the sweet peas from now on. If the weather becomes dry whenever possible keep them moist at the roots by plenty of water at the roots. A general mulch between the rows is of immense benefit. Note the color of foliage, height of vines, length of flower stems and general vigor of mulched over unmulched rows. Sweet peas love moisture at the root. They also enjoy syringing overhead on the evenings of hot days. We prefer to pick the flowers as soon as the dew has gone in the morning. If picked damp on a hot day and placed in a cold room, the chances are that many will spot. Keep the flowers closely picked and remove seed pods carefully. If these latter are allowed to develop, the vines will speedily decline in vigor. If you cannot afford time to mulch the rows, then keep the soil constantly cultivated.

Violets.

It is about time to clean the violet houses. Clean the paths and ground under the benches and against walls, etc., and remove all stray weeds. Kill out all fungus by thoroughly fumigating the house two or three times. Clean woodwork and give a good coat of white paint. After everything is cleaned benches can be filled, using cut sod three parts, well rotted cow manure one part, with a little bone meal. Shade the house and keep on plenty of ventilation both day and night. After the violets are planted, keep the soil around them in a moist state and every good day give a good syringing in the morning. It is always well to plant violet stock early so that they are established before they get torrid heat.

Advertising and advertising

Considerable comment has been heard and read from time to time of late on the changing attitude of the retail florists in regard to advertising in the local papers and the occasional evidences of enterprise displayed in this direction have been warm, accepted and hopefully welcomed by those who, for the most part, are unselfish, wish to see floriculture prosper. Looking over the advertisements of the Boston florists in this week's papers, of which there are several, one can say, however, one would be rather disappointed where any advantage to floriculture is to be gained, for the greater part of the space is devoted to the exploiting of dried and artificial flowers and foliage for Memorial Day. While we may be disposed to deplore this state of affairs for many reasons, let us first admit that the retail dealer knows in what direction his largest profit lies and will, in all cases, naturally devote his energies to that field, which moves us to reiterate what we have repeatedly urged, from other view points—to wit, that the flower producers must sooner or later come to realize that they must find other means for securing constructive publicity and creating larger demand for their floral product than will ever be acquired through the advertising investments of the retail trade.

Nothing to commend it

"Colonial nosebags," "old fashioned bouquets"—these are names we have seen applied to certain nondescript, crazy-quilt constructions of decapitated flowers which certain of our florists, aided and abetted sometimes by occasional trade journal writers and the correspondents of daily newspapers who are always eager for something sensational, have been trying to press upon the public and commend as revivals of an old-time fashion and true examples of the standards of taste and ingenuity of the florists of half a century ago. The scanty supply of florists' flowers fifty years ago forced the floral artist of that period to practice little economies and expedients to make the most of the meagre stock at his command—things which no true artist then or now would ever do except under compulsion of rigorous necessity. In these days of unlimited variety and superabundance these practices are no longer excusable but—as mutilations of the high-class products of modern horticultural skill—would at best be no credit to the taste or judgment of the workman who indulged in them. Any self-respecting florist should be ashamed to attach his name to such distortions as we have seen repeatedly in show windows and exhibitions.

A lost art

But there is another angle from which we may look at the so-called copies of old-time floral ingenuity above referred to. We would respectfully suggest that the mere cutting of flowers to pieces and crudely crowding the wired fragments into a paper bouquet holder may fall far short of being a creditable imitation of the work of the really meritorious bouquet maker of by-gone days, which was accepted and admired by people of refinement. Thus far, indeed, we must say that none of the examples of this new fad which have come to our notice since it was sprung upon the public—some of them, too, bearing the names of florists more than locally known—have in any instance truthfully represented the standard of taste of "our grandmothers' times" or correctly exemplified the floral decorative art of the old-time formal bouquet makers who catered to any critical or discriminating trade. The experts in the construction of these complex mosaics had many crude imitators in their day, but few rivals, and when they went out their art with all its studied primness and patient elaboration went with them. Don't waste your time trying to revive it. "It can't be done."

Clethra barbinervis

The Japanese Pepper Bush is but rarely seen in New England gardens, yet its beauty is undeniable and it well deserves to be better known. Apparently it does not readily make itself at home here but that it can be successfully acclimatised the illustration on the cover page of this week's HORTICULTURE bears ample witness. The specimen here depicted is about fourteen feet tall and is growing in the garden of William J. Stewart at Winchester, Mass. on an exposed and very dry corner in ordinary garden soil. It has never received any protection during winter and is not affected by insect pests. I have known this particular specimen for five years and each season in late July and early August it has been laden with terminal racemose clusters of fragrant, white flowers and it is worth a long journey to see. There are other good plants in the vicinity of Boston, but Mr. Stewart's is probably the finest anywhere around here.

In Japan, the pepper bush is widely distributed from the extreme south to the northern limits of the main island, and from sea level to 6,000 ft. altitude. It is very common in moist woods and thickets and under the most favorable conditions it forms a tree 40 ft. tall with a trunk 5 ft. in girth. The bark is smooth and pale gray and the branches form a flattened, spreading head. As usually seen, however, it is a bush, more or less shapely in contour and 6 to 15 ft. high. But in any form this plant is handsome and is worthy of a place in any garden.

It may be propagated by cuttings of half-ripened wood inserted in sandy soil in a greenhouse or frame about mid-August, and kept rather close for a time. This species is known in some gardens and nurseries under the name of Clethra canescens.

BRITISH. HORTICULTURE. Carnation Show.

The Perpetual Flowering Carnation Society held its 18th show at Leeds, at the end of April, in conjunction with the North of England Horticultural Society. The silver challenge cup, valued at 50 guineas offered by Geo. Monro, Jun., of Covent Garden, in the class for twelve vases of carnations, was won by A. F. Dutton, a trade grower on an extensive scale, who staged some splendid samples of Lady Meyer, Champion, Mrs. C. W. Ward, Beacon, Mrs. C. F. Raphael, Benora, White Enchantress, Lady Northcliffe, Mikado, Enchantress Supreme, and two others. The challenge cup presented by J. S. Brunton, for three vases containing twelve blooms of British novelties, was secured by F. Englemann, with Colleen, Scarlet Carola, and Circe. The American Carnation Society's challenge cup, for three vases containing twelve blooms of American novelties distributed since January 1, 1912, was won by Wells & Co., of Merstham, Surrey, who staged: Champion, Enchantress Supreme, and Philadelphia. F. Englemann was second with Champion, Wodenethie, and Philadelphia. This competitor also obtained Lord Faber's cup offered for the best exhibit in the open classes. Gold medals were allotted to A. F. Dutton, Allwood Brothers, W. Wells & Co., and Stuart Low & Co.

Kew Official's Retirement.

It is announced that Mr. George Massee, a well-known official at Kew, is about to retire, having reached the age limit. For many years he has rendered a notable and useful service in the investigation of diseases of plants, and his writings on this subject have afforded enlightenment to a wide circle of readers. He possesses an unrivalled knowledge of fungi. His sterling qualities have gained for him a wide circle of friends, and he will be greatly missed from the scene of his activities, which he has served so assiduously and effectively during the last 22 years.

A Scottish Spring Show.

The Spring Show of the Royal Caledonian Horticultural Society was recently held in Scotland. The entries totalled about 400. Scotland is noted for its achievements in the horticultural world, and its gardening sons are to be found holding important positions in all parts of the globe. There was a brilliant display of spring blooms, the daffodils being particularly good. Storrie & Storrie, of Glen Carse, exhibited a number of fruit trees and bushes flowering, and a miscellaneous collection of cinerarias, calceolarias, polyanthus, schizanthus, and primulas. The carnations of Young & Co., were especially fine. John Forbes, Ltd., made a special feature of Alpine auriculas. Ireland was represented by Hogg & Robertson, of Dublin. Reamsbottom, of Geashill, contributed fine samples of St. Brigid anemones; Laird & Dickson made a special feature of hydrangeas and other flowering shrubs.

CYPRIPEDIUM MAUDIAE.

The rapidity at which this hybrid can be increased by division is truly astonishing, and the following facts cannot fail to be of interest:—Just 8½ years ago Mr. G. F. Moore, of Chardwar, Bourton-on-the-Water, received through the kindness of an orchid friend a plant of C. Maudiae, which has since been divided whenever opportu-ity presented itself, until, at the present time, no less than 434 plants exist. This figure would have been still higher had not several plants been presented on various occasions to friends. The stock will soon be once again repotted, when, if desired, it can easily be increased to 1,000 healthy pieces. Only a few months ago over 300 flowers were open at the same time, while 100 are now open, and many more will be produced throughout the coming summer. This state of almost perpetual flowering makes C. Maudiae one of the most beautiful and useful plants for decorative purposes, and it should prove a very profitable subject for those engaged in the cut-flower trade. Although this hybrid grows like a weed, Mr. G. F. Moore finds its two parents, callosum Sanderae and Lawrenceanum Hyeatum, very difficult to cultivate successfully, which is somewhat remarkable. In the Chardwar collection the same back growths of C. Maudiae have yielded young plants on three and four successive occasions, and even when a piece of the old plant carried but one leaf, and that in a yellow condition, healthy little plants have been produced. If there is a secret attached to the method of cultivation adopted at Chardwar it is to be found in the fact that C. Maudiae dislikes too great a mass of compost. An examination of the plants will show that the roots are mainly surface ones, preferring to grow round the top of the pot, and rarely deeper than 1½ inches. It is thus clear that any unneeded depth of compost is almost sure to become sour, with consequent damage to the health and vigor of the plant. There is apparently no reason why anyone should not achieve equal success in the cultivation of this attractive cypripedium, the principal points being the careful selection of a suitable pot and the correct amount of compost. The Orchid World.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

LANCASTER COUNTY FLORISTS' CLUB.

The regular meeting of the Club was held at the home of Mrs. Night for April and whether it was this enthusiasm or not, and tating a bad habit, or due to the fact that every one is busy and too tired to come to a meeting, the result was the same—a rather small meeting. Mr. Nolan after a long absence was again a welcome visitor. In his remarks on geraniums he said that in his journeys he often runs across some one who asks him about Lancaster and says "Albert Herr, yes I know him; I bought geraniums from him forty-five years ago, he must be a pretty old man," I want to say there are no old men in this Club. A few have years piled on our shoulders, but the shoulders carry the years all right. Come around and look us over some time.

The Aquarium Society asked that they be allowed to hold a fish show in conjunction with the flower show this fall, but as we had already decided that it was not advisable to hold a show annually this was deferred for one year. This would not make a bad combination and might be worked out in cities of this size to good advantage.

Lancaster is quite a center for amateur dahlia growers and the club has decided to hold a small dahlia show in conjunction with the Lancaster County Fair Association—Albert M. Herr, M. S. Hostetter, George Goldbach and H. K. Rohrer being appointed a committee to work the matter out.

Albert M. Herr, having charge of a discussion on bedding plants first said:

Being a neutral I hear considerable from all sides as to prices and unfair competition. All competition in this free country of ours is fair. Some of it may be mighty embarrassing for the time being, but will eventually straighten itself out. The man who is running his business on business principles is the one who is going to win out. The man who competes with a cut in prices is injuring the whole trade, but himself more than anyone else, and it is only a matter of time until he sees his mistake and either gets out of the business or starts all over again.

If I were a store man I would sell and handle only high-grade stock, I would have the quality so evident that the buyer could not help but notice it, and I would make the price accordingly, with instructions to my clerks that if any objection was raised to the price, the reply would be "We want every plant we sell to bring the buyer back to us when in need of another and on this account cannot afford to handle any but the best. If you want cheaper stock, we have some at the greenhouses or you can get it on the markets." This I would bring out strong in my advertisements and then live up to it. Simply announcing that you have plants and flowers is not advertising. Put some ginger in your ads. But the best advertising of all is the warm tongue of a satisfied customer.

If I were selling plants on the market or the street, I would get the costs down to the lowest possible point and then make my selling price high enough to allow a reasonable profit. I would explain to my customers that I could afford to sell a bit lower than the store man and that my plants with proper care and attention will give satisfactory results. If I had any second-class stock which came from the continual handling of plants sold by this method, they would be sold as such and my customers given a bit of advice as to how to handle them. If this were followed up carefully and conscientiously your customers would soon become suspicious of the competitor who is cutting prices.

Stop kicking, start studying and do not value your own time too low. Give you customers stock that will give them satisfaction. It is the only way to build up a permanent and profitable business, and unless you are in the business merely for the pleasure of growing flowers and plants, you cannot give your customers satisfaction unless you in return make a reasonable profit for yourself.

In the discussion which followed and which centered on geraniums J. P. Seibold spoke very strongly in favor of American Beauty. H. K. Rohrer said that they found Ricard their best seller, with some half a dozen other varieties called for to a smaller extent. John R. Shreiner found a good market for a general assortment; those who do bedding on a large scale found Nutt, Ricard, Poitevine and some good white in most demand. R. Nagle thought Scarlet Bedder would be a winner when better known. Prices were discussed and given up as a conundrum.

M. J. Brinton of Christiana read a paper on leaks of the trade, using big business as a comparison, and brought very forcibly the fact that thousands of dollars worth of stock is reduced in price by the handling it gets with the express companies, and other thousands by the fact that when stock gets plenty it is improperly handled by the grower and sent in to the markets regardless with the usual glut conditions at once brought about. He cited examples for the month of April when the unseasonable weather conditions brought everything to full crop and that he had been on the wholesale market when sweet peas were coming in by the ten thousands and yet it was almost impossible to fill an order for one thousand with strictly first-class stock, due largely to the rush by the grower to get everything into the market somehow and any way.

In the discussion on the handling of flowers and plants by the express companies it was brought out that a large proportion of the loss is due to lack of knowledge and being a small body ourselves it was moved and carried that we appeal to the S. A. F. to appoint a committee to work out a set of instructions to express employees for the handling of our products and if practical to give assistance to the individual in getting a claim where flagrant carelessness was shown by the express company.

For the next meeting June 17, Ira Landis of Paradise is to give us a paper on the summer culture of carnations for results next winter.

TEXAS STATE FLORISTS' ASSOCIATION.

The Texas State Florists' Association has sent the following invitation to the different southern florists' organizations:

National Floral Corporation

The only organization in the United States for the sole purpose of educating the general public—the people who buy—to buy more flowers, especially as gifts to friends out of town in place of other presents.

It does not conflict with the Florists' Telegraph Delivery, or any other reciprocal arrangements between florists.

No commission to be paid for the orders received.

The business will come direct from the customer. All the National Florist will have to do is deliver the flowers in good taste and in good order, and keep the cash. It will be a cash with order business.

The National Floral Corporation wants one exclusive representative florist in each city in America to take care of the orders which will be created by the advertising service this corporation will render. The best florist is wanted.

New Bedford, Mass.—Much trouble, caused by cut worms, is reported by some of the florists. The pests are making great havoc amongst the carnations and as yet nothing has been found which has seemed to destroy them in any great number.

A scarcity of cut flowers for Memorial Day is feared here. There is a demand even greater than usual at this season for geraniums all over the city.

NURSERY INTERESTS MENACED.

A letter from Fred K. Kelsey calls our attention to the proposed increase in freight rates and the pine rust quarantine by the Department of Agriculture as questions that should have earnest consideration and prompt action by the Nurserymen's Association when they meet at Detroit. It would seem that the plan of increasing the present heavy freight rates on nursery stock in car lots of something like 25 or 30 per cent. by the simple process of changing the classification, is one of the customary methods of insidiously increasing transportation charges under some specious plea of getting more money for the same service and, where there is such an important increase as that indicated, with the hope of securing the increased revenue without formidable protest or objection from interested shippers.

We believe it is openly admitted that for the average value of car contents of nursery stock proportionate to the weight, the present carload rates are in reality higher than the relative freight charges on almost any other kind of crude or finished material carried by the railroads. This fact makes the burden of any increase from the present high rates seem unbearable, especially as the 5 per cent. increase in the new trunk line rates, as permitted by the Interstate Commerce Commission, applies to nursery and florists' stock as to other shipments; and with this increase it is doubtful if the transportation managers themselves can claim any justification for this new increase in the expense for moving nursery stock.

In order to meet this situation effectively and aggressively Mr. Kelsey suggests that a committee of able representative men, possibly a special committee, be appointed at the June meeting of the association to take up this subject at headquarters, first with the presidents of some of the roads most interested and then with other officials in order that the proposed increased rates to be effective from June 1st be rescinded.

Any nurseryman or shipper of nursery stock has merely to look at his freight bills to have demonstrated how the material increase or cost of transportation the proposed change in rates will result.

Concerning the quarantine of all pines, Mr. Kelsey says:

"There have appeared in the horticultural papers some apparent differences between the understanding of some of the members of the Federal Horticultural Board and my own understanding of the position of that board on this pine quarantine subject at the hearing or conference held in Washington, February 2nd, as to whether there would be ample opportunity for a fuller hearing before definite action would be taken by the Board. This was and is clearly my conviction as to what occurred at the hearing on this point and I was therefore greatly surprised at the reference which appeared later from Chairman Marlatt in connection with the adoption of the quarantine recommendation by the Board on the 5th of February, only three days after the hearing referred to.

"I have no doubt that Chairman Marlatt and his colleagues wished to be fair in their interpretation of what occurred, and as it was furthest from my thought to refer to that understanding in any other way excepting as developed at the hearing, as publicly stated by me at the time, I have been quite unable to account for the apparent difference in statement in this regard. And if that meeting was fully reported I believe the records will fully bear out this understanding and the impression which I believe all derived at the time, viz., that there would be further hearing and opportunity for the nurserymen to appear before the Board during the present summer before decided action were taken as to this quarantine. It is noticeable that the recommendation of the Board of February 5th in favor of the quarantine was soon after made effective by the Secretary of Agriculture.

"I am confident that no reputable concern would wish to do other than co-operate with the Department of Agriculture and the Board in preventing the introduction and dissemination of injurious insect pests as has been and is the policy of this company, but admittedly at the hearing February 2nd it was shown that the immediate quarantine as then proposed was not justifiable, that there was a question whether the comparatively few instances of the pine moth could not be exterminated by proper pruning and care, nor do I think it was clearly shown that an arbitrary action in debarring all pines, whether for forestry, nursery purposes or other uses, would not cause a far greater injustice, loss and injury than the cost of effective remedies on the part of the Government, the different State Departments and the co-operation of the nursery trade.

"There are of course some nurserymen, like some of the officials in Washington and elsewhere, who hail with satisfaction or delight any pretense or reason for debarring importations, but to the great majority in the trade and out of it this spirit, whether based upon over-apprehension or the mercenary desire to cut off importations for personal advantage, cannot represent either the wishes or the interests of the great majority of the nurserymen and foresters and private planters of the country who rely on same.

"Should the Legislative Committee of this and the Florists and other National Associations take up this question in the right manner I believe that a modification of the present quarantine on pines would be secured to the mutual advantage of the trade as a whole and purchasers of this class of evergreens generally."

Obituary

A. S. Myers.

A. S. Myers, senior member of the firm of Myers Bros., Altoona, Pa., died on May 9th. He was fifty-six years old. He is survived by his wife and several children.

John Krumholz.

John Krumholz, florist, 823½ Superior street, Detroit, Mich., died May 6th after a long illness. He was fifty-five years old and had been in the florist business since boyhood. His wife and five children survive him.

Mrs. James Conlon.

Briget Conlon, 48 years of age, wife of James Conlon, the Smith street florist Brooklyn, N. Y., died on May 19, at her residence, 69 Dean street. She is survived, besides her husband, by three daughters, and three sons.

J. F. Zimmerman.

While delivering flowers in his automobile, J. F. Zimmerman, a well known florist of Alliance, O., was struck by a locomotive Saturday evening, May 8th, and died several hours later. He had been in the florist business for over twenty years. He is survived by his wife, one sister and three brothers.

Joseph Purington.

Joseph Purington, one of the leading market gardeners in eastern Massachusetts, died last week at his home, in Winchester. He was born in Alton, N. H., July 8, 1823, and had lived in Winchester 60 years. He leaves a widow and two sons, George and Walter, both of Winchester.

E. T. Cook.

Ernest T. Cook, an ardent horticulturist and writer, well-known to many of our readers, died suddenly from heart failure on May 5, at Toronto Canada, aged 45 years. Mr. Cook has resided in Canada for the past four years previous to which he held several posts of responsibility in horticultural literature and journalism in England. He was especially interested in roses. Since locating in Canada he has been engaged chiefly in landscape gardening.

Mrs. Edward J. Welch.

One week ago we published the sad intelligence of the death after a few days' illness of Edward J. Welch, Jr., eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Welch, of Boston. Today it becomes our mournful duty to record the passing away of the mother of that young man, which occurred on Tuesday morning this week. Mrs. Welch was taken ill on the night before her son's funeral and, broken-hearted over her great loss, she was in no condition physically or mentally to make the struggle for life against pneumonia and her case offered but little hope from the first. Two daughters and one son are left with the grief-stricken father to mourn the loss of a devoted mother. Deepest sympathy with Mr. Welch and his family in their double bereavement is felt and expressed by the entire florist trade of Boston.

NEW CORPORATIONS.

New Haven, Conn. The Cowan-Heller Floral Company. Capital stock $10,000.

Springfield, N. J.—Jakobsen Floral Co., capital stock, $4,500. Incorporators, Watson B. Morris, J. Neil Jakobsen, P. Carter Bell.

Great Barrington, Mass.—William Hall Walker has given Lord & Burnham Company the contract for the erection of the following: two orchid houses each 25 x 30; palm house 36 x 61; fern house 18 x 26; early graperies 25 x 50; late graperies 25 x 50; orangery 30 x 65; two melon houses each 18 x 47; early peach house 25 x 42; late peach house 25 x 42.

FRIENDS OF THE TRADE.

A prize of $25 in gold has been announced by the Home Yard and Garden Association of Bridgeport, Conn. This prize will go to the person making the best development of a flower garden or porch. The small flower garden will have as good a chance to win the prize as the large one, or even a porch development may win it if the person competing has no place to plant but the porch.

The yard and garden movement is gaining conservative friends each day. It is a common sight to see boys and girls wheeling rich earth before and after school to start a flower garden, while the planting of vines and flowering plants is much in evidence everywhere. Some of the more neglectful sections of the city have not been stirred yet as much as is desired.

About 10,000 leaflets are ready for distribution this week and it is hoped by these to reach the sections where least has thus far been done. These leaflets give simple instructions as to the planting of vegetables and flowers and will be of especial value to amateurs. Others will, however, find some valuable hints in it as well.

The aim of the movement this year is to get everybody to plant something, however small the space available may be. If it is only a window box or a box on the porch, some of the most successful efforts can be brought about by planting a vine and a few flowers in a box on an upper porch.

VISIT TO ARNOLD ARBORETUM.

A very interesting trip was taken by the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston through the Arnold Arboretum last Friday, May 21. The attendance was rather small, only 65 being present. This was probably due to the showers which threatened to come down any moment. Jackson Dawson and W. H. Judd led the itinerary.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

Standard Cyclopaedia of Horticulture. By Dr. L. H. Bailey. Volume III of this great work is now out. This volume embraces pages 1201-1760, figures 1471-2047, and alphabetically F to K inclusive. There are twenty-one full-page plates of great beauty and interest, three of them in colors.

The scope and detail of the work are greatly elaborated and enlarged, as evidenced in the fact that the subjects covered in this volume of 560 pages were embraced in 292 pages in the original Bailey's Cyclopaedia. An entirely new and very useful addition has been made in a list, with many portraits, of North American horticulturists of note not now living, and a history of horticultural literature with a carefully compiled and very complete list of American horticultural books, magazines and other periodicals, including names of authors and other data of much value for reference, these topics alone filling over eighty pages of fine print. The genus Iris which in the first Cyclopaedia filled twelve pages spreads over twenty pages in this new work, which, as we remarked in commenting upon Volume I, is to all intents and purposes a new work and not merely a new edition of an old work. The topic of the grape is extended from fifteen to twenty pages, and all through will be found many species and varieties of plants not before listed. Dr. Bailey has brought to his assistance the co-operation of a host of specialists in every line of horticultural industry, science and art and through it all runs the evidence of his own tireless energy and painstaking effort.

Those of our readers who have already acquired the first two volumes and have been looking forward wistfully to the time when the third should appear will be delighted to know that it is now ready for them, and we doubt not that impatience will grow with each succeeding volume until at last Z is reached and the horticulturists of America have at their disposal a full treasury of general knowledge more complete than has ever before been gathered together. The professional gardener who has not the Standard Cyclopaedia of Horticulture within reach for daily consultation will certainly find himself handicapped. The price is but $6.00 per volume, making the cost of the full set when completed $36.00. The publishers are MacMillan & Co., New York City. The Cyclopaedia can be supplied from the office of HORTICULTURE at publishers' price.

The critic who writes this of "Famous Days and Deeds in Holland and Belgium," just published by the J. B. Lippincott Company, says that "When King Albert, in August last, determined to ask his people to support him in a death grapple with the invading German host he was but carrying out the tradition established by a long line of heroic fighting patriots. * * * All those who are interested in the fate of Belgium should read this book and obtain an understanding of her past * * * no people have made such a gallant fight for their independence and national integrity." The side trip to San Diego may be omitted, if desired, and those requiring hotel accommodations in Los Angeles should write at once to M. L. Germain, care of the Germain Seed & Plant Co., Los Angeles. It may be necessary to alter the trip from Los Angeles up the Coast to San Francisco. Should there be 125 tickets assured we can have a special train up the Coast, which will make side trips a possibility, otherwise, it will be impossible to make more than one or two stops.

Our arrangements with the Inside Inn necessitates visitors arriving either Saturday night, June 19, or Sunday morning, June 20. Reservations at the Inside Inn can be made by writing direct to the Inside Inn, Exposition Grounds, San Francisco. This will be the first time the Seed Trade Association has met west of Chicago and it will probably be many years before they will come out to California again. We are planning to give our friends a good time and hope we will have a good attendance.

Burpee's New Pet.

The new sweet pea, Fiery Cross, opened its first bloom at Fordhook Farms, Doylestown, Pa., last week. The story of W. Atlee Burpee's acquirement of this novelty is told in the Philadelphia North American thus:

Last July, at the sweet pea show in London, Mr. Burpee paid the record price of $417 an ounce for the first three ounces of "Fiery Cross" seed ever raised.

One good look at the display of this new variety, which evidenced its rare worth by winning the highest award—the silver medal offered by the National Sweet Pea Society of England—convinced Mr. Burpee there was no use haggling over a price. So he hunted up A. Malcolm, the noted Scotch grower, and after some time secured the flaming scarlet hue which characterizes the variety in the seed world.

"Three ounces," answered Malcolm.

"Will you take 250 pounds sterling for the three ounces and the right to introduce?" said the American.

"I will," said the Scotchman.

Now, three ounces of sweet pea seed contain about 900 seeds. So for each of the flaming pea which were packed for shipment with a great care as a pearl necklace, the tidy sum of $417 was paid. And if the pea which carried these seed treasures across the Atlantic had gone down, the world's supply of this particular variety would have been lost.

Chicago Notes.

The seed laws now pending in our neighboring states are meeting with a protest from the large seedsmen. Last week the Leonard Seed Co., was represented by J. N. Clark, at Madison, Wis., where he went to fight the Wisconsin Seed Bill. Thinking it settled he returned to Chicago when it was given another hearing and Mr. Clark left again, May 25, for the Wisconsin capitol. Leonard Vaughan has been looking after the interests of the seedsmen on a similar mission at Springfield, Ill. the past week. He is opposed to the passage of the bill.

Notes.

The value of imports of horticultural goods into New York for the week ending May 25, is given as follows:—Fertilizer $13,083, grass seed $1,725, sugar beet seed $15,000, trees and plants $13,160.

Many of the cabbage growers of Wisconsin have found that it pays to disinfect their seed against some of the diseases—particularly black rot and black leg—which prey upon this crop. This is done by soaking the seed for 20 minutes in a solution of one ounce of formaldehyde (or formalin) in two gallons of water. The seed is then rinsed well with water to remove the formalin, dried, and stored in a clean sack until planted. For club root, the soil should be given a heavy application of lime, 100 bushels per acre.

Of Interest to Retail FloristsPRICE CUTTING.

A Southern View

We regret very much to learn that a few of our florists have seen fit to engage in the price cutting of certain plants and flowers just at the very moment when all should remain firm and hold out for fair prices. We understand that in some sections the price of Easter lilies was cut and reduced till there was scarcely enough realized to pay expenses in connection with the handling of them to say nothing of profits. This should not be so. There are several things to be considered when the question of price reduction presents itself. Does it pay to sell stock so cheap? Will your trade appreciate the lower price enough to buy the plants or flowers more freely? Will you not be expected to make the same price in the future? We doubt if there are but few florists who will answer these questions in the negative. We believe the future effect of price cutting will result badly, for the people each year, when the time comes for certain flowers to be in demand, will expect to buy them as cheaply as the year before or nearly so. We understand that in some places this season Easter lilies were sold as low as ten cents to the retail trade. Will not your trade expect to buy Easter lilies next year at about the same price?

It is far better to sell a few articles and receive a fair profit than to sell a great quantity at a loss. It is reasoned by some that if lilies are sold cheap you will get the trade to your store and you will be able to sell other stock also at good prices. We have never seen where this plan worked to any advantage, for if you are selling the flower that is in greatest demand at very low figures your trade will expect you to sell them the other articles equally as cheap. If you do not do so they will either not buy or have some apprehension that you are playing a cunning trick upon them and therefore will be doubtful of your appreciation of their business.

There is, however, one phase of the question that must be taken into consideration. It has been the custom of some of the large department stores to stock up on seasonable flowers just at the time the demand is greatest and, of course, as they have nothing invested in this line only just what the few flowers they have in stock cost them, they may be able to sell at a slightly reduced price to what the florist can afford to sell for. We have always believed that there should be some restrictions placed upon this "Department Store" business, but we believe that it is bad policy for the florists to try to meet this competition by cutting prices. If you cut your price they can do likewise. If they lose on the few plants they handle, it will do them but little harm, but if you lose on your entire business you have not only injured your own business but you have injured the business of your fellow florists. At the very best the department stores will get only a small amount of the trade—Southern Florist.

NEWS ITEMS FROM EVERYWHERE

BOSTON.

Harry Penn, florist, has taken on several college boys as extra help, an experiment in the psychology of employees which Mr. Penn has been trying out during the last few months. Much space is being used in newspaper advertising this week.

This is one of the busiest weeks in the year for the plant grower. A. Leuthy who is one of the old reliables for the Boston trade tells us that the bedding plant call this spring has gone ahead of the record on some things while on others it has lagged badly. Geraniums have never sold as they have this year and he cannot get them in bloom fast enough. Geraniums must be in bloom to sell. Cannas are also in unprecedented demand, as well as salvias, Zurich being the popular favorite in the latter. Alternantheras are going rapidly too, the variety Turban having the preference over the old Brilliantissima. It is noticeable that the main call this season is for bright colors the reds and scarlets being almost exclusively demanded. In many cases, a very consistent predilection in this year of fire and bloodshed.

Among the foliage plants which have sold well this spring are Draena indivisa and rubbers. The latter promise to be very scarce and few will care to risk their importation this year owing to the almost certain transportation delays which rubbers cannot stand. It looks like a big opportunity for some one to go in heavily on the propagation of this plant in this country. Boston ferns are very scarce at present, no surplus anywhere. Among the bedding stock not hitherto used much for outdoor planting heretofore Schizanthus Wisetonensis seems to be finding a place for itself and is making many friends.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Miss Esther Gude, daughter of Adolphus Gude, her mother, grandmother and a girl friend, had a narrow escape

Monday afternoon. A large touring car crashed into the Gude car and badly damaged it. Although escaping serious injury, the ladies were badly shaken up.

The fourth annual rose exhibition of the Brookland Rose Society closed all previous efforts of that organization. Charles F. Tansill, president of the society, won most of the prizes, including the sweepstake gold medal presented by Bishop Shahan. George W. Hess, was the chairman of the judging committee.

A miniature rose show was conducted last week at the United States Botanical Gardens. Mr. Hess made a display of about seventy-five varieties. The gardens are now at their best with respect to the spring flowers. There are beds of peonies covering nearly an acre of ground. A bed of banana plants, has just been set out, bordered with cannas.

Hedge shears imported are dutiable at the rate of 30 per cent. ad valorem according to a decision of the U. S. Court of Customs Appeals, and are not entitled to free entry as "agricultural implements." The court held that hedges, whether on the farm or around the city home, were ornamental only and not entitled to classification with articles used for the production of foodstuffs.

LANCASTER, MASS.

The gardens at Hawthorne Hall, the beautiful summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Bayard Thayer, at Lancaster, Mass., were on Saturday last, between the hours of 2 and 7, open to the public, and the generous invitation extended by Mr. and Mrs. Thayer to the people of all this section, to view the gorgeous floral display, was accepted by a large number, although on account of the heavy rain in the afternoon, the attendance was not as large as last year. Throughout the afternoon the people wandered over the spacious lawns of the estate from one garden to the other, spending perhaps the most time in the Italian garden where the lilacs were superb this year. The tulips in the walled English garden never looked better. The Darwins are remarkable for their length of stem, size of flower and brilliancy of color. Some new and very fine varieties have been added to the collection since last year. Irises look very promising.

The new Chinese "Exochorda grandiflora Wilsoni" was a mass of white flowers and is said to be the largest plant of this variety in cultivation and was much admired. The flowering crab apples were in full bloom, the double flowering Malus Ionensis being especially beautiful. A good many rhododendrons were lost here this season but the survivors have all been rearranged and there is nothing left to indicate any trouble, thanks to the adroit planting skill of Superintendent William Anderson.

CHICAGO.

Geo. Nemecek has bought out Jas. E. Papacek at 3250 W. 26th street.

Emma G. Owen opened the "Flower Shop" May 18th, at 404 N. Laramie avenue.

W. R. Mesler & Co. of Ilmo, Mo., are showing a wood veneered box of the knock-down type, to growers in Chicago. It is wire bound and appears to be practical.

Zech & Mann believe in a motto of "old customers first" and are writing to that effect to would-be customers who send in their first orders this week for Memorial Day.

Garden plants are reported as being ruined by the cold winds that followed the premature springlike weather, and at Winterson's Seed Store, demands for second orders for replacing early plantings are reported as coming in. All soft wooded stock had a poor chance to live in the open ground.

John Michaelson of the E. C. Amling Co., sizes up the peony crop as about one-half of a normal one. Following last year, when we had almost a double crop, the situation is hard to grasp. The shipments now are coming from one hundred to one hundred-fifty miles from Chicago and a very few locals are being cut.

S. P. Leonard has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of his youngest son Robert Weston Leonard, who passed away at the home of his brother, in Antec, Wis., May 17th. The funeral took place from the family home in Oak Park, Ill., March 20th, and interment was at Rose Hill Cemetery. The deceased was thirty years old and had been ill over a year.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. have taken up a new enterprise in addition to their regular wholesale flower business. They are manufacturing a very attractive line of florists' baskets and as the use of baskets is constantly growing more and more popular with the flower buying public, it looks as if the venture were bound to be a success like everything else this firm undertakes.

Chas. A. Samuelson had the decoration for one of the largest events of the spring, the Stout-Armstrong wedding. It was a rose wedding and 300 plants of Dorothy Perkins, Tausendschoen and Baby Rambler were used. The seven large arches in the home were party enclosed with a lattice, hung with clusters of roses. Four tall standards made up to represent rose trees, seven ft. in height, were used where the bridal party stood. Table decorations and bouquets carried out the same scheme with beautiful effect.

At Frank Oechslin's, the only exclusive plant range in Chicago, every truck and horse is in use delivering plants. The extreme warm weather in April hurried along the trade and bedding out is ahead of the usual season. So far, Memorial Day gives evidence of being up to other years in the demand for all kinds of blooming and decorative plants for trade in the retail flower stores.

Geo. Wienhoeber says that since he has learned how to handle cybotiums in his store that he can keep them any length of time without losing one. He places them in a window where they will get plenty of strong light for a week, as soon as they are received, and after this they are acclimated to store life and can be used in any part of the store without injury. As his store is one of the most artistic in the down-town district, this experience may be a help to retailers whose experience with this fern may have been unsatisfactory.

The new type of greenhouse construction used by the J. C. Moninger Co., is meeting with much favor. Among their newest orders is one from Thos. T. Brown, of Greenville, Mich., for a vegetable house for growing cucumbers. It is 84 by 600 feet, and not a casting is used in its entire construction except in the ventilation apparatus, all is steel. The Ann Arbor Greenhouse Co., is also having two vegetable houses each 32 by 300 feet, built by the Moninger Co., and Mrs. Francis Spickerman has placed an order for a conservation in addition to her store in Sandwich, Ill.

SAN FRANCISCO.

J. W. Walters, florist, of Los Angeles, Cal., was here recently prior to sailing for Honolulu with his sister.

H. F. Reeves, son of John Reeves of the Beverly Hills Nursery, is visiting the exposition here this week.

The Art Floral Co. has been making a fine display at their shop on Powell street of peonies specially grown for them in Santa Rosa.

Geo. A. H. Farmer has resigned as secretary of the Porterville Chamber of Commerce in order to devote his full attention to his nursery interests near Terra Bella, Cal.

Alfred Hammersmith, well known florist, now designer for Joseph's on Grant avenue, has the sympathy of the trade in his bereavement caused by the death of his wife.

The building in which D. Gruettner & Son, florists of Vallejo, Cal., have been located, is to be replaced immediately by a new structure in which the firm will re-locate.

Chas. H. Totty of Madison, N. J., left for home on May 19th after serving on the group jury of awards at the Panama-Pacific Exposition. He expected to stop in Southern California and at Grand Canyon en route.

Announcements have been sent out to the effect that the American Sweet Pea Society has postponed the show scheduled for June 4th in the Palace of Horticulture, Panama-Pacific International Exposition, until June 23d and 24th, owing to the recent spell of wet weather. Entries will now be received up to June 10th.

The local Ways and Means Committee and sub-committees, which are preparing for the coming convention of the Society of American Florists, are holding weekly meetings, and very good progress is being made in all directions. Space in the convention garden in Golden Gate Park has been so largely signed up that the taking of additional ground is under consideration.

PHILADELPHIA.

The flower market in Rittenhouse Sq., was a good success this year as last, and drew great crowds. This is a society event fashioned after Parisian notions. The trade has been liberal in contributions and support as they realize that such functions have a tendency to foster an interest in horticulture. We cannot have too many of them, and it makes no difference what the motives of the promoters. If the ladies want to be seen and admired a flower market is a far more wholesome excuse than a turkey trot.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON The cut flower market has improved very slowly and with but little advance in prices. The trade in artificial Memorial Day goods is cutting into the sale of fresh flowers. The local retail stores have stocked up heavily in prepared wreaths and are creating a great demand for their product. Carnations are the only natural flowers that are securing satisfactory holiday prices, the poorer goods being in greater demand for bouquets, flat sprays, etc. Roses are in moderate supply; but only special grade blooms are realizing 10 cents. Peonies are coming in in large numbers from Southern sources and secure about 8 cents. Present indications point to heavy supply of these for Memorial Day. Orchids, especially C. Mossiae are in fair demand, but do not enter much into the holiday trade. Gardenias meet with little or no demand. None of the southern out-of-door crop are seen here yet. In miscellaneous flowers the market is well supplied with Easter lillies, mignonette, callas, daisies, irises, gladioli, snapdragon, pansies, etc. Green goods are plentiful and of rather mediocre quality. Altogether the cut flower market is not what it should be at this season.

BUFFALO A rainy week and business was not flourishing. Receipts are heavy on roses and quantities of outdoor stock such as lilacs, tulips, lily of the valley, irises, etc., are offered. The carnation supply has shortened up again. Lilies were plentiful enough and find fair sales, but short white and pink roses have been accumulating. Peonies are coming in but the demand is not any too brisk as yet. With the coming of Memorial Day indications point toward a good week's trade especially in the peony line.

CHICAGO If the flowers that could not be sold at a satisfactory price after the holidays could only be available now, they would make Chicago florists happy. With orders pouring in from all over the country and hardly enough stock to take care of the daily trade, it is a sure thing that there will be many disappointed people, wholesalers, retailers and customers. It is safe to say that there is not a wholesale house in Chicago that can fill all the orders now received and this is Tuesday with four more days to be taken into account. Some of the plants are off crop and all have had cold and wet to contend with. Since May 1st, 21 days have had a rainfall at some time of the 24 hours and very little sunshine has helped open the buds. American Beauties are considered good and there is a fair cut, but they are used up each day. Carnations and roses are both scarce. Peonies are coming in, in proportion to the size of the crop, but that is small. Miscellaneous flowers help out and there is a very good supply of sweet peas, lilies and lily of the valley.

CINCINNATI A good many of the outdoor flowers in the gardens that usually compete with those of the florists for Memorial Day business will have in all shades, the newer and better varieties, splendid quality. For June Wedding and Commencement work, a choice lot of Princesse Nicolas and Festiva Maxima, two of the best decorative Peonies on the commercial market today.

$6.00 to $8.00 per 100.

Plenty of other choice varieties at $3.00, $4.00 and $5.00 per 100.

finished blooming and will leave the way clear for the florists' stock. Advance orders for this day are unusually heavy. Roses are plentiful including everything from Killarney to American Beauties. Carnations are not quite so plentiful as they were. The cut of peonies is very heavy and unless the unexpected happens should easily take care of all Decoration Day demands. The lily cut, too, is large. They have been selling rather indifferently. Lily of the valley and orchids have only a fair market. Gladioli and miniature gladioli are in a pretty good supply.

As a usual thing the NEW YORK New York city trade are not burdened with much Memorial Day work, the main disturbance in the wholesale markets being caused by the out-of-town call, especially so by the demand for carnations from New England centers. The prospects are the prices in general will be very much higher for Memorial Day than they have been in former seasons. Stock of all kinds today has shortened up very much and prices in consequence have advanced all along the line. If any of this advance is based on the New England trade, however, disappointment may be in store for some of the operators for the artificial wreath man is having his innings in and around Boston with a vengeance and there is no telling just how much of his popularity is due to the rapacious prices placed upon pickled carnations for Memorial Day in the past. However, we hope that the apparently better balanced wholesale market now prevailing will continue and that all will benefit by the change from the unsatisfactory conditions of past years. Southern asparagus continues to arrive in large quantities, and is clearing out at about the usual prices. If anything the quality of this asparagus is better just at present than it has been for some time. Smilax is scarce. Peonies are arriving from the South, and those that are of good quality meet with a ready demand at 4 and 8c. If there is anything that is moving unsatisfactorily it is orchids. It Has a list of the crops and the results of the tests which are being made, and also regarding the stimulative effects of radium on the growth of plants.

Professor D. P. H. of the Illinois experiment station in bulletin No. 177 explode these fables very completely.

It appears that one grain of radium costs more than most good, modern greenhouse establishments earn, net, in a year ($10,000). It further appears that if an enterprising (or fool) florist owning a place netting $10,000 per year should invest the whole year's profits in one grain of radium the increase of crop for the next year due to the radium could easily be put in the northeast corner of one of the eyes of his smallest baby and not inconvenience the child in the least.

We have been pleased with the wonderful results from radium applied to the tomato-potato grafting process as recently described, but we remember to have seen some very successful results of this kind without radium. We have seen ten trials of this sort conducted under uniform conditions without radium. One a beautiful success and the other nine falling short in various degrees and in various ways. We have seen another lot of five all successful (without radium).

When the gentleman gets that "radiated" tomato seed saved, let him have Burbank, or one of his hired men, sow it and let the Luther Burbank society describe the resulting plant. Without doubt the seedling plant would produce a peck of potatoes above ground, a half bushel of tomatoes under ground and a barrel of spinach between, which would add $400,000,000 to the world's wealth, but imagination fails. GREEN FLY TIME is now here. Even the forest trees around our gardens are covered with this pest. What are you doing about it? Fighting the green fly for the past few years has been a continuous performance and an expensive one with the ordinary spraying devices.

A BARRIE SOAP SPRAYER screwed to your faucet and a few pounds of fish oil soap solves this problem without further expense or labor. This is but one of its many uses. It is equally valuable in the greenhouse.

Made of Brass, Nickel Plated, Lasts Forever. PRICE THREE DOLLARS. Send for Circular.

This fluid absolutely destroys all weeds and other growth wherever applied, and its effect on the ground prevents the growth of fresh ones for a year and thus saves a great deal of time and labor, as no cutting, hoeing or hauling away of the weeds is required.

SCOTCH SOOT

Where there is a house that is just full of buds almost ready to show color, nothing will turn better color into the flowers than a little soot, that can be scattered over the benches before watering. The amount applied should not be excessive, as the soot is very strong and may damage some of the foliage somewhat. Apply just enough to blacken the surface of the soil in the benches, and let it go at that. Better a little oftener than too much all at once.

We offer the genuine in original cwt.

The Season is Advancing

Don't put off building that greenhouse until August or September. It will be so late then that everything will have to be rushed and you will not get the satisfaction you really should. Before Fall you should have your greenhouse all ready so that all your plants may be housed before there is danger of frost. If you do not do this your greenhouse will be a worry instead of a pleasure.

Write us now so that you will be prepared. We are an old company thoroughly organized and well equipped to handle every kind of greenhouse proposition.

The same apparatus after being equipped with our special close fold parts. The arm is exactly the same length as the other.

This photo taken in Antoine Schulteis' new house at College Point, L. I., proves that you get same width opening as with the old style equipment.

How Our Ventilating Apparatus Differs From All Others

New Close Folding Arm

Take a look at the photo for example. It shows a "close working apparatus" that did not extend into the walks.

It's a photo I took myself of one of those "close working" machines; yet see how far it actually extends into the walk.

What a difference.

The length of the arm is exactly the same as on the other, but see how it folds up so close that it's almost in line with the wall.

New Tell Tale device. It records in inches the exact opening of your ridge sash.

New Tell Tale Indicator

Then there's our ridge apparatus, with its new Tell Tale attachment. No more cricking of your neck to see how far the sash is open. The exact distance in inches is told by the pointer on the hand wheel Tell Tale.

Not only is this a great convenience, but it's a protection. You no longer have to leave the amount of sash opening to your man's judgment.

You give directions for the opening you want, and there is absolutely no excuse for their not carrying out your instructions. In that next house of yours, of course you will want these improvements. If you also want the best there is in construction, you will take pains to thoroughly investigate our Reconstructed Construction. You know you can depend on depending on Hitchings. And we go anywhere for business. Or to talk business.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Chrysanthemums

The grower who desires to cut good blooms by the end of September should lose no time in getting his stock planted. For early chrysanthemums, an ideal compost is three parts loam, one part decomposed manure and a good sprinkling of fine bone. Use sod that was piled up last fall which will now be in fine condition for the young roots to work in. For producing high-class blooms 9 by 9 inches will be about right for single stemmed flowers. The distance apart to plant will depend on the size and quality of the flowers wanted. Some plant as close as 6 by 6 inches but these will never be as good as those that have more room. It is better to water around the plants at first and when they have made enough roots the entire bed can be watered. When planting see that every part is firmed well, leaving a slight depression around each to hold the water.

Cyclamen

Shift them along as they may require from time to time, using a moderately firm fibrous loam two parts, leaf mold two parts, and one part cow manure, and see that they have ample drainage. Spray them overhead and wet down the walks and walls. Give a weekly fumigation to keep them clear of the persistent aphids. Those that are plunged outside in a cold frame should have some lath shade. Where you use sashes see that they are raised up from 8 to 10 inches bottom and top, and during hot days give a spraying overhead two or three times a day, and keep them as cool as possible.

Fancy Caladiums

In order to bring out their high colors they must not be grown in a too much shaded position. They need a little protection from the direct sun under glass, but it should be comparatively light. They will want careful ventilation to harden them up before being used for decoration. They will now need more water at the roots. Look them over at least twice a day. As the pots become well filled with roots, use a little liquid manure once in four or five days. In summer they succeed well in an ordinary greenhouse and should not be moved direct from a warm, moist home to a cool draughty position, or wilting will result. After midsummer, when flowering plants are none too abundant, the fancy caladiums, with their beautifully colored leaves are extremely useful. For room decoration and on piazzas where not too exposed or windy, these caladiums stand remarkably well.

Marguerites

The early-propagated portion of the coming season's stock should now be far enough advanced to require 4 and even 5-inch pots. Use turfy loam three parts and decomposed manure one part. They should get their final shift by the last week in July and be kept pinched. It is better to keep them growing on in pots during the summer as they make more compact plants by having their root room restricted. Size and vigor are only imparted by good summer treatment, which is always a permanent gain to this winter flowering stock. See that they have plenty of water at the roots and syringing. When pots become filled with roots liquid manure should be given once a week. These pots can be plunged somewhere outside where they will be handy for water. Older or left-over plants from last spring can now be planted out and will furnish cuttings for fall propagation.

Winter Flowering Stocks

In recent seasons considerable space has been devoted to their culture. For early winter flowering now is the time to make a sowing. Take pains to obtain the best strain of seed in the market. Sow in pots in a mixture of new loam and leaf mold with some sand. Give a good watering some little time previous to sowing the seed. Cover the seed very lightly, finishing by pressing the surface even all over. Place under a cold frame and shade until the young seedlings begin to appear when they should have full sun. When large enough to handle pinch or pot off and keep on shifting until they are in 5-inch pots. Late in the fall they will show their buds and you then can distinguish the singles from the double ones. The single buds are always long and pointed, while the double are short and stubby.

Syringing

Do not fail in giving all stock under glass a daily syringing, at least during the hot summer months. All plants are troubled with insect pests, and a daily syringing done every bright morning will effectually keep down red spider, thrips, etc. It also helps during spells of torrid weather to lower the temperature of the houses.

"A stern and rock-bound coast"
 We have in our notes on the opposite page another interesting and, in a way, instructive communication on the effects of the peculiar winter of 1914-15 upon evergreen trees. It never fails to come in mind that the climate of Kent's coast, Maine, is very much more severe than that of Boston and vicinity whence came our previous report. It is far colder although not very much farther south than Boston, and a further severity is added by the very frequent and bleak sea wind exposure—a factor which must be seriously considered in all planting. Not only do species and varieties that are fairly reliable from Boston southward frequently succumb entirely, but even the more resistant trees and shrubs if they have been reared in a more salubrious climate are often found to be poorly fitted to withstand the rigors of this Maine coast. We have room for more discussion on this all-important subject.

From all accounts it appears that Memorial Day made an excellent record all around this year. The fear expressed by many that the artificial and preserved material would cut into the trade in fresh flowers seems not to have been justified. Indeed, in some places the sale of the imitation goods is reported as having been distinctly "off" as compared with last year and a considerable stock of this material is left on the hands of some of those florists who bought heavily in anticipation of a great demand. The cheap department stores helped to overdo this thing and to this extent the growers of flowers have reason to be grateful to the department stores. Little complaint is heard concerning the quality of the cut flowers supplied for Memorial Day. The widely prevalent cool weather was favorable to the production of blooms with some good constitution and keeping qualities and also helped to hold down any tendency to overproduction. So whatever enhanced prices were in effect had some reasonable basis in the balance of supply and demand and altogether it is safe to say that Memorial Day for 1915 was a general success and fully up to its best traditions as a distinctively florists' day.

Time to speak up
 It requires some urging and zealous personal missionary work to induce a large attendance on conventions now-a-days, especially where the distance is such as to make the cost of transportation something of a burden to the man of average means. The comfort and pleasure of those who have to go any great distance to a convention is so greatly enhanced by traveling as a party, with exclusive accommodations, that we always feel for those who work so assiduously and then fail to get a sufficient number to enroll to secure these advantages. Secretaries and committee members are doing their utmost to induce full attendances at the Nurserymen's meeting in Detroit and the Seed Trade gathering in San Francisco, both of which are now drawing near, and for the S. A. E. Convention in San Francisco, which is the crowning horticultural gathering of the year. We do not need to say that either one of these affairs will richly repay every one in attendance whose business interests are in line with the objects for which these societies respectively stand. This fact is pretty well acknowledged today. But we would just like to say a word on behalf of the busy men who are exerting every nerve to not only make the meetings successful but to insure the pleasure and comfort of all who participate. The plans they are endeavoring to mature should in all justice be given the earliest consideration and intentions promptly communicated. To this proposition we can almost hear a chorus of hearty Amens coming from every individual who has ever undertaken the rounding-up of a convention party.

Winter Effect on Conifers in Maine

Mr. Hans J. Koehler has kindly handed us the following communications which have come to him from a friend in Kennebunk, Me., and which will, no doubt, prove of much interest to our readers as a sequel to the discussion which has taken place in HORTICULTURE recently relative to the condition of plants out of doors this spring.

Kennebunkport, Maine,
May 18th, 1915.

My Dear Mr. Koehler:

I am sure you will be interested to hear how the past winter (or rather spring) has used us down here. I am sorry to say that it has used us badly, and in the most unexpected ways that you could imagine. The last thing you would expect to be hit, namely, the native flat growing junipers, were the hardest hit of all. I had to root up over 150 of them that were killed outright and a large number of those I have left are very seedy looking, but I think will recover. Another thing that got hit badly was the spruce and hemlock screen planting on the north side of the laundry and laundry yard. There were over a dozen trees there, mostly hemlock, that were so badly blighted that I had to take them out. I put white spruce in their place. Of all the trees to come through with flying colors the white spruce carries off the palm. Not a single one of them anywhere shows the least sign of damage. White spruce for mine.

The kalmia and Rhododendron maximum, also the few hybrids we planted amongst the maximums as a test case, came through fine. Only about three of the kalmias were killed, a few being slightly scorched in places where the sun hit them. Of course they were protected as they are every year, lots of spruce trees stuck in amongst them. One large Retinospora plumosa on the ledge to the north of the laundry building, in what we call the laundry bay, was killed; a nice specimen Retinospora squarrosa at the east end of the laundry was killed and a number of the other fancy evergreens around the place had some of the limbs killed, but are not at all gone beyond recovery. Some of the cedars on west side of avenue also got killed and others are severely shaken. Another strange thing is that the nice globular bushes of Viburnum opulus nanus around the edges of the planting in the turn-around at front door have been killed back quite badly. They are breaking out down below now, however, and I hope will come out all right. The bed of Taxus canadensis to the north of library also got a severe shaking, and I had to change over a few of them. The Taxus cuspidata planted in various places around, with no protection whatever did not have a scratch. The Taxus canadensis was heavily protected. Altogether it was a strange season down here but the effect on the native junipers was the strangest of all. I went out looking up plants to replace those killed and found peculiar conditions. In the Merrill pasture of fifty acres of perfectly flat land I would find a large well-shaped plant without a sign of damage, and not ten feet away, and under what seemed exactly the same conditions of exposure, would be a mate to it killed completely.

I may add that we had a warm dry March and a dry fall. I kept the sprinklers running last fall until the frost stopped me. The rhododendrons, kalmia and fancy evergreens were heavily soaked.

I trust I have made myself clear to you and that you may find my description of things to be of interest to you.

Yours very respectfully,

(Signed)

ALEXANDER BURR.

In a later letter, in reply to some particular inquiries by Mr. Koehler, Mr. Burr wrote as follows:

My Dear Mr. Koehler:

The white pines stood well. I see only two trees at all affected, one near my cottage, along the roadside and one near the barn. The new growth is appearing on them now. The Austrian, Scotch and Jack pines came through in splendid shape. I would class them amongst the white spruces as being ideal for situations like ours. The red spruce also did well, with a few exceptions, but does not look so bright as the white variety. We have no Norway spruces here, but others in this vicinity stood the winter quite well. Regarding the Spiraea van houttei, some of ours do not show a sign of leaving out yet, while others are nearly in full leaf. The wood is green, but the buds do not swell and I believe they are killed back nearly half way. Also S. thumbergii got hard hit in places. The Taxus canadensis planted in the woods are well scorched; the Aesculus parviflora looks sound. That native cedar you mention, south of the house, and growing right on a ledge, came through splendidly, not a sign of a burn or scorch. The hemlocks at the back of the rhododendron bed are in fine shape, as are all of them around the cottage, and south of the paddock fence. Some of them back of the barn got knocked out but they were straggling specimens at best. Of the six golden dwarf junipers three got killed and three survived. They had no protection whatever and never had any. Abies concolor, Picea pungens, Abies fraseri and Picea polita came through in splendid shape.

The Glory of the Wisteria

The Wisteria is surely the most beautiful hardy climber of the temperate zone. It would be difficult to imagine a more charming floral spectacle than that presented in the picture which is used as our cover illustration this week—two plants festooning practically four sides of the house, which, by the way, is the residence of the editor. We purposely use the original Linnæan spelling, Wisteria, as used at the Arnold Arboretum, and not Wistaria as adopted by Nicholson, Bailey and some others.

There seems to be some confusion as to the origin and identity of the various Wisteria species. The plant shown in the picture is what is almost universally grown and generally known as Wisteria sinensis. Nicholson and Bailey both say of W. chinensis that the flowers are inodorous. But the flowers in this instance are very heavily perfumed, so much so as to be almost oppressive in a room with the windows open at blooming time.

In our opinion the Wisteria is most attractive and graceful when the racemes are not too densely massed and the vines not too closely attached to the wall but are so trained as to project out unconventionally in irregular spurs and arching sprays. To attain this result constant pruning and directing are necessary, but these attentions are all richly repaid.

BRITISH HORTICULTURE.

The R. H. S. Spring Show.

The Spring Show of the Royal Horticultural Society, which opened on May 18th at the Royal Hospital Gardens, Chelsea, showed a falling off in total entries compared with last year's exhibition, but the quality of the exhibits was all that could be desired. Orchids, of course, made a brilliant display. Here were to be seen the finest specimens from the conservatories of Sir Jeremiah Colman, Sander & Son, Charlesworth & Co., J. Cypher & Sons, J. Gurney Fowler, Stuart Low & Co., Bush Hill Park, Middlesex; Mansell & Hatcher, Ltd., and others. Roses formed an attractive feature. The development of the rambler, multiflora, and polyantha classes has enabled the specialists in this section to produce some pleasing effects with trailing strings of bloom on lattice work and arches. A superb array of our national flower was staged by the leading nurserymen. Each season there is a noticeable advance in the excellence of the carnations, both in the American introductions and those raised on this side of the Atlantic. The leading specialists were well represented. A bright patch of color was afforded by the fine displays of May flowering tulips. There were no striking novelties amongst the sweet peas. Raisers are evidently content to make the most of the already long list of varieties which are competing for public favor. The alpine and rock plant, the herbaceous plant, and the conservatory plant section were all of an all-round excellence. The following were awarded gold medals: J. Gurney Fowler, Sander & Sons, Charlesworth & Co., Fromow & Son, Blackmore & Langdon, R. & G. Cuthbert, C. Engelmann, H. B. May & Son, W. Paul & Son, Sutton & Sons, W. Bull, A. Dickson & Sons, Dobbie & Co., Hon. Vicary Gibbs, and Sir Everard Hambro.

Aiding the War Victims.

Distressing stories have reached this country of the terrible havoc caused by the war amongst the gardens and orchards of Belgium, France, Poland and Serbia. With a view to lending a helping hand a fund has been instituted by the Council of the Royal Horticultural Society. King George has become the patron of the fund, and has subscribed £100 (pounds). At present over £3,000 has been subscribed, and further donations are coming in. A commissioner has been dispatched by the Society to Serbia, from which this country formerly received a quantity of preserved fruit, to report upon the best means of reviving the fruit industry after the war.

DINNER TO THOMAS F. GALVIN

Complimentary dinner to Thomas F. Galvin on the fiftieth anniversary of his career as a florist and horticulturist by a few of his friends. Thus read the inscription on the menu in the big banquet hall of the Copley-Plaza Hotel on Wednesday, evening, June 2. The "few" friends of Boston's widely known and universally respected retail florist numbered fully one hundred of the leading men in the florist and seed trade of Boston and vicinity together with representatives of other professions and of men prominent in legal and political life, who cheered and sang themselves hoarse in honor of popular "Tom" Galvin. It was an ovation from start to finish of which any man should feel proud, dominated and permeated through and through by sincerity of the most pronounced type.

Patrick Welch presided and Judge C. W. Hoitt of Nashua, N. H., once more proved himself a shining light in the role of toastmaster. Among the speakers were J. K. M. L. Farquhar, Hon. Jos. Conry, Park Chairman John H. Dillon, Henry Penn, District Attorney Pelletier, Jackson Dawson, Hon. Joseph H. O'Neill, W. E. Doyle, Col. W. W. Castle, F. R. Pierson of Tarrytown, N. Y., and Wm. J. Stewart. A beautiful diamond ring was presented to Mr. Galvin, the presentation speech being made by Mr. Pelletier in most eloquent phrases and the recipient responding in words of grateful appreciation. It was certainly a red letter night for the participants, a success which will be long remembered and there surely was no happier man in Boston that night than Thomas F. Galvin. May he continue for many years more to adorn the business in the upbuilding of which he has taken so influential a part for half a century.

The committee which carried out this very successful affair was composed of William H. Elliott, Henry M. Robinson, Alexander Montgomery, Patrick Welch, Wm. R. Nicholson, Jas. B. Shea, Patrick J. Donahoe, Wm. J. Kernan, Thomas Roland, treas., John McFarland, chairman.

ROOT ROT OF THE IRIS.

Though the rhizomatous irises are the healthiest of all flowers yet sometimes there will be a complaint. Now for the cause. It is hard for people to realize that the irises are not water plants. The vast host of the Germanic must have dry feet. Often people make the mistake of putting them in wet ground. While they rejoice in the sun and the heat and often of their own accord lift themselves out of the ground to bask in the light and warmth, they do not like the shade.

It has been demonstrated that in all our semiarid regions where the moisture is light a region embracing a fourth of our country—these flowers flourish where other flowers cannot live. This is a boon for our vast desolations. We have had in this region fearful and very prolonged drouths, but never lost a plant of them.

Schenectady, N. Y. — Leon Varney and George Matthews have taken over the James E. Felthousen greenhouses in Van Vranken avenue and will continue the business, Mr. Matthews having had a large experience in the business. Mr. Felthousen was one of the pioneer florists of this city, having been engaged in the business for about forty years.

OCTOBER FLOWER SHOW AT SAN FRANCISCO.

Preparations are being made for the Grand National Flower Show to be held October 1 to 15 inclusive at the Palace of Horticulture, Exposition grounds, San Francisco, under the auspices of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society in conjunction with the Chrysanthemum Society of America and the Department of Horticulture of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition. H. Plath is manager of the show, John R. Fotheringham, assistant manager, and T. Taylor, secretary. All entries must be sent to Mr. Plath, 210 Lawrence avenue, San Francisco. This will be one of the most elaborate shows ever undertaken here, and it promises to be a big success both from the standpoint of exhibits and interest taken by the trade and the public. The program provides for entries in 112 numbers. Many valuable premiums are offered, including many medals and cash prizes given by the Exposition company, and a number of special prizes donated by societies and individual firms. While principal emphasis is placed on chrysanthemums, provision is also made for comprehensive exhibits of carnations, roses, lilies, herbaceous perennials, annuals, dahlias, tuberous begonias, together with a large variety of plants and many special features, such as table decoration, floral designs, baskets, bouquets, etc. The exhibition committee is composed of Daniel MacRorie, T. Taylor, F. Pelicano, E. James, Angelo J. Rossi, D. Raymond, W. A. Hofinghoff, Donald McLaren, Wm. Kettlewell, Wm. Munro, John R. Fotheringham, P. Ellings and M. Poss.

JOHN YOUNG TAKES A PARTNER.

JOHN YOUNG.

GEORGE HILDENBRAND.

We have often marvelled at the tremendous amount of detail work which John Young, as secretary of the S. A. F. and of the N. Y. Florists' Club, manager of National Flower Show and, lastly, wholesale florist, manages to accomplish. Next to a man's own qualifications and energy under such circumstances, comes a faithful lieutenant. That, Mr. Young has had in George Hildenbrand and it is a recognition fully merited and wisely bestowed when Mr. Young takes his well-tryed employee into partnership, as announced in his advertisement in this paper. Mr. Hildenbrand has a record of twenty years in the wholesale flower trade, practically all of that time with Thomas Young, Jr., and John Young. He is well known in the trade as a man "always on the job," courteous and considerate with everyone. Mr. Young has, since his re-entry into the wholesale trade, built up a fine business, and the new firm starts with an enviable list of regular consignments from growers of national reputation, such as cattleyas and gardenias from the noted Beechwood Heights Nurseries, Bound Brook, N. J., lily of the valley from W. H. Siebrecht, roses of the finer varieties and novelties from S. J. Reuter & Son and A. N. Pierson, Inc. These are only a few of the prominent names we have noticed on the product coming into John Young's.

NEW YORK NOTES.

B. H. Farr will be the lecturer at the next Florists' Club meeting, June 14. Peonies, of course.

Chas. H. Totty has returned from California enthusiastic about horticulture in that State and the hospitality of the California florists. He says it will be a big mistake if any florist lets the opportunity slip by of seeing this wonderful State, and what it is doing. It has been a great treat to him and a revelation in many ways.

Loyalty to the Brooklyn baseball team and the dramatic circumstances that surrounded Zach Wheat's home run drive over the fence in the ninth inning of last Tuesday's game, proved fatal for Chauncey Martin, a florist of Brooklyn. He dropped dead of heart failure while cheering the prowess of the Robin's left fielder.

We were satisfied with the results from the HORTICULTURE ad. and may be able to give you some further business in the future.

Sincerely yours,

National Floral Corporation.

HORTICULTURE INDISPENSABLE

The following examples of many approving letters received at the office of HORTICULTURE during the past few weeks, show why HORTICULTURE is so valuable as an advertising medium. SEED TRADE

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION

Officers—President, Lester L. Moore, San Francisco, Calif.; First Vice-President, J. M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I.; Second Vice-President, F. C. Dungan, Philadelphia, Pa.; Secretary and Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.; Assistant Secretary, S. L. Willard, Jr., Cleveland, O.

Damage by Frost

The recent frost covering the greater portion of New York have done considerable damage to such fruit and all tender vegetation. So far as we are able to ascertain, very little damage has done to beans planted for seed purposes for the reason that only a small percentage of seed beans had been planted but the beans planted by market gardeners were practically all destroyed, and it is an interesting question to know where they will secure seed for replanting, particularly of the wax pod varieties. We believe that the market is practically bare of wax bean seed, though certain varieties of the green pod sorts are still procurable in limited quantities. The full extent of the damage has probably not become fully known excepting to those directly interested, and the requirements for replanting have not developed. We are advised that the frosts extended into Michigan and Wisconsin, causing considerable damage in both of those states. While we have no information from Canada, there is no doubt that such parts as are adjacent to New York State and Michigan have suffered in the same proportion. There are reports of a shortage in tomato plants. The large packers of tomatoes had got almost their entire acreage planted out, and not anticipating such a clean sweep as the past week has made, they did not have a sufficient reserve of plants to take the places of those destroyed.

Michigan Peas and Beans

A letter just received from Michigan informs us that owing to almost continuous rain, the planting of peas and beans has been very much retarded in that state excepting on the sandy soils, and that a considerable percentage of the peas, both for seed and canning purposes, are yet to be put into the ground. If this report is true, it means a serious situation for those who are growing seed peas and, in fact, for the canners as well, as it is well known that late planted peas seldom make good crops.

Convention Time.

The time is near at hand when seedsmen who contemplate attending the forthcoming convention in San Francisco must decide whether they are going or not. We are surprised to find so many still on the fence, and as the date for leaving Chicago has been set for June 12th, and so far as we know no change has been made, it behooves everyone who expects to attend the convention to reach a definite decision promptly. We are just advised that Louisville, Ky., has been decided upon as the next place for the convention of the National Cannery Association and allied industries, and we advise that reservation at the hotel to be made promptly by those who expect to be in attendance.

The Late W. H. Grenell.

The recent death of W. H. Grenell at his home at Pierrepont Manor, N. Y., removes one of the veteran seed growers of this country. Mr. Grenell had been actively engaged in the growing of peas and beans for the trade for nearly forty years and had built up an extensive business. Though a quiet man, he had a most genial personality, and was always a welcome visitor or guest. He had many friends and few, if any, enemies. We are informed that he has provided in his will for the continuation of his business of growing peas and beans for the trade and for the canners, and that the present organization which has been assisting Mr. Grenell for several years past will continue in control. Mr. Grenell had a most efficient private secretary who has been able to relieve him of all details and, as stated, the business will be continued under the same management. We understand that it is for the benefit of Mr. Grenell's grandson, and that when he reaches his majority he can decide whether he wishes to engage in the business or discontinue it.

It is generally well known that Mr. Grenell had a very fine estate at Pierrepont Manor, N. Y., and was a breeder of thoroughbred Holstein cattle, having one of the finest herds in the country. His wealth has been estimated at from $250,000 to $500,000. We understand most of his estate is to be left in trust for the benefit of his daughter, wife and grandson. Mr. Grenell's passing away just on the eve of the convention of the American Seed Trade Association will cast more or less of a damper over the occasion, but no doubt suitable resolutions of sympathy for his family will be passed and they will be very heartfelt, for most of Mr. Grenell's friends had a warm affection for him.

Value of horticultural imports at New York for week ending May 22, 1915, is given as follows: Manure-salt, $24,270; fertilizer, $1,518; clover seed, $12,179; grass seed, $2,403; tree and plants, $7,041.

Joseph's force of decorators has been increased by the acquisition of L. J. Uzick, formerly with Albert O. Stein.

A display of cut flowers from the California section of the Horticulture Gardens at the Exposition attracted much attention the past week in the Palace of Horticulture.

The Hogue-Kellogg Co., seedsmen of Ventura, Cal., are sending out invitations to the trade to stop off at their place when in California to attend the convention in San Francisco on June 22d.

A bill has been enacted by the California legislature establishing a standard for California certified seed potatoes and preventing the sale of other potatoes as California certified seed potatoes. This measure make violations misdemeanors.

Effort is being made by certain members of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society to renew interest in bowling. The team has been reorganized with H. Podesta as chairman, and the first meeting for practice a few nights ago was largely and enthusiastically attended.

Of Interest to Retail FloristsTHE MOTOR TRUCK FOR THE FLORISTS.

That the great bulk of the hauling and delivery work of the country, will in the near future be done by motor trucks, is an assumption that is justified by the rapid increase in the use of this type of vehicle during the past few years. Just as surely as steam boats have replaced sail boats, and as extensively as wires have replaced men as carriers of messages, so will the motor truck supplant the horse in the field of hauling and delivery. The eternal movement toward better things, includes the use of motor vehicles, and they will be regarded as somewhat "antique" whose equipment does not include as an evidence of progress this modern system of delivery.

Our particular interest on this occasion, however, centers on the application of this type of vehicle to the florists. Representative florists of Philadelphia are making applications of motor trucks to their delivery, and are thus not only solving delivery problems, but are also opening the way to new business. One florist has been for four years a user of motor trucks. He takes care of the varied needs of a general delivery of all kinds of flowers, plants, ferns, etc., for a variety of functions. The body of the machine has been built with a special regard to the service it must render. It is built high for plants, ferns, etc., so that they will not be crushed in transit. The fore door construction, which is built in and closed, protects the driver from the elements, and makes it possible for the decorator to go along on trips to places where his services may be needed.

The truck has been a big factor in developing a lucrative line of decorating work at distant points in the suburbs. The flowers and plants can be packed into the wagon, and the decorator goes along. It is possible to make a twenty mile journey in a comparatively short time, and the work can readily be handled.

In one respect the delivery of flowers presents a different problem from almost any other field where the truck is used. Weight is almost entirely absent from the calculation. Yet the motor truck is becoming the vehicle preferred for the florist, and it is not uncommon to see a vehicle of three thousand pounds capacity making a trip with ten pounds of blooms. Speed and capacity are vital considerations. A prominent florist puts some of the more important arguments for the motor truck in the florist's business in the following words:

"We have to be ready for a rush at all times. There is no fixed demand in our line, no schedule of business as in the case of so many staples. A man has to have food every day, but he needs flowers only on certain occasions. A wedding, a banquet, a funeral, or several of them taking place in one day, can put a most severe

BOSTON.

J. Fred Dawson has returned from a trip to the West Indies.

Martin Tuohy's new store on the corner of Summer and Devonshire streets seems to meet with much success.

Ladies Night will be celebrated by the Gardeners' & Florists' Club of Boston at Horticultural Hall on the evening of Tuesday, June 15.

Thomas Roland is cutting from a ton to a ton and a half of ripe tomatoes from his big greenhouse at Revere and will so continue for several weeks.

The 12th Annual Exhibition of the American Peony Society, which will be held at Horticultural Hall on June 12 and 13, in connection with the Peony Exhibition of the Mass. Horticultural Society is expected to bring out a record display of blooms.

The lid was pressed down tightly on business in Malden on Memorial Sunday. Police Commissioner Fred A. Rhoades sent out word by his officers that no business house, outside of drug stores, could supply customers. It is the first time in years that the police have enforced Sunday closing. The florists were especially disturbed and embarrassed because they were not permitted to care for the Memorial Day business that was pressing upon them, and in every flower store in the city was posted a sign that read: "The police are starting to enforce the law, but we will open tonight at the stroke of midnight."

The Massachusetts Horticultural Society's field meetings at the Arnold Arboretum will be continued every Thursday afternoon through the month of June. These meetings, conducted by Professor Jack, of the Arboretum staff, are proving very successful and are affording unusual opportunities for becoming acquainted with the great variety of flowering trees and shrubs suitable for cultivation in the vicinity of Boston. Just now the azaleas, rhododendrons, barberries, mock oranges and the later flowering lilacs are especially prominent, to be followed in the next few weeks by roses, hawthorns and the coniferous trees.

PHILADELPHIA.

Arthur Herrington, of Madison, N. J., gave a lecture at the home of Mrs. J. Hampler Barnes, Devon, under the auspices of the Garden Club, May 21. His subject was "Flowering Trees and Shrubs."

"The Vase Shop" is the latest wrinkle of the ever fertile and artistic H. H. Battles. It is situated just below his Century Flower Shop, which, as is well known, adjoins the original and present headquarters. The vases and other floral accessories in the new departure are quite out of the common. Oriental, European, American—wherever a good thing could be found—Mr. Battles would add it to his collection of rare gems and antiques. Twenty years travel in many parts of the world have gone into his ceramic education along with his floral experience and now comes the ripe fruit. Worth looking over.

Masses of white, pink and crimson peony blooms spice the air with fragrance and vie for favor with varicolored roses at the annual rose and peony show which opened at Dreer's, on June 2. The show continues two days. Perhaps the most remarkable of the new peonies is the Chrysanthemiflora Rosea a huge chrysanthemum-like bloom of the most beautiful rose pink. If the American Beauty is the Queen of roses then the Felix Crousse should be the King of Peonies.

Rayon D'Or, perhaps the most noteworthy rose of the year, is the sensation of the show. It is of the Perpetiana type, a clear golden yellow. Large crowds of enthusiastic visitors thronged the store during the continuance of the show.

CHICAGO.

The wholesale and retail stores kept open all day Sunday, May 30. The cessation of the rain and a glimpse of sunshine put more life into local trade than had been seen for many days.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association made the record of its existence during the month of May. Paul Kling-sporn, its manager, is naturally pleased to see the books show such a desirable balance.

The question this week has been, not how many shipping orders did one have, but what proportion could one fill. Orders came in early and continued coming till the last. Many houses were shipping on the 30th.

Beauty and utility are combined at the City House of Correction, where the grounds are kept in a most attractive manner. The latest addition is to be two iron-frame greenhouses, built by the Foley Manufacturing Co.

Guy French, who with Richard Salm recently secured 75,000 square feet of glass at Union Grove, Wis., and started into business as growers of the Mrs. Russell rose, says he is convinced that they made no mistake in planting this rose so exclusively. Two months from the day the plants were benched they began cutting. The output is handled by the E. C. Amling Co.

The Foley Greenhouse Manufacturing Co. will build an addition to the range at the State University at Columbus, Ohio. During the past year, this company has furnished material for and in some cases did the building of houses for the State Universities of Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, and now has the second contract for Ohio, this time competing with six other firms.

At Poehlmann Bros. only a fraction of the orders could be filled. When their immense trucks would arrive from the greenhouses it would appear that the flowers they held would be sufficient for anything, but they were as nothing to the deluge of orders from all over the country. From New Orleans on the south to Winnipeg on the north the orders kept coming. On the 31st there were still thirty-five on the books just before noon.

W. J. Keimel, of Wendland & Keimel, Elmhurst, Ill., has great faith in Milady rose for commercial purposes. One of its best characteristics is its uniformity of size. At a recent occasion where there were many large designs, there was one in which 500 Milady were used, and so alike in size and form that they were thought by many to be artificial. Wendland & Keimel are said to be the largest growers of Milady in this country. They cut every day in the year and their present average is 2,000 per day.

The large cemeteries were visited on Sunday, May 30, by thousands of people. The lack of cut flowers was very marked, only an occasional bunch of peonies or a few roses and carnations being seen. Neither were plants much in evidence. Notices posted in the offices stated that work had been delayed by the rain, which is the key note to the entire situation. Pansy plants never looked better and immense quantities of them were used; in fact, pansy plants and potted hydrangeas furnished nearly all the color there was, but they were exquisite. Less geraniums and bedding stock in general were used than in many years. The plants that were set out a month ago during the prematurely warm weather had succumbed and been removed. The next two weeks will be busy ones for the cemetery employees.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Florists' Exchange as a corporation has been dissolved and Arthur A. Niessen appointed receiver without bond.

Gude Bros. Company furnished the 98 wreaths for the fire department for the decoration of the graves of deceased members of the department. The order was awarded the firm on competitive bidding.

Edward S. Schmid is planning to attend the annual convention, at Buffalo, of the Mystic Order of the Veiled Prophets, of which he is an officer. He hopes to take with him a number of the local florists, for a large number hold membership in the order. The party will be gone a week.

Considerable space in the newspapers is being given to the flowers which each morning find a place in Criminal Court No. 2 and which form the one bright spot there. Harry Payne, with Freeman's, is said to be responsible for this little attention, as he is serving as a juror in that court.

Fred H. Kramer and Mrs. Kramer were in New York during the recent maneuvers of the American war vessels. F. S. Good, manager of the F street store, was also in New York during the week, having accompanied Mrs. Good to that place preparatory to her leaving for a summer in Maine.

The complaints of the Platten Produce Company placed with the Interstate Commerce Commission against several railroads have been dismissed.

This company attacked the rates applying on Christmas trees between certain points and asked that more reasonable rates be put in force and the company granted reparation of overcharge on previous shipments. The Interstate Commerce Commission held that it was shown that the present rates were justified.

The announcement of the marriage of Charles E. Scarborough, a popular young salesman at the store of the Gude Bros. Company, on Thursday, to Miss Nellie Bly Clark, the daughter of a prominent druggist of Philadelphia, came as a great surprise to his many friends. They have not since had an opportunity to congratulate the young couple, for immediately following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Scarborough hurried to a train bound for Philadelphia, near which place they will spend a short honeymoon.

Fred H. Kramer has incorporated his business at 916 F street, 722 Ninth street, Center Market and the greenhouses at Anacostia, the capital stock being $500,000 divided into shares of a par value of $1 each. Stock to the amount of $400,000 has been placed in reserve for future development of the business. The officers of the newly formed corporation are Fred H. Kramer, president; Irene Kramer, secretary-treasurer, and Miss Mertine Atwill, vice-president. The other members of the board of directors are G. M. Lawrence, Philip Lawrence, G. G. Holmes, L. R. Gilbert, Beatrice Moss, S. A. Stratton, May Stratton and Charles A. Stevens. Miss Atwill is the manager of the Ninth street branch.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON Memorial Day business in Boston turned out to be a surprise, a pleasant one, especially for the growers. The cool weather preceding the holiday had a tendency to shorten up all kinds of flowers, keeping the supply well regulated. Everything went well in the markets, especially stocks, feverfew, spirea and carnations. Carnations sold easily at $6.00 per 100. Looking at it from the side of the business in natural flowers, this holiday trade was the best in years. It would seem that the popularity of the artificial flower and prepared wreath is on the wane and undoubtedly reached the top wave two seasons ago. The reaction against the artificial flower is very evident in reviewing the business done. Two prominent retailers in town went in for the prepared wreaths heavily and did a fair volume of business, but not quite up to expectations, due no doubt to this reactionary tendency. All the stores carried some of these wreaths, but did not push them as much as in previous years, finding a greater demand for fresh, natural flowers. Since Monday there has been a slight downward movement in prices and, on some things, a little tendency towards a surplus, but no trouble is anticipated until seasonable warm weather takes hold. Carnations are, naturally, back again to normal values. Roses are unchanged. Beauties are not bringing the prices of former years. Peonies are plentiful but they are all from southern sources, the local crop being still in the small green bud. The feeling in the local markets is strongly optimistic as regards the immediate future.

CHICAGO A week of unusual conditions preceded Memorial Day. The entire month of May had been cold and wet and all kinds of stock had been kept back. The local buyers did not seem to have the necessary confidence in the reports of a shortage of stock to place their orders in advance, and the end of the week found everyone trying to buy in a market nearly cleaned up by outside orders. Not a wholesale house could take care of all the orders that poured into Chicago, and every house booked to its capacity days in advance. Orders from new customers were turned down and old customers had their orders cut in many cases. Shipping began by the middle of the week and kept steadily up the balance of the week, many near-by customers wiring repeat orders up to Monday noon. There was but one kind of stock which was not in demand and that was sweet peas. Only a moderate amount of these moved, probably because they perish quickly in the rain. Carnations were cut very close and many only partly open were seen. Roses of all kinds were used up to the last one. There was a special shortage reported on short Beauties. Local outdoor stock was offered in limited quantity, the snow balls and other flowers being kept back or destroyed by the four weeks' rain. Peonies helped out some, but as the crop is estimated as being only 50 per cent of its normal size this year, the prices held up and even then stock was soon exhausted. Quotations were as high as $8.00 per 100. In carnations advance orders were booked for $4.00 and $5.00 per 100, but, later, prices ran up to $7.00. A break in the market was anticipated by local retailers, based upon former experiences, but there was no stock held in reserve this year and prices, instead of going down, reached the top notch.

CINCINNATI

Memorial Day business was very good and fully came up to expectations. After the close of the business very little stock was left over and that consisted principally of lilies, choice roses and small lots of miscellaneous stock. This week promises to be a good one for the florists in this city for we have the commencement of all of the Cincinnati Public High Schools. Shipping business is good. Roses are in heavy supply and except upon extraordinary occasions are easily able to take care of all needs. Lilies are plentiful and choice. Carnations, that is good ones, are not very plentiful. Gladioli have a pretty fair market. Cape jessamines are coming in much faster than the market can take them up. The cut of sweet peas is rather limited. The supply of greens is ample.

NEW BEDFORD

Memorial Day in New Bedford has been a record breaker for the florists. Cut flowers of every description were in demand and brought good prices. Wreaths, flower baskets and bouquets of every variety sold readily. White lilacs, spirea, deutzia and other flowers generally used in the cheaper bouquets were scarce. The large Portuguese population of the city appear to have adopted Memorial Day as one for religious and patriotic observances, and their inherent love for flowers, especially the brighter colored roses and carnations, has done much for the trade. The cemeteries were all made more beautiful for Memorial Day, but the Portuguese cemetery was like a tropical garden in color. No child was too young and no grandparent too old or too poor to add something to the riot of color displayed. Geraniums, more especially of the red varieties, seemed in all parts of the city, to be the most popular of the potted plants. There was a demand also for English daisies, forget-me-nots and pansies. Some few of the florists displayed and sold wreaths of metal and wax, but the taste of the public in general demanded better things, and those who sold them were unable to supply all that were called for.

Flower Market Reports

It is a pleasure to be able to report that Memorial Day business in New York was all that could be desired—in fact, the best experienced for this occasion for several years. The cool dull weather made flowers somewhat scarce and also helped greatly in the matter of quality, which was excellent, as a rule. Carnations cleaned up very nicely. Roses and other staples found a good responsive market right along for several days at figures not greatly advanced but steady and unfluctuating on all grades. Peonies of ordinary grade brought from $5 to $6 per hundred, the better quality blooms selling all the way from $8 to $12 per hundred, according to size and finish. Cattleyas did not benefit much by the occasion. Mosses bring only $10 or $12 per hundred, while $35 is top for gigas. Sweet peas are very plentiful, the Spencers selling for more than double the price of grandifloras. Callas have been moving lively at $12 per hundred. Asparagus plumosa is very abundant with only an indifferent demand.

Memorial week turned out even better than most of the good prophets had expected. The cool, rainy weather held stock back—particularly peonies. Probably none of the wholesalers had enough of the latter to fill orders satisfactorily. Even some that were very tight in the bud went out at the last minute. A vast contrast to last year, when there was a hot spell and the market was overloaded. The demand was mostly for the light colors, but even reds were scarce, as the supply did not equal the small demand for these. Carnations were in extra good demand and prices were better than expected, good stock bringing from $3.00 to $6.00. The demand for roses was not so brisk, but still they sold fairly well. The weather was ideal for shipping and the usual aftermath of "kicks" from the retailers were absent—"glory be"—say the commission men.

Owing to prevailing weather conditions, Memorial Day was a keen disappointment to the more optimistic wholesale florists, whose anticipations had seemingly risen with the temperature of some weeks ago. However, the unusually heavy frost early last week was followed by cold, drizzly weather; then on Saturday a steady downpour as if the floodgates of Heaven itself were opened, and Sunday again intermittent downpours. As a result, peonies which had promised much ten days or so before were practically "a dead failure." Carnations put their best foot foremost, figuratively speaking, and filling the breach to a certain extent sold at advanced prices. The weather for the occasion proper was ideal, although of course, too late to change the planting conditions, which otherwise would have been exceptionally favorable. Notwithstanding, all the disadvantages, there were retailers here and there who reported their sales in cut blooms as being ahead of last year.

All seasonables were in ample supply for Memorial Day. There was some uneasiness about the middle of the month that outdoor stock would be scarce on account of repeated set-backs from untimely storms, but the three or four days of hot weather the forepart of the week solved the threatened difficulty by bringing in quantities of everything of a popular nature used for decorative purposes. An unusually active shipping demand helped to a close clean-up of some varieties which move slowly locally, particularly callas and the cheaper outdoor flowers, and at the same time took much desirable stock, thus leaving no chance of a surplus in any lines. Liliun giganteum are moving readily. Sweet peas and carnations are both in better supply and their movement is much more satisfactory with improved quality. Prices are rather high. Snapdragons are abundant with demand up to normal. Peonies are being readily absorbed, and more could have been used some days the past week. Roses, as one of the mainstays for Memorial Day, have had a big call, but there has been plenty stock to supply all local demands even after heavy out-of-town shipments. Every kind can be had as well as every grade of each kind. A good many potted rambler roses are still being used in decorative work.

Business for Decoration Day brought quite a large volume of trade for three days. Wholesale markets had plenty of stock at all times and prices this year were not so high as usual for a holiday. Roses and carnations were many in all varieties. Peonies, cape jasimine buds and gladoli had a big call all week. Sweet peas held up well in demand. There was also quite a lot of outdoor stock that came in on Monday for the clean-up trade. Reports indicate that this year Decoration Day business was somewhat better than last year.

The retailers, wholesalers and exchangers of this city are exceptionally well pleased with the three days of Memorial Day business. The cold weather served to shorten the supply of flowers, yet there was plenty for all at slightly advanced prices in some lines. Peonies, roses and carnations were sold up well. The wholesalers cleaned up their stocks early in the game and at good prices. A comparison of prices of this year and those of 1914 show that where it was possible to obtain peonies last year at the rate of two dozen for 25 cents, this week the stock sold at from $1 to $2.50 per dozen and stress on delivery facilities, and in order to cater to customers it is necessary to guarantee an absolute punctual delivery.

THE MOTOR TRUCK FOR FLORISTS.

"In this rush work, the motor truck alone can rise to the situation. It is necessary to have the right kind of a car, right equipment, and intelligent direction. With this combination, it will be found that the truck cannot fail to give results.

"Trucks can be forced in a rush in a manner that would not be possible to horses. Trips that used to be very difficult for the horses, are the simplest things in the world for a truck. With a truck the florist is always in position to handle an emergency order and to make prompt delivery, no matter what the volume to be carried, or the distance to be covered. Weather conditions matter not. For this reason trucks are really an essential of the system."

A special advantage in the use of trucks, is that it is possible to have the vehicle arranged to suit the particular needs of the florists' business. Mention has already been made of the elevation in the body to permit the carrying of tall plants. It is possible to have the bodies built so that they combine elegance and good taste with proper advertising value. Electric lights are installed so as to facilitate the handling of the flowers, so that the driver, or his helper, will not break or damage the flowers in removing them. Artificial heat in the interior of the vehicle is also feasible, and is a most helpful factor. This is especially valuable in cold weather to protect the more fragile blooms. A device something similar to the foot warmer more or less used in carriages, gives this safeguard against too low a temperature. Thermometers in the truck make it possible to regulate the temperature.

There is an undoubted advertising value in motor trucks for floral deliveries. People like to see a handsome power vehicle in front of their home, and it is nothing uncommon for a florist to get a request to have an order of flowers delivered by his truck rather than a horse and wagon. Moreover, the vehicles carry the name of the florist through the fashionable sections, and help to attract public attention to a firm that has the modern equipment to take care of its customers. Advertising is one of the great factors in business. Good advertising is the creating of favorable public opinion for your store, your product, your service, or whatever you have to sell. The motor truck is an advertising factor of growing importance. The motor truck symbolizes progress. The Philadelphia Public Ledger expresses the opinion that, "In a system of good book-keeping, a large portion of the cost of maintaining a motor truck delivery system would be charged to advertising. By this method justice would be rendered in the amount of profitable publicity that accrues from the possession of power vehicles. The motor truck, with the name of its owner prominently displayed, is a moving billboard that advertises a firm in all parts of the territory in which its business is located. A power vehicle is accepted by the public as a demonstration of the ability of the firm to make good its delivery promises, and to reach on schedule time sections inaccessible to other forms of transportation. This kind of advertising is invaluable. It is both a business-getter and a business-holder. Such advertising costs nothing in direct outlay. It comes as an incident of an improved service."

It will be seen from the foregoing that the great advantage of motor delivery in this line of business is efficiency. This efficiency, however, is not to be obtained in a haphazard manner. Much forethought and careful deliberation should be given to the selection of motor equipment, and the co-operation of transportation analysts (whose services are extended by most truck companies), should be obtained, so that the proper size and style of equipment will be the result. There are many important points to be considered in the selection of a motor delivery vehicle. On many points of motor construction, manufacturers dispute and differ widely, and every truck on the market today has various good talking points which may, or may not, appeal to the prospective purchaser. Your selection of a truck should be influenced by four factors. Simplicity of construction, accessibility, economy of operation and service. By simplicity, I mean that it should be of interest to you that your vehicle, going as it will into the hands of unskilled drivers, should be devoid of all unnecessary complications, and should have as few parts as is practical. All working parts should be accessible so that when adjustments and replacements become necessary, the amount of labor consumed in making said replacements and adjustments, is by this accessibility reduced to a minimum. The more accessible the machinery and parts of your vehicle, the less the mechanical upkeep will cost. Economy of operation is also important, and the mileage per gallon of gasoline and oil should be carefully looked into. The cost of tires is an item to be strongly considered, and the vehicle selected should be well balanced with weight, so distributed as to give greatest life to the tires. The weight of the vehicle should also be considered, as it is poor economy to select any vehicle whose own weight is excessive for the load it is to carry. Service is a most important factor to the prospective truck purchaser, and he must needs be assured that the delivery which supplants his horses, shall be continuous and uninterrupted. The purchaser should ascertain whether a service station of the company is located in or near the town where he proposes to operate his truck, and whether the station is open at all times for his convenience. Also whether a complete supply of duplicate parts are kept on hand to meet the demands of all emergencies.

Finally, do not be misled by the lowest price. It is poor economy at all times, but especially so in the matter of motor trucks. The late Elbert Hubbard said, "Keep your car. Don't buy a car that was built for trading purposes. Buy a good one and keep her." He further said there are three things you must keep. "Keep your temper—Keep your friends—Keep your health," and he added a fourth—"Keep your car."

Dear Sir: Some time ago we ordered a copy of Thomas' Book on Roses. We promised to send you postage as soon as we learned the amount. The book was so good that we forgot all about postage until today. Please forgive our lapse of memory.

We loaned it to a friend and he likes it so well we're afraid that we will have to buy another.

GREEN FLY TIME

is now here. Even the forest trees around our gardens are covered with this pest. What are you doing about it? Fighting the green fly for the past few years has been a continuous performance and an expensive one with the ordinary spraying devices.

A BARRIE SOAP SPRAYER screwed to your faucet and a few pounds of fish oil soap solves this problem without further expense or labor. This is but one of its many uses. It is equally valuable in the greenhouse.

The Year Book of the United States Department of Agriculture for 1914 has come to hand from the secretary at Washington. It contains illustrated reports from the different Bureaus and Divisions subsidiary to the Department, and comprises 716 pages. The plates, of which there are over fifty in addition to an equal number of text figures, are excellent. With the exception of some four pages regarding the work of the Bureau of Plant Industry we find nothing in the book directly touching on horticulture.

The Well-Considered Flower Garden, by Mrs. Francis King. This new book has just been put out by the publishing house of Charles Scribner's Sons. The name of the author is not unfamiliar to most of our readers and her measureless enthusiasm in flower gardening has been widely recognized as an effective agency in arousing, especially among the amateur classes, a livelier interest in floral planting and arrangement. There can be no question that the good influence exerted by Mrs. King will be greatly increased through the wide distribution which this book will receive. The author has a graceful style and is so deeply in love with her subject that what she has to say is sure to find a ready reading and willing response.

Mrs. King is an apostle, first, last and always, of the art of color arrangement and harmony. Color, to her, is the fundamental in garden planning. That is the shrine at which she worships, and all through the book she strays not from her theme. In such a personality the magic of the hybridizer finds a zealous votary and the vast store of material of garden origin is eagerly drawn upon in the subtle color combinations and effects which she has worked out. There is a chapter in grouping and massing and the growing of companion crops for this purpose. The chapter on successive crops is rich in practical suggestion. Except as incidentally referred to in their place as a background for certain floral pictures, trees and shrubs are passed by unnoticed; annuals, biennials and herbaceous perennials have the exclusive right of way. One chapter, however, is devoted to the gardener, his rightful place and the recognition he should receive, and every gardener should be deeply grateful to Mrs. King for the appreciative sentiments she has here put on record as the gardener's friend.

Thirty-Second Annual Report of the Board of Park Commissioners, Minneapolis, Minn. This as heretofore is a model in its class. Concise and yet complete to the smallest detail it is most creditable to that forceful indefatigable leader in park work in America, Superintendent Theodore Wirth. The book comprises 160 pages, of which Mr. Wirth's own report fills 87 pages. There are thirty-four full page views of rare beauty and eight elaborate diagrams and maps of play grounds and park lay-out. A striking portrait of President Thomas Voegeli of the Park Board is used as frontispiece. Typographically the book leaves nothing to be desired.

SCOTCH SOOT

Where there is a house that is just full of buds almost ready to show color, nothing will turn better color into the flowers than a little soot, that can be scattered over the benches before watering. The amount applied should not be excessive, as the soot is very strong and may damage some of the foliage somewhat. Apply just enough to blacken the surface of the soil in the benches, and let it go at that. Better a little oftener than too much all at once.

We offer the genuine in original cwt. Sacks, at:
$4.00 per 112 lbs.; $17.50 per 560 lbs.

at that there were not enough extra good plants to go the rounds. Festiva Maxima readily brought $8 per hundred. Because of the very hot spell in April and the very cold entire month of May the crop was but half the size or less than that of last year.

There has been something of a scarcity of orchids of local production. Some exceptionally fine Cattleya gigas came down from the north which brought $7.50 per dozen and sold out as soon as received. The local crop is expected in within the coming week. There has been a good demand for cornflower, yellow and white daisies and iris, although the call was spasmodic, being brought about mainly by school exercises, the flowers named being of the school colors. There was a good run on American Beauty roses and more were sold at some of the stores last week, it is reported, than during the whole of the previous month. Beauties have been bringing $2 and $3 per dozen at wholesale. Baby gladioli are to be had in very good quality. Sweet peas are fine and bring 50 to 75 cents per hundred. The cold weather has helped out carnations wonderfully and they are holding with better sale.

Lewiston, Me.—The annual exhibit of spring flowers under the direction of the Lewiston & Auburn Gardeners' Union was held at the rooms of the Lewiston Chamber of Commerce, last Friday evening. About fifty attended. The exhibit included tulips, narcissi, hyacinths, pansies, lilacs and other spring flowers. Rev. George E. Kinney had the best exhibit of tulips and his address on the culture of this flower proved of interest. Others, who spoke along the lines of general civic betterment, were A. L. Kavanagh, Willard A. Noyes, George Horne and L. B. Morrill.

This house of P. S. Randolph's Sons, at Verona, Pa., is 30 feet wide and 175 feet long. Note the arch truss.

Of Special Interest to Plantsmen

IT seems to be the general opinion among plant growers, that there are certain advantages in having houses of moderate width—say, up to 30 or 40 feet wide, or even narrower.

The demand for plants has developed tremendously in the past few years, so that more growers are turning their attention to that line.

To meet the demand for an ideal plant house, having no columns, we designed a special arch truss framing.

The first houses we built that way were for P. S. Randolph's Sons, at Verona, Pa., four of them, each 30 feet wide and 175 feet long.

The complete span of the arch and rafters were entirely assembled and short riveted at our factory, and shipped that way.

The double angle irons of the arch start at the eave on both sides of the rafter, and for 3 feet or so are bolted directly to it.

With the help of a gin pole, it was a simple matter to lift the complete arch and drop the rafter ends between the eave gusset plates of the posts.

Very naturally, erection costs are lower, which you get the benefit of.

How would a house like this do for you?

Want to talk it over? Say when and where and we'll be there.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Asparagus plumosus.

This fine decorative green will need considerable more head room than smilax, also more depth of soil, and this should be heavily enriched as they are very greedy feeders. A depth of at least 9 to 12 inches is none too much for plumosus. For a compost use equal parts of rather heavy loam and some old cow manure which is well decomposed. Stock out of 4-inch pots, if sturdy and thrifty is the right sort to use. Beds thus planted should yield good returns for at least four to six years. The plants can be set from 10 to 12 inches apart in the rows and about 15 to 18 inches between the rows. As soon as the new growth assumes the character of a climber Silkaline strings can be supplied. Keep the surface of the soil loose and free from weeds. Syringe every day in order to keep the foliage fresh and bright. Give ventilation whenever possible as this tends to keep the young growth firm and strong.

Increase Begonias.

This is a good time to work up a good lot of begonias. Cuttings taken from the new side growth and those coming directly from the base of the flowering begonias will make the most satisfactory plants and those of the Rex class come fine from leaf cuttings. An ideal place to propagate these begonias is on a bench in some well-shaded house not too near the ventilators, and where a reasonable amount of humidity can be kept up. Give the proper shading and watering and they will soon root and can then be potted into small pots, using a compost of new loam, leaf mold and sand in equal parts. When they fill these pots they should be given a good portion of well decayed cow manure, leaf mould and loam in equal parts. Ventilate so the air of the house will not be violently disturbed by air currents.

Cold Storage Lilies.

Lilium speciosum rubrum is a very good lily to grow. It produces quite a few buds which open one after the other, making it last some weeks from the first open bud until the last. Pot some at intervals using 6-inch pots and giving proper drainage in each one. Place them out in a cold frame. Give them enough of water to keep them moist and when they show signs of root action and top growth they can be brought into the house and forced on. They will need lots of watching during the hot weather so that they do not become dry at the roots. Give them a good syringing every morning and afternoon until the flowers begin to open. Keep them fumigated for green fly.

Next week—Eucharis Amazonica; Lilies; Orchids; Starting Cycas Stems; Vines and Ivies; Weeds and Cultivation.

Poinsettias.

This is time to propagate poinsettias. Such as are rooted now will produce bracts a foot or more in diameter and be suitable either for benching or making up later into large pans. Poinsettias that were started early should now have some fine material for propagating purposes. Don't break them off the wooded stem but use the knife and let one or two eyes of the soft wood remain on the plants to give more cuttings again in about four weeks. Pot off just as soon as the roots have formed. A common error is to leave cuttings too long in the sand after being rooted. Pot into a compost of stiff loam mixed with about one-third its quantity of well rotted cow manure. Keep close and moist for a few days, then air more freely. If convenient and suitable greenhouse bench space is not at disposal, spread a coating of coal ashes in a cold frame and grow them there. By keeping them covered with glass and not giving too much ventilation, they will come along in good shape.

Transplanting Large Palms.

When on a well appointed commercial place, plants become too large and heavy to be handled by one or perhaps two men, too unwieldy to be of any use for decorative work where they might be made to earn their living, it is time that they should be disposed of either for ready cash or as commodities of exchange. As long as they need not be handled or moved about, all is well, but when a plant finally gets cramped for head room and a change of position, perhaps a radical rearrangement all around becomes necessary. When very large plants must be transplanted the work is usually put off until early in the fall, this being considered the best time for all such operations, but just now is as good as any for this work. Give all these palms a good rich compost for when they once become large they are very rank feeders. See that they have plenty of good drainage and work the compost well around the old ball. This work can be done outside where there is plenty of room to work. These large palms will be better to remain outside until the fall. Give them a place where they have the shade from some large trees. See that they have plenty of water and syringing.

Planting Out Stock Plants.

Now that all bedding out is done, look to the stock plants for the production of cuttings next winter. All such plants as geraniums, heliotrope, ivies, lobelias, salvias, etc., should be planted out in a good piece of ground and given care during the summer months. See that each kind is labeled true to name.

The situation as it looms up for the immediate future of the horticultural world is not without serious perplexities and in such emergencies as at present exist, it is the part of wisdom to be well prepared for whatever turn the wind and tide may take. We have so long been dependent upon foreign sources of supply that one finds it difficult to imagine just what the effect will be upon our industries should certain plant, seed and flower supplies fail us. But uncertainty and consequent distress are not confined to any one department. Florists are lament for anything the florists of the large eastern cities at least have every reason to bestir themselves to find new summer outlets for their products to offset the loss of steamer trade and other adverse conditions peculiar to these unprecedented times. American people, it is generally accepted, will stay in their own country this summer. Whatever money they may spend will be spent at home. The horticultural and floral industries will greatly need some of it but will they get their share of it? That depends upon how they proceed. It is not likely to come unsought.

Our new ally

The American Rose Society and indeed all floriculturists of whatever persuasion have reason to feel very much cheered and optimistic over the tenor of Dr. W. A. Taylor's remarks on the occasion of the turning over to the Government of the Rose Test Garden at Arlington, as quoted in our Washington correspondent in another column of this paper. The Agricultural Department has thus far concerned itself almost exclusively with matters utilitarian and the ornamental side of horticulture has been given the cold shoulder. Now Dr. Taylor as the representative of the Department tells us that hereafter floral topics will receive attention and support as a part of the legitimate work of the Department. What more can we ask as a starter? It should now be the earnest aim of the ornamental horticulturist to cooperate in the fullest manner with the Washington officials, encourage them to go ahead and impress upon them in every possible way that the gardeners and florists of this country are duly appreciative of this promised attention to their interests. One of the first steps in practical appreciation should be a prompt and liberal response to Prof. Mulford's appeal for more roses for the test collection. The answer of the rose growers should be free-hearted and enthusiastic.

The tendency in recent years to devote large ranges of greenhouses to the production of one special cut flower crop, and the ultimate effect of this movement upon the flower business is one of the most important and serious questions before the trade at the present time. Among the results most directly apparent in the operation of these "factories" are economy in overhead expenses, saving of labor and a certain standardizing and equalizing of the product which has been regarded with favor as a progressive step in floriculture in the direction of a permanent position among other well-established commercial enterprises. The tendency toward lower average values in the wholesale markets which is the logical accompaniment of the greatly increased production of roses, sweet peas, lilies, gardenias or other specialty within a limited territory, will naturally be looked upon with gladness or disapproval according as one's own interests lie on one side or the other. It is a pertinent question always, how far down prices may go before the producer is doing business at a loss and by the time the big specialist with his advantages has reached this point the plight of the small operator can be easily imagined. Lack of facilities for quick and elastic distribution over a wide territory is the great drawback to unlimited extension of specialty production of perishable goods. Until this handicap has been removed or modified, danger signals will be no curiosity.

The summer outlook

DEDICATION OF THE NATIONAL ROSE TEST GARDEN

With appropriate speeches and un-mindful of adverse weather conditions the members of the American Rose Society last week officially brought into being the National Rose Garden at Arlington, Va. The presentation exercises took place in the rooms of the American Institute of Banking, it having been found impossible to hold the meeting at the garden as originally planned.

The out of town members arrived in Washington early in the morning and were met at the Union Station by a delegation of Washingtonians who conducted them to the hall. At a preliminary meeting the work of the day was mapped out and after a luncheon the trip to Arlington was made in automobiles. Here they were taken in charge by Prof. F. L. Mulford, and despite the pouring rain nearly an hour was spent walking around the beds and examining the roses. Returning to the hall, a brief welcome was given by William F. Gude, W. R. Pierson outlined the work of the society with respect to the experimental gardens and thanked the members for the support given him as president, and Hon. Louis Brownlow, member of the Board of District Commissioners delivered the official welcome of the City of Washington, stating that the Commissioners ever stood ready to lend a helping hand in endeavors to make more and finer gardens. Robert Pyle presided at the exercises.

In presenting the roses to the government, President Pierson said "We believe that the rose is a home builder, that it tends to the upbuilding of moral character, to the enlightenment of mankind, and we hope that the work of the society will tend to better mankind."

The roses were accepted by Dr. William A. Taylor, Chief of the Bureau of Plant Industry, representing the Secretary of Agriculture who was unable to be present at the exercises. He spoke of the stabilizing influences exerted by flowers on farmers and declared that the roses will have a good effect in keeping the tillers of the soil anchored to their farms. Heretofore, the Department of Agriculture has devoted its entire efforts to matters of food and raiment but had some time since become aware of the fact that something further was required and it is devoting a part of these efforts to flowers.

Prof. Mulford explained the features that the Department is trying to develop and described in detail the arrangement of the beds. The entrance is to be covered with a light framework which will be covered with roses, and other embellishments are in mind. Prof. Mulford appealed to the members to provide additional roses. Common as well as rare varieties are desired.

Prof. L. C. Corbett told of the development of the experimental farm under his supervision, from a "mule graveyard" of civil war times, to its present stage of development. Dr. David Fairchild, told of the department's activities abroad and described a number of new roses to be imported from northern and western China for planting in the garden at Arlington. He spoke particularly of the Chinese Rose Xanthina, a perfectly hardy light yellow rose, which has been subjected to a temperature of 20 degrees below zero without being harmed at all, while our hardiest roses would be cut to the ground. Another very early yellow rose, perhaps the earliest of roses, which has been submitted here is the Rosa Hugonis, a representative of western China. "These two roses," he said, "have fired my imagination more than anything else that I have had anything to do with. It seems to me that when we get the Chinese roses of the different varieties, extremely hardy, very floriferous, perfectly adapted to our climate, we are going to open up a new era in the rose culture of the world." Secretary Benjamin Hammond urged the cooperation of all in making the rose garden the greatest in the world. In his opinion the rose garden will eventually serve to draw people from all parts of the country to Washington to view the handsome roses.

Others who spoke were Dr. A. Patten, Dr. Walter Van Fleet, George Field, and Peter Bisset. The dedicatory address was made by William F. Gude who spoke of the good effect of flowers upon the betterment of mankind. In conclusion he said, "Let us dedicate this garden today, the garden of the American Rose Society, to the greatest good, for the greatest number, a garden whose inspiration shall be such that the motto 'a rose for every home, a bush for every garden' shall become a fact indeed."

The meeting was adjourned at four o'clock in order to give the members an opportunity of accepting an invitation of Mrs. Charles J. Bell to visit "Twin Oaks," the former home of the late Mrs. Gardiner Hubbard, donor of the Hubbard rose medals. The party was received by Mrs. Bell who personally conducted the florists, with Peter Bisset and G. E. Anderson, on a tour of the gardens on the estate. Particular interest was manifested with respect to the climbing rose "Mrs. Alexander Graham Bell," a pink seedling produced on the place by Mr. Bisset, and which has never been disseminated.

Those who participated in the exercises were: President Wallace R. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn.; Secretary Benjamin Hammond, Beacon, N. Y.; William F. and Adolphus Gude, Commissioner Louis Brownlow, Secretary Thomas Grant, of the Washington Chamber of Commerce, and President George H. Cooke, of the local Florists' Club, all of Washington, D. C.; and S. S. Pennock, Charles E. Meehan, E. J. Fancourt, George C. Watson, George D. EXHIBITION AT NEW YORK.

The annual exhibition of the New York Horticultural Society was held at the Hotel Statler, New York, on Saturday and Sunday, June 5th and 6th. The exhibition was a most successful one, and attracted a large number of visitors. The display was divided into two main sections, indoor and outdoor. The indoor section was held in the Hotel Statler, and the outdoor section was held in the grounds of the hotel. The indoor section was a most impressive display, and included many fine specimens of shrub and tree bloom and foliage. The outdoor section was also very attractive, and included many fine specimens of shrub and tree bloom and foliage. The exhibition was a most successful one, and attracted a large number of visitors. The display was divided into two main sections, indoor and outdoor. The indoor section was held in the Hotel Statler, and the outdoor section was held in the grounds of the hotel. The indoor section was a most impressive display, and included many fine specimens of shrub and tree bloom and foliage. The outdoor section was also very attractive, and included many fine specimens of shrub and tree bloom and foliage.

CLEVELAND FLOWER SHOW.

The early indications that The Cleveland Flower Show will be a big one are very favorable and the outlook is becoming better each week," says George Bate, of The Cleveland Cut Flower Co., chairman of the publicity committee of the Sixth City Show. Plans are beginning to be formed that will result in special trains to start from Boston, New York and Philadelphia to carry eastern growers and dealers to Cleveland for this November show. The details of this movement will be announced in the very near future.

It is interesting to learn that the exposition building in Cleveland, known as the Coliseum, is one of the largest halls for commercial displays in the United States. It contains over 65,000 square feet all on one floor. The location of it is within a block and a half of the Hotel Statler and is in the heart of the retail shopping district. This assures a very large attendance of the Cleveland public.

LANSDOWNE FLOWER SHOW.

Samuel S. Pennock won the premier honor at the Lansdowne Flower Show last Saturday—the Amercian Rose Society's silver medal for the best twelve. The event was a great success—crowded both afternoon and evening and had a splendid lot of exhibits. The rose, the peony, the iris, were the leading features. There was also a good showing of other seasonable hardy flowers, such as larkspurs, foxgloves, campanulas, pinks, poppies, pyrethrums, pansies, etc. The aristocratic cattleya and other orchids also had a showing and the children were encouraged with prizes for wild flowers. There was also a section for vegetables and fruits. In fact it was a good all-round show—educative, refining and entertaining to the community and reflected credit on its sponsors, the Lansdowne Natural History Club. The judges were William MacRae Thompson, Caspar Pennock and Alphonse Pericat.

AMERICAN SWEET PEA SOCIETY.

Assistant Secretary F. G. Cuthbertson has informed us that owing to the unexpected warm weather of the past week all sweet peas have come rapidly into bloom and consequently it became necessary to change the date of the great Sweet Pea Exhibition in San Francisco to Friday, June 11. All prizes and entries are to be made as originally planned.

BOSTON JUNE EXHIBITION.

The June Show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society was held at Horticultural Hall, Boston, on Saturday and Sunday, June 5th and 6th. Rhododendrons, usually a prominent feature of this annual show, were distinctly in the minority owing to backward blooming, but the irises, campanulas and orchids were superb and with the wealth of seasonable herbaceous and shrub flowers made a most imposing display. A silver medal was awarded to Walter Hunnewell for display of rhododendrons. Certificates of merit to Mrs. Lester Leland, for zonal geranium (Lady Roscoe X May Pelton) and Miss Grace Sturtevant for hybrid irises. Cultural certificate to H. Stewart for Cattleya citrina.

NEW YORK FLORISTS' CLUB.

The next regular meeting of the New York Florists' Club will be held in the Grand Opera House Building, Eighth avenue and Twenty-third street, on Monday, June 14, at 7.30 P. M. This will be the last regular meeting until September. Chairman Max Schling of the Exhibition Committee requests that a creditable display of seasonable plants and cut flowers be made. Farr, president of the American Peony Society, will be present and will talk to the members of the Club on the work of the Peony Society and give some ideas on peonies and iris as florists' flowers.

The Flower Show Committee will recommend at this meeting that the profits from the last two flower shows be set aside as a special Flower Show Fund. Action will be taken on this important question at this time. Charles H. Totty, who has just returned after a month's visit to the Panama-Pacific Exposition, will speak of the exposition and the many attractions of California.

A meeting of the Board of Trustees will be held at the Secretary's office, Monday at 3.30 P. M., for the purpose of auditing the books and accounts of the Secretary and Treasurer. Any member has the privilege of being present. The House Committee will provide light refreshments as usual.

There will be an intermission of two months during July and August and on re-opening in September our meeting night falling on Labor Day, we shall hold same the following day at the home of Jos. A. Manda, West Orange, N. J. The feature of the evening was a plant of the new lavender-mauve Swainsona Mrs. Joseph A. Manda. It is a striking color and quite distinct from the other varieties. Joseph A. Manda, the exhibitor, received a first-class certificate and he offered a prize of $10.00 for the best plant exhibited next year.

The annual rose show of the above society at Horticultural Hall, Philadelphia, was unexpectedly good and drew excellent crowds. The finest feature of it was the splendid exhibit from George C. Thomas. He staged one hundred and eighty varieties of teas. This alone was worth going a long way to see. Brown, gard. Jos. Goetter; Geo. C. Thomas; Geo. H. McFadden, gard. David Aiken.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

The Cincinnati Florists' Society's next meeting will be held on Monday evening, June 14.

At a meeting of the New Bedford (Mass.) Horticultural Society, held in the Public Library on the evening of June 7th, June 17th was decided upon as the date for the Peony Exhibition, subject to change if the peonies are not sufficiently advanced by that time.

The annual June exhibition of roses, sweet peas, strawberries, hardy flowers etc., by the Tarrytown Horticultural Society will be held at the Gymnasium Y. M. C. A. Building, Main Street, Tarrytown, N. Y., on Wednesday afternoon and evening, June 16th, 1915, from 2 until 10 P. M. Admission free. There are 29 classes in this prize schedule.

An unusual opportunity to see berries and market garden crops grown at their best under irrigation, was offered at the meeting of the New Jersey State Horticultural Society, Wednesday, June 9, at the noted Seabrook Farms, near Bridgeton, N. J. Several addresses were made by prominent men and substantial luncheon was served. The Secretary is H. G. Taylor, Riverton, N. J.

The Standard Horticultural Association held its regular annual well attended meeting at the Hotel Hugo Grand, New York, June 11-14. The first meeting of the afternoon, at 2 P. M., was devoted to the Florists' Association. The afternoon session was devoted to the exchange of views on the subject of the standardization of the horticultural products. The association was very successful in its efforts to secure cooperation from the association. A resolution was passed on the awarding of medals to exhibitors and a motion picture passed in a most pleasant afternoon.

The North Shore Horticultural Society held its regular meeting in Manchester, Mass., June 4. A large number of members and visitors listened to an informal, but very interesting address by James Sater of Danvers on the usefulness of horticultural societies and exhibitions. He advocated more sociability and recreation at all society meetings. A committee was appointed to make arrangements to hold a clam bake in July. Ernest Townsend was awarded a certificate of merit for a collection of trusses of greenhouse-grown tomatoes. Some very handsome checks were received from several of the wealthy families of the North Shore colony for prizes for the August show.

The schedule of premiums offered by the Rhode Island Horticultural Society for the year 1915 has been received. Exhibitions will be held in the ball room of the Narragansett Hotel, Providence, on Wednesday, June 16, Thursday and Friday, September 16 and 17, Thursday and Friday, November 11 and 12.

The schedule has some unique features, one particularly commendable innovation being several pages of instructive advice to exhibitors on methods of attractively staging flowers, plants, fruit and vegetables, with a number of pertinent illustrations. Every intending exhibitor at any show will find this very interesting reading. Copies may be had on application to Secretary E. K. Thomas, Kingston, R. I.

The exhibition committee consists of Eugene A. Appleton, chairman, Providence; Joshua Vose, Pontiac; Arthur Sellow, Providence; Cornelius Hartstra, Providence; Dr. H. W. Heatson, Providence; the president, ex-officio; and the secretary, ex-officio.

Officers are as follows: Dr. H. H. York, president, Providence; Harold L. Madison, treasurer, 27 Whitney street, Providence; Ernest K. Thomas, secretary, P. O. Box 180, Kingston, R. I.

GROWING ROSES UNDER GLASS.

(A paper by Robert Beechwood, gardener for Mrs. S. W. Allerton, Lake Geneva, Wis.)

A rich clay soil taken from an old pasture without clover seems to suit most roses. In the early fall plow the sod as thin as possible and put in a pile with layers of 12 in. sod and 6 in. fresh cow manure and this will be ready for using when required the following spring or summer. Whether to grow roses grafted or on their own roots is a big question and I think for the private gardener for most varieties own-root stock is to be preferred. The best time to root cuttings is January and February. For the propagating bench use 3 inches of good sharp sand, free from soil, over 1 inch of rough ashes. The temperature should be 55 degrees to 58 degrees with 10 degrees more bottom heat. Use three-eye cutting, one in the sand and two above, from flowering wood firm but not hard. Pot as soon as rooted into good fibrous soil without fertilizer and shade from the sun for a few days. If potted again before benching, soil as used for the benches can be used. For summer blooming, March planting is best and for winter, May and June. Use benches 5 inches deep with bottom boards 4 to 6 inches wide and at least $\frac{1}{2}$ inch apart. Soil should be chopped but not too finely and to each yard of soil used, add about 25 lbs. bone meal, a pail each of fresh slaked lime and hardwood ashes. Fill the benches firm to 4 inches, putting the rougher soil on bottom. Plant firmly 15 inches apart each way and water each plant immediately. For the first four weeks only, the plants will need water and the rest of the bench should be kept moist by syringing but after that the entire bench may be watered. On sunny days, plants should be syringed in the morning and on very hot days, again in the afternoon, but never syringe or spill water in the house after 2.00 P. M. Healthy plants require lots of water and when growing should never be allowed to dry out. Water till the bench is wet to the bottom and dripping through but not running through. Carnations are benefited by an occasional drying but not roses. Some varieties require a higher temperature than others but about 58 degrees to 60 degrees at night with 10 degrees to 15 degrees rise during the day suits most varieties. When the sun heat raises the temperature to 65 degrees it is time to put on a crack of air which should be added to gradually to keep below 75 degrees when possible and taken off gradually to lower temperature steadily to 65 degrees by early evening. From spring till fall, a little air over night is helpful even if we have to fire to keep up temperature. Plants should be staked when planted and tied early to withstand hard syringing.

After planting our aim is to get a good sized bush, so for the first three or four months, buds are cut when they are the size of large peas to leave three to six eyes and the stronger the growth the more eyes can be left till we have a bush about 15 inches high and then we can start cutting roses back to two or three eyes, but to get good roses you must have a good-sized plant and it is better to sacrifice a few flowers once in a while to help build the plants. About four months after planting they should need some top dressing which should be about three parts cow manure and one part soil with some bone meal added. This top dressing can be repeated every two months till spring when liquid cow or sheep manure get quicker results. Let the strength of the plants be your guide in feeding and the stronger the plants the more feeding they will stand. Under no circumstances should roses be fed when dry. If they require water, water them first, then feed them. A sprinkling of slaked lime and wood ashes is very good to keep the soil sweet and should be given about every six or eight weeks. The high grade fertilizers are not to be recommended. The houses should be fumigated every ten days for aphids. For red spider syringing is the most effective and this should be done thoroughly with a good hard spray on the under side of the foliage.

Of the diseases we have, mildew and black spot are the most troublesome. Luckily black spot is nearly confined to American Beauty. Both diseases have about the same causes, among which are draughts, sudden changes of temperature, stuffy atmosphere and dampness. Prevention is better than cure, but even the best rose growers seem to have some trouble with diseases. Whenever black spot is seen, remove all the infected leaves at once and burn them and then spray the plants with a mixture at the rate of 5 ounces carbonate of copper, 3 quarts of ammonia to 60 gallons water. Some of the many fungicides will help, but find out if they discolor white paint before using, or you may find your otherwise white paint turned brown. For mildew, sulphur is the best remedy and may be used in many different ways. An easy and effective way is to dust it on the plants. If the day is sunny, close the ventilators and let the temperature rise to 85 degrees, then blow sulphur in the air and on the plants and keep the house closed for an hour, then give air gradually. When we are using fire heat, sulphur mixed with water is put on the hot water pipes. In fall, before we start hard firing, in my opinion, is the most critical time for the rose grower, as the plants seem to want a natural rest. A few degrees more heat at this time will help to keep them going. This is our worst time for mildew and a good way to fight it is on a dull day to close the ventilators and keep sulphur melted in frying pans by oil lamp stoves. They must however be watched very carefully and unless thoroughly understood should not be attempted, as if the sulphur ever burns to the bottom of the pans, your foliage will all drop the next day. Plants may be kept over for a second or even a third year by giving them a rest. For winter flowering, rest in June and July. Open all ventilators and doors, syringe and water only enough to keep the wood from shrivelling and keep this up for four or six weeks. Now prune out all blind wood and prune back the rest to 18 to 21 inches if they are to be laid down and 12 to 15 inches if to be left standing. Fork over the top soil very lightly with a hand fork and apply a top dressing of half good soil, half cow manure, some bone meal and a sprinkling of fresh slaked lime and you are ready for running again. For summer blooming, rest in winter, keeping the temperature just above freezing. Start at 10 degrees about the 1st of March and gradually rise to regular temperature and otherwise treat same as for winter blooming.

In conclusion, I will say treat your roses as you treat yourself. You don't want to sit in a draught; if you are thirsty, you don't want to wait till tomorrow before quenching your thirst. If you are hungry, you want food and you want the food that suits your digestion. When sick, you want special attention till you are well again. The same rules apply to your roses.

He has no known relatives in this country and, in feeble health for the past year, has been cared for by his employer.

Charles F. Krueger.

Mr. Krueger, who passed away on the 4th inst., was a well known figure in the florist trade of Philadelphia. He conducted the flower stand at the Reading Terminal Station for many years. Previous to this he was in the greenhouse business at Narberth. He was a member of the Florists' Club and many other societies. He was a cheerful and happy man up to about twelve years ago when an unfortunate family tragedy cast a gloom over his life. This no doubt contributed to his early demise—41 years of age. Interment took place at Fernwood Cemetery on June 7th, and was attended by many of the leading figures in the trade.

Henry J. Weber.

Henry J. Weber, 74 years old, founder of the H. J. Weber & Sons Nursery Company at Nursery, Mo. died on June 3, following an illness of more than a year. He was one of the pioneer residents of St. Louis County, having lived at Nursery since his birth. Five years ago he retired from business and turned over the nursery to his sons. He is survived by his widow and six children.

Mr. Weber was an honorary member of the St. Louis Florist Club whose members spent several pleasant afternoons as his guests during the summer months. At the funeral, Saturday, June 5, many fine floral emblems were seen, one being from The St. Louis Florist Club.

TEXAS HAIL STORM.

Waco Florists Lose Heavily from Hail.

The heavy hail storm which visited Waco, on Wednesday night, May 26th, did very heavy damage to two of Waco's florists' establishments and some damage to a third. Tom Wolfe reports that about 7,000 feet of his glass was broken. He has about 45,000 square feet of glass in his greenhouses and the glass broken was pretty well distributed over his entire set of houses. There was not so very much damage to indoor plants as most of the pot stock had been removed; carnations were nearing the end of the season's blooming and he had recently cut his rose stock back. His out-door plants suffered very heavily. He had a fine lot of gladiolus in the field and they were cut to pieces. Insurance was carried on these houses. Repairs will be made as soon as the material can be had and the work done.

The Waco Floral Company, which is managed by T. W. Reed, reports that their loss of glass was practically total. Out of 25,000 square feet of glass they saved only 690 panes. About 50 per cent of pot plants in-doors were destroyed. All out-door plants were almost destroyed outright. Their damage is estimated to be at least $3,000. No insurance was carried. New glass has been ordered and the houses will be repaired promptly.

The Mohan Floral Company suffered only slightly compared with the others. Their damage is reported to amount to about $150.

There were two of these hail storms, which visited Waco the same night. The Wolfe houses were not very badly damaged in the first, which came about 8 p. m. He thought he had escaped, but at about 1 o'clock a. m., of the same night, another very severe storm set in and resulted in the very heavy damage to his range of glass.

ROSE ARCHES AT TWIN OAKS.

(See Cover Illustration.)

As related in our notes from Washington, the members of the American Rose Society who attended the exercises attendant upon the dedication of the Rose Test Gardens at Arlington, Va., enjoyed a treat in the visit to the beautiful Hubbard estate "Twin Oaks," not the least factor of which was the lovely scene which serves as our cover illustration this week. The arch in the foreground is covered with American Pillar, the next Dundee Rambler, next Lady Gay, then Carmine Pillar, Tausendschoen, Gardenia, Leichstern, Silver Moon, Reine Andree, and other, the arches forming a continuous arbor extending from the residence to the greenhouses. The rose garden here is well stocked with all the best tea and hybrid tea roses.

HORTICULTURE INDISPENSABLE

The following examples of many approving letters received at the office of HORTICULTURE during the past few weeks, show why HORTICULTURE is so valuable as an advertising medium. Intensive circulation is HORTICULTURE'S best quality and practically every reader is a possible customer for the advertiser.

Gentlemen:—Last week's HORTICULTURE is not received. Have you scratched me off your list, or what is the matter? Appreciate your paper more than any of half a dozen I am receiving, and don't want to miss any copies. Will you please investigate?

Yours truly,
Missouri. A. B. K.

Gentlemen:—It is getting late in the season and we wish to discontinue the advertisements which we carry in your paper. We would say that the advertisements which we have carried in your paper have brought us good results, and we feel that the money so expended was well invested.

Kindly discontinue my advertisement in the classified ad. section of HORTICULTURE, rendering bill to date.

SEED TRADE

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION

Officers—President, Lester L. Morse, San Francisco, Calif.; First Vice-President, J. M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I.; Second Vice-President, L. C. Dungan, Philadelphia, Pa.; Secretary and Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.; Assistant Secretary, S. T. Willard, Jr., Cleveland, O.

On to San Francisco

By the time this issue of HORTICULTURE is in the hands of our readers, the "Seedsmen's Special" via the Santa Fe R. R. will be on its way to the Pacific Coast. We trust that all who make the trip may enjoy every moment of the time. A number are planning to do the Yellowstone on their return journey, and to those who have not seen the marvelous wonders of this region, it will be a treat they will never forget.

Crop Outlook and Estimates.

We have been endeavoring to secure some reliable crop data, as it is the time of the year when crop news is of special interest to the trade, and believe we can give a substantially accurate report of conditions to date. Owing to the very unfavorable weather of last summer, coupled with the demoralization caused by the war in Europe, neither France, England, Holland nor Denmark raised a sufficient number of plants for their biennial seed crops to produce the desired quantities in 1915. This shortage of plants was further increased by a very unfavorable winter, and from present indications such items as beets, cabbage, carrots, mangels, turnips and swedes will be in decidedly short supply next autumn, and prices will undoubtedly rule much higher than a year ago. As to annuals, it is difficult to estimate what the crops of these will be, but we would judge that they would be more abundant than the biennials. In estimating seed crops we must not overlook the fact that a considerable quantity of beets and carrots will be produced in this country the coming season, which will very materially help the shortage from the other side. This will also apply to certain annuals, such radish, egg plant and peppers.

California seed crops are reported as promising excellent results with the exception of salisfy, which will undoubtedly be short. It is as yet too early to say much about peas, beans and corn, but we are confident they have reached us generally agree that the prospects for the coming season are not that baring extremely hot weather during the next two or three weeks, the yield both of seed and of green crops for seed purposes will be large, although the acreage has been considerably reduced from that of last year. This applies to peas planted for seed purposes, as well as for canning. The weather just now is very favorable for the planting of beans, and we understand that most beans planted for seed purposes are already in the ground. The frost which occurred some two weeks ago, while it did very serious damage to tender vegetables, and small fruits including grapes, was not quite as disastrous as early reports indicated. Considerable replanting has been necessary by truck farmers, but neither the large canning companies nor the seed growers had planted any considerable percentage of their beans, and of course they escaped all damage.

It must be remembered in connection with these crop reports that it is a considerable time until harvest, and that many vicissitudes may overtake the growing crops in the mean time, but the very favorable conditions at this date will be gratefully appreciated by the trade.

Notes.

Fargo, N. D.—The firm of Landblom & Vincent have dissolved partnership and the business will hereafter be conducted as the H. L. Landblom Seed Co.

Retail trade has largely ended for this season. There is still some business doing in plants and ensilage seeds, but for all practical purposes the season may be said to have ended.

The value of agricultural imports at the port of New York for the week ending May 29, is given as follows: fertilizer, $402; clover seed, $9312; grass seed, $8701; trees and plants, $4895.

In a recent issue of HORTICULTURE a correspondent stated that the forthcoming convention of the American Seed Trade Association in San Francisco will be the first time that the Association has held its convention west of Chicago. We have to apologize for this mistake, as we recall two occasions when the convention was held west of the "Windy City," at Minneapolis in 1892 and at St. Louis in 1904.

The seed business conducted for the past 25 years as a partnership under the firm name of H. G. Hastings & Co., Atlanta, Ga., has been changed to corporate form. The new corporation has taken over the entire business, dating from June 1, 1915, and will operate under the corporate name of H. G. Hastings Co. This change to corporate form does not carry with it any change in personnel, management or policies of the business. The officers are as follows: H. G. Hastings, president; H. W. Brown, vice-president; R. F. Lyon, secretary; W. F. Wotten, treasurer. Directors will be in addition to list of officers as follows: W. R. Hastings, and W. W. Freeborn.

AN INSTITUTION AND ITS ETHICS.

Advertising men can speak more boldly than they once could about the ethics of their calling. When a profession has put its ideals into a code, it has removed the mark of experiment from its name and taken its place among accepted institutions. Medicine and the law have built up their codes by years of strict adherence to the principles of their ablest exponents. Now comes advertising with its own particular code.

Even one not familiar with the intricate mechanism of modern publicity appreciates its enormous growth in recent years. He need not be engaged in business to realize its influence. Skilled writers introduce their taking phrases into the vocabulary of his household. Wherever he turns he encounters the subtle influence of the advertising man. One morning he opens his paper to find his church is advertising its Sunday services.

If he seeks the reason for the growing dependence of readers of the printed page upon what appears in advertising type, he will learn that many publishers guarantee their readers against dishonest advertisers, that many states have enacted laws covering this matter, that first-class publications refuse objectionable and misleading copy, that advertising has its persona non grata class. He learns that these restrictions are self-imposed; that the movement for the elimination of dishonest advertising had its start within the advertising fraternity.

As proof of the standing this latest profession has attained, he learns that the president of the United States has accepted an invitation to appear before a large gathering of advertising men in Chicago to address them on honesty in business, that Cabinet members will attend, that the Governor of Illinois indorses this work and that the Mayor of Chicago has officially recognized this gathering by proclaiming "Advertising Week." Advertising has gained dignity; men of affairs recognize its power and call it to their aid.

CHICAGO.

The thermometers at Frank Oechlin's registered 96 degrees on last Sunday.

A car load of palms has just been received from Belgium by Poehlmann Bros.

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Washburn will leave for California, July 4, to visit relatives. They will remain till after the convention.

Helen Massey Rudd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Rudd, and Roy Mortimer Arnold were married at Blue Island, Ill., on Saturday, June 5.

J. A. Budlong has anticipated the call for lily of the valley and the June brides will have as fine a supply of their favorite flower this year as ever.

The big loop buildings are fast getting summer frills on, in the shape of very tasty window boxes. Last year Chicago led all the large cities in the miles of window boxes in its business district.

Everett Peacock who now has a flower store at 4013 Milwaukee Ave., will open another on June 12, at 4456 N. Western Ave. to be known as The Sunnyside store. Mr. Everett does a great deal of landscape gardening in connection with his work as a florist.

At the election June 7, the voters of Chicago approved of the issuance of one million dollars in bonds by the West Park system for the creation of a 54 acre park between Harrison and Adams Sts. west of Central Park Ave. Small parks on the west side will also show in the appropriations.

Some good advice is being received by Chicago florists this week. It comes from a leading pottery firm and is so good we give it in full, with an addition of two words, "Early to bed, early to rise; Cut the weeds and swat the flies; Mind your business and don't tell lies; Pay your debts; use enterprise; and buy from those who advertise" in Horticulture.

Ophelia rose has some warm champions in this vicinity. C. L. Washburn has expressed himself as perfectly satisfied with it so far. Since September he has been cutting steadily and his customers are very much pleased with the color and keeping qualities of Ophelia. Phil Schupp says they have been more than pleased with the four of this rose this year and feels sure it is going to be a permanent commercial variety.

A. Miller of the A. Henderson Co., has lately returned from a business trip to Texas and other southern states. In the Lone Star state he found the season about over, summer heat prevailing there. This firm is now busy filling their orders for poinsettias and cyclamen, the latter growing more popular each year with growers. This is especially noticeable since the great improvement in varieties offered.

Outdoor work, from that of the simplest bedding to that of the highest product of the "landscape engineer" is far behind the date fixed by custom for completing the spring work. After nearly a month of rain the few days of warmth and sunshine were quickly followed by a drop in temperature. With 96 degrees in the shade on Sunday every one was out of doors and the result was that a new batch of orders was added to the long list of unfilled ones already waiting. That the temperature dropped again to almost winter was a blessing to those who have the waiting beds to fill for our short summers make owners impatient of delay.

BOSTON.

E. Allan Peirce is home from the Rose Garden celebration at Washington, very enthusiastic over the event and the courtesies enjoyed.

Miss Lillian A. Calder, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus P. Calder of Brookline, Mass., was married on Wednesday evening, June 9, at the home of her parents, to William E. Kelly. The bride was given in marriage by her father. After the wedding journey the couple will reside in Jones road, Beachmont.

NEW YORK.

Frank R. Pierson, home from the Galvin banquet in Boston, declares it to have been the finest he ever attended.

Walter Gott, representing Sander & Sons, St. Albans, Eng., sails for home on the St. Louis of the American Line on Saturday, June 19.

Jos. A. Burdeau, attorney, 233 Broadway, is adjusting the affairs of O. V. Zangen, formerly of Hoboken, N. J., now in Florida, on a compromise basis with his creditors.

The rooms of the New York Flower Mission, 104 East 20th street, will be open every Monday and Thursday during the summer for the reception of flowers, fruits, and delicacies for sick poor in the hospitals and tenement houses. Boxes will be brought free of charge from all places within one hundred miles by the express companies. The mission also appeals for the assistance of women in making bouquets and distributing them in the hospitals.

The Brooklyn Botanic Garden has been opened to the public, and will remain open, free of charge, daily hereafter. The grounds have been closed to the public for over a year on account of regrading and the construction of new walks. Among the items of interest are a native wild-flower garden containing about one thousand different kinds of plants that grow wild within a radius of one hundred miles of the city, and a Japanese garden, said to be one of the most perfect of its kind in the United States, and the best example of one in a public park east of the Rocky Mountains.

H. BAYERSDORFER & CO., 1129 Arch Street, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

far west visiting the leading retail florists and both Expositions. One of the delightful side stops en route was with John Bader, formerly president of the John Bader Company, and Mrs. Bader, now retired from business and living at Cottage Grove, Oregon.

At the Wagner-Shields wedding, at Leetsdale, Mrs. Williams used Killarney roses and snapdragon for the house decorations and the latter flowers with sweet peas caught with silver ribbon formed the bouquet of the attendant maids, while the bride carried lilies of the valley and white roses. Wicker baskets of sweetheart roses were carried by the little flower girl.

Mrs. E. A. Williams has an exceptionally striking show window this week—tall white wicker pedestals surmounted with baskets filled with pandanus and white dalias, each plant and cluster being tied with large bows of broad black and white striped ribbon, which also is festooned from place to place. Below is a mass of maiden-hair ferns, a dash of color appearing at one side in some gorgeous gloxinias.

At a wedding by Randolph & McClements the bride carried lilies of the valley showered with tulle, and her maids Dorothy Perkins roses with ribbon and maline. Spring flowers formed the decorations throughout the house, the bridal table in the billiard room having a centerpiece of pink hydrangeas caught with white maline. The porch was enclosed with a trellis covered with southern smilax and ramblar roses.

McCreery & Co., the leading department store in town, has added a section for cut flowers. A large representative grocery in the East End is also disposing of cut blooms. While the retail trade is rather low this week, conditions in general continue about the same. The glorious sun and a very little rain during the past week has made flowers in plenty. The planting season, which was interrupted by several weeks of cold and rainy weather, resumed again with renewed vigor, to continue through this month of June. The frost of a fortnight since has proved another blessing for the plantsman, most of the work done prior to that time having to be redone now. Window box work has never been so profitable.

SAN FRANCISCO.

J. A. Wood has moved his florist shop to new quarters in Woodland, Cal.

The Art Floral Co., on Powell street, is featuring a fine showing of lilies this week.

The United Flower & Supply Co. is installing a cold storage plant in the rear of its shipping station on Bush street.

Picetti & Lavazollo have succeeded the firm of Valmeni & Lavazollo as proprietors of the florist shop at 1457 Haight street.

The Jordan Park Floral Co., at 323 Clement street, has changed hands, F. E. Stratton taking over the business from G. H. Evans.

The flowers at the Exposition continue to attract much attention. The dahlias are coming out in fine shape, and larkspur, phlox, foxgloves and Canterbury bells appear in great quantity. The roses and sweet peas make a splendid showing.

An idea of the significance of convention life in the Exposition City is afforded by the fact that 65 conventions were scheduled for May, 31 for June, 133 for July and 249 for August. Each one means considerable extra business for the florists.

D. MacRorie, chairman of the executive committee of the S. A. F. Convention, met the chairman of the sub-committees, H. Plath, John McLaren, W. A. Hofinghoff, J. R. Fotheringham, A. J. Rossi, J. W. Gregg, V. Podesta and

F. J. Bertrand at a special meeting a few days ago, at which time various matters of mutual interest were discussed.

WASHINGTON.

Alfred E. and Sheldon A. Robinson, Luther A. Breck and C. H. Brackett used a large touring car in coming to Washington from their homes in Boston to attend the meeting of the American Rose Society.

Prof. F. L. Mulford, landscape gardener of the Department of Agriculture, has gone to central west and coast points for the purpose of making a study of ornamental plants, trees and shrubs suitable for shade purposes.

J. E. W. Tracy, assistant superintendent of testing gardens, has left for the west to inspect the contract fields in Ohio, Illinois, Kansas, Colorado, and California from which are obtained the vegetable and flower seeds used for Congressional distribution.

George H. Cooke created a very attractive decoration incident to the reception tendered by Governor Stuart, of Virginia, to visiting governors at Richmond, Va. The table decorations were made of Shawyer roses, white clematis and larkspur, the pink, white and blue combination being exceptionally pleasing. The mantlepiece was banked with American Beauty roses and in the other rooms, in addition to some of the flowers named, quantities of white peonies, cornflower and America gladioli were used.

Cincinnati—Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Olinger at their new home in Bellevue, Ky., are entertaining Mr. Olinger's father, John Olinger, and his brother-in-law, Lou Engelbracht, of Aurora, Ill.

Victor Morgan, representing Lord & Burnham Co., obtained for his firm the contract for the new O. B. Murphy house.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON A rather slow market is the story "in a nutshell" this week. Roses and carnations are the worst sufferers from this condition, carnations especially. Lily of the valley is the one exception. Yellow daisies are doing pretty well, however. Peonies, which have been quite plentiful have shortened up and a better price for the time being is the result. Local peonies have not yet opened up. Stocks, astilbe and similar material do well if they sell at any price, and snap dragons are not much better. Spanish iris after having made an excellent record, are about finished. Gladioli of the Blushing Bride type are almost unsalable but America and Augusta bring good prices.

The demand for flowers CHICAGO did not stop suddenly following Memorial Day as so often happens, but orders continued to come in all the week. Local trade was not up to shipping trade, however, and an accumulation of stock would have followed had outside demand ceased to any great degree. Up to the end of the week, the bulk of all kinds of stock sold at good prices, with the exception of long stemmed American Beauties, which do not move quickly even at a low price. They can be bought at the price of medium lengths at some of the largest houses, but even at that, sales lag. The second week in June opens with a cold rain, preceded by a Sunday of mid-summer weather which had brought out a large amount of stock. Monday the cut made on Sunday could not be disposed of and Tuesday stock was accumulating. Carnations are most in excess of demand and large lots can be moved only at a low figure. Peonies are being cut now by local growers. The frost that came while the buds were forming is now showing effect in some localities. All kinds of roses are to be had in almost any quantity.

Business is rather CINCINNATI slow. The larger part of the commencement season was over at the end of last week, leaving only a few minor ones for this week. The demand for weddings while fair is not overly brisk. The supplies in most all lines are more than sufficient for requirements. Rose receipts contain many excellent blooms of the newer varieties. Gladioli generally have a pretty fair market. Lilies are plentiful, some of the offerings in outdoor sweet peas are very fine. Lily of the valley and orchids are meeting with a pretty good call.

Local wholesale dealers NEW YORK forecast the worst week of the season this time. We hope the outcome will be quite the reverse but must acknowledge that the symptoms are not very encouraging. All kinds of stock are coming in very freely and there is really a very light demand for anything. Peonies have been lumbering up the counters almost after the fashion of the chrysanthemums in their season. But this will not last long and then the regular goods may get a hearing. Not much time left for them though. Cattleyas of great beauty are seen on all sides, with no takers. These regal flowers are no longer in the exclusive or specialty class. All wholesale dealers are receiving them in quantity. There are far too many sweet peas and lilies are a burden.

The continued PHILADELPHIA cool, cloudy weather of the past week or two has proved a boon to the flower trade here. This condition has not only had an excellent effect in holding over-supply in check but it has also had remarkable influence on the quality of nearly all stocks arriving at this season. Not for many years have we had such ideal conditions. Peonies, roses, carnations, and many other staple lines are all above the average quality for this time of year. Added to these favorable conditions there have been quite a number of large orders from distant points which helped to firm up the price situation all along the line. Sweet peas of the higher grades have sold well, but there is little call for medium stock and sales are hard to make even at ridiculous figures. Gardenias in fair supply and demand good. Lilies very plentiful and prices have materially receded for the time being. Callas almost done—a few stragglers. Snapdragon coming in sparingly and under standard as to quality. Rambler rose sprays are a strong feature—Tausendschoen from local points and Dorothy Perkins from Washington.

SAN FRANCISCO business was well up to expectations locally. Supplies were plentiful; both wholesale and retail stocks cleaned up closely and a gratifying feature is the fact that business for June is opening up nicely, graduation exercises, weddings and the large number of special affairs at the Exposition having created sufficient extra demand to offset the usual post-holiday dullness. The trade considers prospects better than usual for summer business on account of so many eastern visitors coming to the Exposition and many families who spend the vacation out of town ordinarily staying home this year. Stock is plentiful this week. Sweet peas are in ample supply; the quality is the best so far this season and the demand is excellent. Lavender is very popular and white and pink both have a good call. Graduation exercises are taking a good many carnations, white ones in particular. Dahlias are coming in more freely, and a larger variety of gladioli is appearing. Offerings of America are being readily absorbed and Panama is in good demand. There is little change in the rose situation, the demand being satisfactory and all kinds plentiful with the exception of long-stem American Beauties. The latter have been rather scarce for some time and large Exposition decorations the past week practically drained the market. Mrs. Aaron Ward is cleaning up nicely, and Sunburst, while not quite so popular, is in good demand also. Hadley has a good call and Ophelia seems to be replacing Taft to a considerable extent. Mrs. Chas. Russell cleans up each day, and Cecile Brunner continues in favor.

The local wholesale

ST. LOUIS market was in an overcrowded condition all of last week demand not being sufficient to consume half of the receipts. Prices on select stock are extremely low. Roses and carnations are hard to move. Lilies and sweet peas are still coming in heavy. Peonies, candidum lilies, cape jasmine, and other outdoor stock are in large abundance.

The present week

WASHINGTON opened up with the first real signs of warm weather and under its influence roses and carnations lost some of that quality which had previously brought for them a very ready sale. The cool and rainy days of the past five or six weeks have kept all flowers up to a good standard and in addition created a better demand for greenhouse stock because of the bad effect upon outdoor flowers. It is said that rambler roses are about two weeks late and the same delay is noticed with respect to other flowers. A heavy demand was noticed last week for all high-grade flowers, including American Beauty roses, cattleyas, lily of the valley, good carnations and peonies, brought about by the many festivities in local society circles, and seminary and school exercises, while the shipping business was very good. Orders were received from all parts of the south and from Richmond there came much business incident to the encampment in that city of the veterans of the confederate army. Fair prices prevailed and there was less waste last week than for some time.

SPENCER LUTHERTON BAIRD, A NATURAL HISTORY OF AMERICA
BY SPENCER LUTHERTON BAIRD
PUBLISHED BY THE NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC SOCIETY
WASHINGTON, D. C.

Natural History in America is most of all indebted to two remarkable men, Professor Louis Agassiz and Professor Spencer F. Baird. Their activities in a public sense in this country began about the same time, Agassiz, the enthusiastic inspiring teacher, and Baird, the efficient, hard working and lovable organizer, complemented each other. The one awakened the American spirit to the delights of the study of Nature; the other made it possible for anyone with the sacred fire to obtain the necessary guides and opportunities for research.

Many of our readers, no doubt, are acquainted with Professor Baird's eminence as a natural scientist and should be grateful to the author who has so conscientiously and with so much devotion compiled these memoirs and to the publishers who have sent them forth in such appropriate and dignified dress. The book is dedicated to the Memory of Miss Lucy Hunter Baird, who died in Philadelphia, June 19th, 1913.

The work is not a history of explorations nor a record of technical investigations promoted under Government auspices; but an account of the life and relation to them of a singularly eminent, able, efficient and modest devotee of the Natural Sciences. It contains not only letters from the most eminent American naturalists of the period, but from men who afterward became distinguished as military and naval leaders in the struggle for the preservation of the Union.

The chief aim of the biographer has been to show the man as he lived and worked; with glimpses of his relations to his contemporaries, to the promotion of science and to faithfully record his great and, as yet, hardly appreciated public services. Apart from the scientific side of the activities the work endeavors further to make the reader acquainted with the characteristics of a pure and lovable leader of men to whose modesty and self-sacrifice the country owes a debt which is still appreciated only by a select few.

The various chapters cover the following subjects:

Chapter I. Genealogical and Family Notes; II. Childhood and Youth; III. Life at Carlisle; IV. The Young Professor; V. The Smithsonian Institution; VI. Life in Washington; VII. 1850 to 1865; VIII. 1865 to 1878; IX. The Secretary, 1878 to 1887; X. The U. S. National Museum; XI. The U. S. Commissioner of Fish and Fisheries; XII. Appreciation; Index.

J. B. Lippincott Company of Philadelphia, Pa., are the publishers. The volume is 8vo., 452 pages with 19 illustrations. Buckram, gilt top, uncut $3.50 net. Carriage extra. The edition is printed from type and no more will be published.

Forest Park, Ill.—John T. Muir has been elected president of the Village Board. Mr. Muir is son of Samuel Muir, pioneer florist of Chicago.

NEWS NOTES.

New Bedford.—It is understood that H. V. Sowle contemplates building near his greenhouses, others, to an extent which will practically double the amount of glass he has at present. He also looks forward in the near future to establishing a flower store on Purchase street. He reports a great sale lately for hydrangeas.

Business since Memorial Day has been exceedingly good; bedding-out has occupied a great deal of the time. Geraniums are still in great demand and do not bloom fast enough to keep up with the call.

New Haven, Conn.—Thomas J. Mooney, proprietor of the greenhouses in Kinneytown and of floral stores in Ansonia and Derby, was very seriously injured in a jitney collision on the New Haven road last Saturday night. The jitney in which Mr. Mooney was riding was running at a high rate of speed and was unable to make the turn to avoid a jitney coming in the opposite direction and Mr. Mooney and another passenger were thrown out, Mr. Mooney being so seriously injured that he was taken to St. Raphael's hospital.

St. Catharines, Ont.—The Lord & Burnham Company, of Irvington-on-Hudson, N. Y., is about to commence operations in a new $100,000 plant located at St. Catharines, Ontario. This company will manufacture materials for greenhouses, the same line as it now produces in the United States. The new plant will have an annual output worth from $350,000 to $500,000. It is equipped with iron and wood-working machinery, and will give employment to carpenters, painters, glaziers, steam fitters and other mechanics. As an inducement for the company's location there, the City of St. Catharines has agreed to reimburse certain taxes for a specified term of years.

GREEN FLY TIME

is now here. Even the forest trees around our gardens are covered with this pest. What are you doing about it? Fighting the green fly for the past few years has been a continuous performance and an expensive one with the ordinary spraying devices.

A BARRIE SOAP SPRAYER screwed to your faucet and a few pounds of fish oil soap solves this problem without further expense or labor. This is but one of its many uses. It is equally valuable in the greenhouse.

Made of Brass, Nickel Plated, Lasts Forever. PRICE THREE DOLLARS. Send for Circular.

GEORGE N. BARRIE, Brookline, Mass.

SCOTCH SOOT

Where there is a house that is just full of buds almost ready to show color, nothing will turn better color into the flowers than a little soot, that can be scattered over the benches before watering. The amount applied should not be excessive, as the soot is very strong and may damage some of the foliage somewhat. Apply just enough to blacken the surface of the soil in the benches, and let it go at that. Better a little oftener than too much all at once.

We offer the genuine in original cwt.

Mr. Hammond's Paint Works

I have been using your Paint (GREENHOUSE WHITE) and TWEM-LOW'S GLAZING PUTTY for the last fifteen years, and both have given me entire satisfaction, especially the Glazing Putty, which when properly put on, makes a house rain-proof and almost air-tight.

Respectfully yours,

R. M. EISENHART.

ADVANCE CO., RICHMOND, IND.

Why Metropolitan Construction Was Used by the N. J. Agricultural Experiment Station, at New Brunswick, N. J.

Here is the story:

Every grower knows to what test the Government and State experiment stations put their greenhouses. The construction and heating system must be far above the ordinary in order to produce the desired results. The Greenhouse on the extreme left was not built by us, but when a new one was wanted we were awarded the contract. This greenhouse (the one in the center) was constructed of the Metropolitan patented iron wall construction. Two years later, they needed a third house, and would have none but our construction—that's the one to the right.

Here is what Dr. J. G. Lipman, Director of the New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Station has to say about our work:

"In so far as I know, the work done by you was eminently satisfactory, and I trust that we shall have occasion in the future to request your company to bid on other work."

If contemplating the building of a greenhouse, let us submit plans and prices. We go anywhere in the U. S. A.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Eucharis amazonica

Potted eucharises that have finished their crop of flowers can be given a top dressing of cow manure and loam, removing some of the old soil on top and replacing it with new compost. If they need a shift very badly give them a size larger pot but it should be always remembered that they flower best when well-potbound. Place the pots in a coldframe, plunged to their brims in a mixture of strawy manure and leaves, which will provide a gentle bottom heat. Place shaded sashes over the plants, spray and shut them up sufficiently early in the afternoon to bottle up a brisk heat. Treated thus the eucharis will make a grand growth and, if placed in a dry, moderately cool house about the end of September and given a few weeks rest, they can be started in heat to furnish a crop of flowers for Christmas.

Lilies

Lilium speciosum and longiflorum for summer flowering should have a house without much shade. Give them an abundance of air at all times as they resent coddling. Examine the pots two or three times a day so they will not suffer from want of water, and also go over them as the flowers begin to open and remove the pollen before it discolors the petals. Do not neglect fumigation. Once green fly gets a good foothold it will deform or ruin a great part of the flowers. Keep them well syringed on all bright days until the flowers begin to open. Some of the taller lilies should be staked to keep the stems erect and the flowers in good shape. When they are fairly well out they can be moved to a cool cellar. The weather being warm the flowers will open up now quite fast. Keep the air of the house moist by frequent dampings.

Lycaste Skinneri

Lycaste Skinneri is the most lasting of orchids. The flowers in winter will keep on the plants for from eight to twelve weeks. It is a terrestrial orchid and grows better in an equal mixture of fibrous loam and fern fiber than in one of fiber alone. No more shading should be used than is absolutely necessary to prevent burning.

Maintain a free circulation of air keeping the atmosphere as cool and moist as possible. Plants will now advance very rapidly and in all weathers must have water liberally at the root and frequent damping down. Pots are the best receptacles and a winter minimum temperature of 50 to 55 degrees will be found about right.

Starting Cycas Stems

From now on and until mid-summer cycas stems will be arriving. When potting use as small pots as will comfortably hold them. Give a compost of equal parts of fibrous loam, well rotted cow manure and leaf mold. Be sure that each pot has thorough drainage. Give water sparingly until they have started to make roots and top growth, after which they will take plenty. Keep the stems well syringed every day. They should be kept in a moist atmosphere and where they can have a temperature of about 70 degrees during the night, with from 10 to 15 degrees higher with sunshine. When they begin to show their whorl of leaves give enough of shade to keep them from burning.

Vincas and Ivies

There is always a good demand for variegated vincas and English ivies. Now is the time to buy stock from 2 or 2½ inch pots and plant them out in the field. They can be set about a foot apart in the row and leaving about two feet between the rows. If kept cultivated and hoed during the summer they will make very nice stock by the fall. They will not be any trouble except to keep them clear of weeds. They can be lifted in September and potted into four-inch pots and placed in a cool house. There is no better place for them than along a carnation bench where they can be allowed to droop down.

Weeds and Cultivation

From this out the weeds will grow apace. See that the various crops do not get overrun. Keep the soil well cultivated every week and they will be only a few that will get ahead of the cultivator. By keeping down weeds more plant food will be left in the soil for the crop that is growing on it.

Next Week: Carnations; Cinerarias; Compost Pile; Boston Ferns; Poinsett; Painting.

A fine record

The first news from San Francisco of the honors bestowed upon the State of Massachusetts and the recognition accorded to the Massachusetts firms exhibiting in the Horticultural Division appears in another column of this paper. It sounds real good to learn that the Bay State, in the section of the country most remote from the location of the big Exposition, has made a fine record. The work of preparation was in good hands and well executed, and the occasion was in every sense worth the effort and the achievement.

Make the youngsters happy

Picnic time is not far distant. We like to hear of the plannings in clubs and other associations of the florist and gardener craft for summer outings in which the ladies and children are given first consideration. Somebody has to do a lot of hard work to make these affairs entirely successful—much more than the non-workers realize. A tired-out mortal, indeed, is he who has spent the day in catering to the pleasure of the kiddies and managing the games and contests provided for their entertainment but one can rarely get tired in a better cause and then the pleasure of having been able to contribute so much toward the happiness of others should be ample compensation for all the labor.

"The cold shoulder"

The apparent misconception on the part of some agricultural publishers and their correspondents as to what constitutes horticulture often strikes us as both amusing and provoking. Amusing as showing how absurdly perverse and uncompromising a certain class can be in its attitude towards the ornamental branches of horticulture; provoking when one thinks of the neglected opportunities for exploiting those things in nature which make for refinement of character and the appreciation of something more in the home life than food and raiment. Glance over the pages of any one of the farming periodicals and see what you find in the column under the heading of "horticulture." Potatoes, silos, pigs, barley—almost anything except flowers for the sake of the flowers! "'Tis true 'tis pity; and pity 'tis, 'tis true."

Needed improvements.

We are heartily in accord with the views expressed by Mr. Koehler in his communication in regard to the labelling of plants and flowers staged at public exhibitions. We are sure that our readers will be practically unanimous and hearty in their approval of Mr. Koehler's sentiments. HORTICULTURE has editorially and through its Philadelphia representative, Mr. Watson, repeatedly urged the need of reform in this matter of naming exhibits—not only that they be correctly labelled but that they be legibly labelled with the name so inscribed and the label so placed that it may be read by a person of ordinary eyesight without the necessity of stepping or reaching in among the exhibits. Fifty per cent is none too much to accredit to an exhibition which carries with it this much desired educational value as compared with those where this is lacking. While on the subject of exhibition management we take opportunity to say that we hope the time may come when a disbarment or fine will be the punishment for any committee of judges turning in a report of awards to "any other color" or "any other variety," without specifying the name of such winning variety.

A PLEA FOR THE LABELLING OF EXHIBITS

At the Massachusetts Horticultural Exhibition last week many people were disappointed in finding the large and fine exhibit of rhododendron flowers from the Hunnewell place shown without names. However much one may or may not know about the subject it is without dispute that a properly labelled exhibit of flowers, plants, vegetables, etc., can be examined with far more profit than an unlabelled one. For many people one of the inducements to visit the exhibition was the supposed opportunity of seeing rhododendrons under name. The erratic behavior of these plants, as evidenced this spring, has directed attention to them more than usual, and it seems that here was a fine opportunity lost of presenting to the public facts of educational value and interest. At the two other much smaller but labelled exhibits of rhododendrons people could be seen with note book and pencil in hand; at the large exhibit such were conspicuous by their absence. In England, it is said that an exhibit is depreciated 50% in the eyes of the judges, by the omission of the proper labels.

This criticism is made in no unfriendly or unappreciative spirit. The exhibit in question was well worth seeing even without labels; it was a fine display; its omission would have been a great pity and it probably deserved the silver medal which was awarded; but it is to be hoped that next year the same exhibitor will provide the names, and, thus, by giving of his knowledge and enhancing the attractiveness of his exhibit, confer a great benefit upon those who may be so fortunate as to see it.

It may be pertinent here to express the opinion that rhododendrons are not made the feature at these exhibitions, or at those of any other organization in the country, that they should. They are the most commanding and impressive flowering shrubs of our gardens when rightly used; yet the public does not know and understand them as it should. It would seem that there should be exhibits enough of them to fill at least one of the halls. The announcements of these exhibitions lead one to suppose that rhododendrons are to be a large feature, instead of the disappointingly small one they turn out to be. Whether the fault lies with the various horticultural organizations in not offering sufficient inducements to exhibitors, or whether the trouble lies elsewhere, can best be determined by others.

What a startling and impressive exhibit might be made with plants in tubs, not only of the tender kinds but most largely of the hardy ones. The reasons why rhododendrons do not lend themselves as subjects for cut flowers are many and obvious and need not be enuerated here, but it should be borne in mind that the effectiveness of rhododendron flowers is tremendously reduced when not on the plants, more so than in the case of most flowering shrubs, especially when cut with the short stems usually necessitated by a due regard for the plants; although it might be said in passing that it would seem possible by judicious cutting to obtain from a large collection of rhododendrons many trusses with long stems without disfiguring the plants.

This matter of tub plants should not prove an unreasonably expensive proposition; if of the hardy kinds they might be wintered even without the aid of the usual cold cellar; in the fall the tubs could be plunged to their rims in some sheltered position, heavily mulched with leaves, and further protected by a stockade of spruces, pines, or what not. In the spring they could be placed in a sunny position, and brought into bloom at the required time. Moderate sized plants might even be tubbed in April for exhibition in June. Commercial growers might find it to their advantage to make exhibits of tubbed plants, affording an opportunity for effective advertising and at the same time adding to the attractiveness of exhibitions.

The value of rhododendron exhibits would be further increased by indicating in some way the degree of hardiness of the different kinds. This could be done by merely stating the fact on the same label giving the name of the kind, or by grouping them according to their hardiness, classifying them as tender, as half hardy—that is those which can be coddled along in favorable situations, and as hardy—that is those which are hardy in the most unfavorable situations in which rhododendrons will grow (there do not seem to be any fool-proof ones).

Once more referring to the aggravation of an unlabelled exhibit: two vases of unlabelled iris, all by themselves, were sufficiently striking to attract the approving attention of at least two iris experts in the hall who were very anxious to find out what they were but could not. A small exhibit of unlabelled azaleas attracted the attention of a man who wanted to know about them for use in his own garden, but was unable to carry away with him the names of those he especially liked.

Comment and exchange of views on the topics treated in these pages will be gladly welcomed from Horticulture's Readers. Suggestions as to how they can be made still more interesting and instructive will be appreciated.

Endorsement was given to the campaign now being carried on by the Detroit (Mich.) Florist Club for the general beautification of that city through the individual efforts of the merchants and others of that place. It was considered as being a most worthy action, aside from its commercial aspect, as it will serve to do much to enlarge the love for flowers.

An invitation has been extended to the members by the Washington Chamber of Commerce to be present at its meeting held the same evening, at which the speakers were Secretary of Commerce Redfield and the secretary of the Chinese Legation, and an early adjournment was taken that the invitation might be accepted. The Secretary's talk was on the building up of manufactories in the District of Columbia. There must be secured a very marked decrease in the cost of electric power. This is a subject to which the florists have been giving more or less thought for at present all establishments are subjected to a charge of 10 cents per kilowatt hour, whereas, as Mr. Redfield stated, they believe that 3 cents per kilowatt hour would be ample.

An excellent buffet lunch was served following the meeting.

NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW COMMITTEE.

The National Flower Show Committee met in regular session in Philadelphia Florists' Club rooms in Horticultural Hall on June 10, with Chairman Farenwald presiding. Secretary John Young of New York was present. Practical details for the conduct of the National Flower Show, to be held in Philadelphia, March 25 to April 2, 1916, were more or less definitely worked out.

At a meeting with the same committeemen, Frederick R. Newbold of the New York Horticultural Society—who did so much towards making a success of the New York show—was present, and explained in detail the plans and methods pursued by that organization in connection with the New York show.

George Asmus, of Chicago, is expected in Philadelphia next week, at which time there will be another meeting of the committee.

It is important that all who intend making trade exhibits at the Newport Exhibition, August 18 and 19, should advise the chairman of the exhibition committee at once as to the space they will require. This will facilitate matters and avoid disappointment. No charge for tables will be made.

WESTCHESTER AND FAIRFIELD HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

There was a very good attendance at the monthly meeting of this society, June 11, at Greenwich, Conn. The committee reported everything in readiness for the summer exhibition to be held in the Town Hall in Greenwich, June 18 and 19. The fall show committee have ready for distribution a preliminary schedule. Over 100 classes are provided for. The Annual Outing will take place August 11 at Edwards Rye Beach Inn, Rye Beach, N. Y. Visitors were Joseph Manda, of South Orange, N. J., and Mr. Watkins, representing Burnett Bros., New York City, who each addressed the meeting.

A great display was seen on the exhibition tables. The judges made the following awards:

Honorable mention to Dehn & Bertolf for shrub and herbaceous flowers. Cultural certificate to James Stuart for Calceolaria Stewarti; Wm. Whitten for Double White Killarney rose; P. W. Popp for Calceolaria Bailori. Highly commended, Robt. Grunert for Spencer sweet peas; Jas. Linane, glloxinia; Jas. Foster, peonies. Vote of thanks to Thos. Ryan for sweet peas; Wm. Morrow, Dahlia Louise; James Linane, spinach and peonies.

PEONY, ROSE AND STRAWBERRY EXHIBITION.

The annual rose and strawberry exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society will be held in Horticultural Hall, Boston, on Saturday and Sunday, June 19 and 20. In addition to roses and strawberries there will be fine displays of other seasonable flowers as well as of early fruits and vegetables.

In connection with this show will be held the Annual Peony Exhibition, postponed from last week, which will be of special interest this year on account of the annual meeting and exhibition of the American Peony Society which will be held in connection with it.

The exhibition is free and will be open Saturday from 12 to 6 and on Sunday from 2 to 6 o'clock.

NEW YORK FLORISTS' CLUB.

The regular meeting of this Club was held on Monday evening, June 14, with about 75 members in attendance. There was an address by B. H. Farr, president of the American Peony Society on the Peony. Mr. Farr gave an interesting account of the work of his Society, particularly the results of ten years nomenclature research and disentangling. The trial grounds at Cornell are giving valuable data and a similar plantation is contemplated at Washington, D. C.

Mr. Farr made a fine display of peonies and irises which was accorded a vote of thanks, a similar recognition being given to W. A. Manda for dandelions, Wm. Tricker for roses and campanulas and Max Schling for roses and Jos Manda was awarded a certificate of merit for his new lavender Swainsona, Mrs. Joseph Manda.

Charles H. Totty gave a very interesting and glowing account of what he had seen at the Panama-Pacific Exposition and strongly urged every one who possibly could to go and visit this wonderful triumph of science and art. There were many committee reports, including the Convention Transportation Committee by R. J. Irwin, who stated that fifteen had already signed to go; Flower Show Committee by Frank Traendly with check for $2,000, an account of the last show - also report of progress on next year's show. Committee on Privileges and recent rules against carrying flower packages in street cars and subways, by A. J. Guttman and Charles Brown, in which hope was expressed for a more liberal policy by the companies; Outing Committee by Emil Schloss; Committee on Permanent Home by F. R. Pierson recommending postponement until better times come—which was so agreed to; Lecture Committee by Leonard Barron, who announced a talk on the gladiolus by B. Hammond Tracy at the September meeting.

Five new members were accepted and three proposed.

GARDENERS' AND FLORISTS' CLUB OF BOSTON

The meeting of the Boston Horticultural Club was held at the Horticultural Hall, was according to custom, Ladies' Night. For the reason of business meeting matters were not hort and to a lack of importance was taken except a vote of condolence for Edward J. Welch on the death of his wife and son and a vote of sympathy for Ex-President Peter M. Miller who is ill with pleurisy and whose genial company was sadly missed in the social enjoyments of the evening. A very fine musical program was presented by the Elliott Singers, a sextet of male voices of rare quality, the numbers consisting of choruses and solos by the individual members, most of which were vigorously encored.

Then came the collation of strawberries, ice cream, coffee, etc., followed by dancing in the lecture hall until midnight, in which the youth and beauty of horticultural Greater Boston disported themselves to the limit everything from Virginia reel to "hesitation" being given full sway. It was one of the best arranged and successful affairs in the club's history, the very general absence of the "old-timers" being the only missing ingredient.

The donations of flowers were exceedingly lavish and the singers, as well as many of the ladies, went home laden down with armfuls of fragrant bloom.

PEONY SHOW AT BOSTON.

Notwithstanding the backward condition of the peony blooms in New England, which caused the postponement of the combined peony show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society and the American Peony Society for another week, there was an excellent display in Horticultural Hall, Boston, on Saturday, June 12, the date originally set. Irises were grand.

INTERNATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF ROTARY CLUBS.

R. C. Kerr of Houston, Texas, chairman of the Florists' Section, sends us the following tentative program for the convention of this association which will be held at San Francisco on July 19 to 23.

Monday, 100 P. M.—Luncheon at St. Francis Hotel. Get together and get acquainted.

After lunch, adjournment for Section Meeting.

Some topics for discussion: "How to put our business on the highest plane, and carry out the principles of Rotary."

"Rotary Florists' co-operation in exchange of business."

"The Florists' place in the Rotarian."

"How Rotary Florists should serve their local Rotary Clubs."

"How to create interest in the Convention Florists' Sectional Meetings."

"Reports of the Houston Meeting."

The Rotary Clubs are composed of one person from each line of business in each city throughout the country. Therefore only one florist in each city can belong to this organization. At their annual international convention they hold a section meeting of each line of business—therefore there will be a florists' section meeting. Mr. Kerr urges that all florists who attend shall remain over for the S. A. F.

TEXAS STATE FLORISTS' ASSOCIATION.

Following are a few of the headliners for our second annual convention at Ft. Worth, July 6 and 7:

Special rate of one and one-third fare. Questions that are of direct interest to you will be discussed. A live program—instructive and interesting. Florists coming from Illinois, Missouri, Mississippi, Colorado, Louisiana, Alabama, Oklahoma and Tennessee. Also 75 per cent of the florists of Texas will be in attendance. A nice line of exhibits on display. Ft. Worth Club's program of entertainment will assure you a good time.

If you were in attendance at our convention last year at Waco, you know the value of these conventions, and of course will be with us; if not, don't miss the opportunity of meeting the florists of Texas and the South—for they will be there. Remember, too, we will have some of the big men with us from Chicago, Colorado, Missouri, Oklahoma and other sections.

The time is short so make your arrangements to attend the convention. WE WILL LOOK FOR YOU.

R. C. KERR, Pres.

PACIFIC COAST HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The regular monthly meeting of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society on June 5th was well attended, and considerable business was attended to. H. Plath, as chairman of the Exhibition Committee, led discussions in reference to preparations for the Fall Flower Show, and various committees of the S. A. F. Convention submitted reports. Applications for membership were presented from R. A. Hyde of Watsonville, F. Metzner of Mountain View, K. Nyeland of Oakland, J. Walter, a local gardener and A. J. Nevraumont of the California Seed Co. J. A. Axell of the E. W. McLellan Co. was elected to the office of treasurer, following the withdrawal of Dan Raymond, who had been nominated at the last meeting. After the business session, Prof. Stevens of the University of California, delivered a very interesting illustrated lecture on the "History of Landscape Gardening." The exhibits made a good showing. A bunch of Gladiolus Panama shown by Frank Pelicano was rated at 95 points. A large pot of Adiantum Plathii, a new seedling, shown by H. Plath, was also rated at 95, and a single flower of the new hybrid brier rose Juliet shown by J. Gill took 60 points.

AN EVER GREEN SUBURBAN GARDEN.

The accompanying picture shows a bit of garden scenery which even in the dead of winter is never quite desolate or cheerless. The strong features of the grouping are the Rhododendrons, Kalmias and broad-leaved evergreen Berberises with the rich greenery of the Euonymus which clothes the trunks of the old giant apple tree in never-fading verdure. In the rock-bordered beds are Daphne cneorum, Cotoneasters, Iberis sempervirens, Ledums, Andromedas and Leucothoes which add an always green finish to the scene, while the heavy masses of the larger growing material form a lively background against which the pink-flowered dogwood on the left and other deciduous subjects find in their blooming season an effective contrast.

Winding under the shade of the shrubbery in the background is a little fern-bordered path where are to be found some of the most beautiful of the crested and fringed forms of the hardy ferns, brightened in spring-time, while the ferns are still dormant, with Trilliums, Fritillarias, grape hyacinths and other early flowering bulbous bloom.

Like several other pictures we have published recently, this is a view in the little garden of the editor of HORTICULTURE. Our object in giving publicity to these home pictures is to show in our humble way how much it is possible for one to accomplish in varied garden effect within a very limited space.

At this time the Board of Agriculture wishes to express its sincere thanks to the Nurserymen of the State who have so generously helped in making it possible to secure this very high recognition for Massachusetts products.

To Mr. Carl Purdy, who designed the gardens, and through whose untiring efforts at the exposition grounds, the awards have been possible, we also wish to express our thanks.

George H. Evans.

Geo. H. Evans, well known florist of San Francisco, died at the age of 36 years, on June 9th, following a prolonged illness, from which he had hoped to recover by taking up his residence on a farm in Sonoma County a few months ago. Late in May he returned to San Francisco and had disposed of his business in the Richmond district, known as the Jordan Park Floral Co., shortly before his death. He is survived by a widow.

Mrs. C. Bergestermann.

It is with much regret that we must pen the news of the sudden death of Mrs. C. Bergestermann, wife of the well-known St. Louis retail florist, who died on Friday, June 11, from a stroke. Mrs. Bergestermann, who was 56 years old was born at Milstadt, Ill. She leaves a husband and two children, from her former marriage—Edwin Niebling and Mrs. Oscar Ruff. The funeral took place Monday, June 14. The members of the Ladies' Home Circle, and many members in the trade sent floral offerings and were present to express their sympathy.

John Starrett.

A telegram was received by E. C. Winterson, Chicago, on June 14, announcing the death of John Starrett in Florida, near Tampa, Friday, June 11. Mr. Starrett was well known in the Chicago market having been connected for many years with both the wholesale and the retail ends of the business. He was with his brother-in-law Chas. H. Fisk in the wholesale commission business twenty five years ago, going later into the retail work and then back to the wholesale where he was with several firms. Mr. Star-rett's last work in Chicago was to have charge of the flowers at the La Salle Hotel when he was taken ill with rheumatism. He went to Florida about a year ago in search of health, and had a citrus fruit farm there. The body was brought back to Chicago by Mrs. Starrett and the funeral took place from the home of the son, John Starrett, Jr., on Wednesday.

August Gaedeke.

August Gaedeke, for many years a well-known and prosperous florist of Nashua, N. H., died at St. Joseph hospital in that city on Tuesday morning from Pleuro-pneumonia after a few days' illness.

AUGUST GAEDEKE

Mr. Gaedeke was born in Stettin, Germany, in 1866. At the age of 17 years he went to Perth, Scotland, with an older brother, where he worked as a private gardener for three years. In 1886 he came to America. He located for one year in Cambridge, Mass., and then went to Nashua to work for former United States District Attorney Charles W. Hoitt, who had greenhouses for commercial purposes, and in 1900, August and his brother Rudolph bought out Judge Hoitt's share in the greenhouses, and Maj. E. Ray Shaw went into partnership with them. In a recent issue we announced the disposal of the business to Fred D. Sperry by Mr. Gaedeke, who was planning to retire.

August Gaedeke was an alert business man, industrious and self-reliant. He was a floriculturist, also, of more than ordinary ability. He made many friends in the trade and among the leading men of his town by his manly traits and impulsively hospitable disposition.

He was married to Miss Ida Benson in Nashua, Aug. 12, 1902, and she has been a great help to him not only in the home but in his business, in which she took an active interest. She is grief stricken at his death. Besides his widow, he has two brothers, Albert of Perth, Scotland, and Rudolph of this city, and three sisters, one living in Milwaukee and two in Stettin, Germany.

TIME FOR FIGHTING.

Reports from all directions indicate an unusually large invasion of insect enemies this season. Gypsy moths, brown-tail moths, canker worms, leaf rollers, cut worms, aphids, tussock moths, white flies, thrips, red spider and heaven knows how many other members of the pest family are getting in their work with a perseverance worthy of a submarine. These can all be fought off by using modern ammunition and there is a good variety offered for this purpose in the pages of this paper. Get busy with the advertisers in this department, who are among your best friends. And, by the way, there are potato bugs and various beetles to be reckoned with—and Hammond can tell you what Slug Shot does to these marauders.

Springfield, Mass.—Marshall Headle, head gardener for the park department has resigned his position and will enter business. Herbert W. Headle, his brother, and other park employees will have charge of the work in the future, although Marshall Headle has consented to assist in certain work in the rose gardens next fall, a part of the park system in which he has been greatly interested.

HORTICULTURE INDISPENSABLE

The following examples of many approving letters received at the office of HORTICULTURE during the past few weeks, show why HORTICULTURE is so valuable as an advertising medium. Intensive circulation is HORTICULTURE'S best quality and practically every reader is a possible customer for the advertiser.

Gentlemen:—Last week's HORTICULTURE is not received. Have you scratched me off your list, or what is the matter? Appreciate your paper more than any of half a dozen I am receiving, and don't want to miss any copies. Will you please investigate?

Yours truly,

TULIP CLASSIFICATION.

The classification of tulips into varietal names but as to authority is a matter of opinion. The Royal Horticultural Society has a committee to prepare a list of names for tulips. The subject has attracted attention, as they have the same trouble abroad that confronts the gardener here. Our readers may be interested in the following notes which we have clipped from The Garden, explaining the plans and purposes of a joint committee of the Royal Horticultural Society and the Dutch Bulb Growers' Association which, when perfected, it is hoped will be accepted as a basis of classification by all traders.

The fact that so little is known about the percentage of garden tulips and that the work of breaking up what are obviously hybrid forms into their original species has never yet been accomplished. Mr. W. R. Dykes of this town is just setting about it, but it will be a long, long way to the end. It is impossible to frame any strictly scientific system of grouping. The one about to be put forward is based on garden convenience, and historical and scientific considerations are almost entirely left out of count. "It aims at bringing together those tulips which have a similar habit and which can be harmoniously associated in the garden." The oldest division that we find in English flower books was that which classed tulips as early, mid-season and late bloomers. As we have but few mid-season varieties, the proposed classification leaves out that section and boldly divides all varieties into early and late flowerers as its main groups.

Those which in ordinary seasons are in full flower before the end of April are classed as early flowerers or earlies. They are generally of a dwarf habit, and for the most part are self-colored. The subsections here are two, single and double.

The proposed name for the second main division is May flowerers, and they are described as garden varieties, mostly of a tall and robust habit, which usually flower after May 1. Here the difficulty begins, because, take any principle of useful division that one can think of, the dividing line is exceedingly difficult to draw. There are such numerous gradations both of shape and markings that a wide borderland has to be somewhat arbitrarily divided. The main subsections are, (a) Cottage, (b) Breeder, (c) Broken, (d) Parrot, and (e) Species. The last one includes all the true species, which, as Mr. Hall says, have not been "messed about," not necessarily those with Latin names like retroflexa, elegans and gesneriana spathulata, which are now known to be but garden hybrids.

Taking the above subsections in order, the Cottage is a large amorphous group of self-colored, generally long-shaped flowers of various tones and shades of yellow, red, mauve, or purple. We may have true cups like Bouton d'Or; long blooms, like Mrs. Moon; some with graceful recurving petals, like elegans or retroflexa; others egg-shaped, like Fairy Queen; and so on ad infinitum.

The Breeders are subdivided into (a) Dutch, (b) English and (c) Darwins. As a group they may be described as self-colored flowers, opening after the manner of a cup with rounded petals, and as a rule strong and vigorous growers. This characteristic is particularly noticeable in the Darwins, and this, together with their being all white ground varieties, constitutes the salient feature of the section. (All Tulips have either white or yellow grounds, which can be seen by an examination of the base or bottom of a flower, by peeling off the inner or outer skin of a petal, which then discloses a middle layer which is either yellow or white and of the same color as is to be seen in the base of the flower.) Breeders are longer and more egg-shaped than the Darwins. English Breeders are more cup-shaped and not so long, and are further distinguished by the more rounded petals.

Broken Tulips are similarly divided into Dutch, English and Rembrandts, which is the name now given to broken Darwins. To a considerable extent they follow the lines of the Breeder divisions.

Parrots are tulips with lacinated petals. Up to the present they have all had yellow grounds. There is, however, no reason why there should not be white grounds in the group, as I think it is now generally recognized that any variety may sport into a Parrot form. Within the last three or four years Messrs. Barr & Sons have listed such a one in their bybloemen with lacinated petals. Sensation.

The Species I have already referred to. Some of those usually placed under this heading in catalogues may in time be found to be hybrids. Like Haworth's species Daffodils, when tested by the process of seedling raising they may be found wanting.

The Conference Show.—A cut-and-dried scheme like the above would lose more than half its value unless every Tulip was placed in its proper subdivision, and grouped in those subdivisions according to its color. This was, as I said last week, one of the reasons for gathering together such a large collection at Vincent Square. In the case of the Cottages and the Darwins, the long and difficult process of selection and combination has been carried out very fully. It will be a guide as to the different varieties that may be grown together without any clashing of color, and in this way it will be of great utility to gardeners. To make things still plainer, a typical flower has been selected in each color group, so that there may be no doubt as to what is the color meant. About four of the best varieties in each have been singled out for detailed description. In this way I hope a start has been made to reduce the huge mass of Tulips, many so much alike that none but an expert could separate them, and then only after a very careful comparison, to something like manageable numbers, to the relief both of the overburdened trader and the doubtful purchaser. Each suffers from the plethora of names (varieties?).

I hope the gardening public will make use of the Royal Horticultural Society's booklet as soon as it is published. I am sure it will prove an immense boon to all if it only comes into general use.

On Saturday and Sunday, June 12 and 13, Professor C. S. Sargent's gardens at Brookline were opened to the public to enjoy the gorgeous spectacle of the rhododendrons and azaleas. The number of visitors was very large.

The two sensations of the week in this community are the failure of Sidney Hoffman and the death of August Gaedeke. The latter, although located in Nashua, N. H., was well known in the flower market section here and highly esteemed.

Express wagon loads of boxes addressed to numerous florists in northern New York, New Hampshire, Maine, Massachusetts and Vermont, have been noted repeatedly, during the past few days especially, leaving the Welch Bros.' wholesale place, showing a very encouraging activity in the shipping business, while local trade was noticeably quiet.

PHILADELPHIA.

The annual picnic of the Philadelphia Florists' Club will be held at Scheutzen Park on June 21, afternoon and evening. Games will be held in the afternoon and after dinner there will be music and dancing in the pavillion.

Among the June weddings of interest to many in the trade may be mentioned Marie Westcott, Grace Marie Habermehl and Elizabeth Burton. Miss Westcott's will occur on June 15, Miss Habermehl's on the 23rd. Your society reporter has not been informed of Miss Burton's date.

Messrs. John Young and F. R. Newbold of New York had a meeting here June 10, with representatives of Philadelphia's 400 to arrange for a tea room as a feature of the National Flower Show of 1916. The local sub-committees of the National Committee also held a meeting on the same date.

The crop of June brides is unusually luxuriant this year. Your society reporter no sooner finishes a paragraph about several of them than along comes word of another. So off comes the list and on goes the snail again. This time it is for Elizabeth Lewis Holmes, daughter of H. L. Holmes of Harrisburg, who will be married June 24 to Arthur Park Ruthenford.

PITTSBURGH.

The annual employees' outing of the A. W. Smith Company was held last Sunday at Canfield, Ohio, the home of the Smith nurseries.

The five-acre estate of Mrs. Thomas Armstrong has attracted much admiration owing to a border of Azalea mollis. Richard B. Harris is in charge of these grounds.

DeForest Ludwig has been spending the past few days at Meyersdale in the Allegheny Mountains. His brother, Edward Ludwig, will return home today from Cornell University, where he ends his junior year.

The Joseph Horne Company is advertising Tuesdays and Wednesdays as Rose Days, and will beautify the store with bowers of these lovely June blossoms. These floral demands will as usual be supplied by the A. W. Smith Company.

At the A. R. Peacock greenhouses, Henry B. Kreillor, the head gardener, has over 3000 chrysanthemums, 2000 carnations and 1000 cyclamens coming on for next season. Mr. Kreillor, who is a Scot, was formerly at the H. C. Frick estate with David Frazer, and later with T. Hart Given.

J. C. Trees, of North Highland Ave., is contemplating an additional rose and carnation house, twenty feet by fifty, to his propagating house, which is under the supervision of Pasquale Fabbuzzi. Mr. Fabbuzzi has some exceptionally fine massed hybrid tea roses throughout the estate.

Nicholas Castelluccio, who superintends the horticultural features for the Penn. R. R. from Pittsburgh to Scottsdale, has added immensely to the appearance of the East Liberty Station waiting room by a large central round of palms and other tropical foliage surrounded by white marble. Mr. Castelluccio has just added two charming beds geraniums bordered with coleus and cannas with a border of salvia—to the grounds of the superintendent adjoining the station grounds.

"Hearts and Flowers" is the firm music of the Ludwig Floral Company, these days. Announcement has just been made of the engagement of Gilbert Ludwig the secretary, to Miss Loretta Grau, which will terminate in a quiet home wedding about the middle of July. The bridegroom-to-be is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gustave Ludwig, and his fiancée has for some time been associated with the firm's business office. The marriage of Miss Anna Meuschke, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Meuschke (the former treasurer of the Ludwig Floral Company), to Louis Walthers, also of Pittsburgh, will be an elaborately appointed ceremony of Wednesday evening next at the Meuschke home in Castle Shannon.

Portland, Me.—The exhibit by the agricultural department at the Maine State Exposition during the past week has attracted large numbers of visitors and is regarded by the fair management as one of the most educational sections at the exposition. The bureau of moth work combined their exhibits into a very effective display of entomological specimens, of insects of injurious propensities, including the gypsy and browntail moths. Of remarkable interest was the exhibit of parasites such as are being bred at the state's laboratory in Portland to prey upon the undesirable insect inhabitants of Maine. Feeding trays for the parasites, such as are in regular use were shown and on these the parasites were seen partaking of the rations provided them, which consisted of browntail moth caterpillars.

John McLaren and Harry Smith of San Francisco, Chas. Howard of Los Angeles and G. A. Dennison of the exposition horticultural department constitute the board of judges.

One of the largest outdoor decorations ever carried out in this vicinity, was handled the past week by the MacRorie-McLaren Co. It embraced the decoration of Union Square in honor of the convention of the National Electric Light Association. A bank of about 800 pink hydrangeas was arranged around the base of the Dewey monument, and the shaft of the monument for fifteen feet above was covered with eucalyptus studded with jewels, such as are on the Tower of Jewels at the exposition. With the monument as a central figure, a classic colonnade completed the scheme, each column being surmounted by an urn of hydrangeas and adorned with garlands of oak.

Flower Market Reports

As the season of com-BOSTON mencelements and graduations which means so much to florists in the New England states approaches its close there is abundant evidence that this flower market is in for a low tide experience shortly. Already the carnations, lilies, roses, snapdragons, sweet peas and other regular stock appears in accumulated surplus on all the wholesale counters while local grown peonies are just beginning their onslaught. "The beginning of the end" is with us, unquestionably, and a general tearing up and throwing out will soon be under way in the flower growing establishments of this section.

There was any amount
BUFFALO of anything in the line of cut flowers the past week. Ideal summer weather has brought on stock faster than could be handled to advantage, especially roses, which were in enormous supply, also lilies and carnations. Floral work was quiet and weddings were hardly noticeable and all wedding material lacked the demand. Peonies are plentiful and sell only at low figures. Good Festiva maxima were had and those sold at fair prices. 'Outdoor material in great variety is being loaded on the market.

The street car strike
CHICAGO had an immediate effect upon the business of the Chicago florists. The last cars ran on Sunday evening and on Monday morning there was no way for florists to get their usual supply of flowers, except to come after them with their delivery cars or wagons, and a rain made this inconvenient. Then too, the demand on the wholesale market was naturally lighter as the retailers had no reason to expect the usual number of customers when street car service was suspended. The latter half of last week was not very encouraging. The cold damp weather put a check on local trade and were it not for a fairly good shipping trade, stock would have accumulated seriously. Weddings and commencements have kept the shipping orders coming and there has been plenty of a high grade of stock to fill them with.
American Beauty roses have been as much a favorite for these occasions as in former years and the demand has been good. Mrs. Russell leads the market in other roses and its color is just as good as in bright weather.
Sunburst, the pride of so many growers during the winter, is nearly faded out this week for lack of sunshine.
Carnations are of excellent quality, the cool weather of the last six weeks keeping them firm. There is a good supply of lily of the valley and a considerable quantity changes hands each day. Lilies seem to be in excess of demand. Many vases filled with them are seen in every store. The daisies in both white and yellow, always popular in commencement time, are especially good now and can be had in any quantity. Peonies are at the height of their season this week. The quality is not extra but is considered fair.

Flower Market Reports

nothing. There is no such thing as a stated market value on floral product of any kind. An idea of the condition as it exists at present is readily gained when one sees on every block on Sixth avenue, from 14th to 33rd street push carts with pails of big peonies selling at 1c. each. It is useless to attempt to go into detail regarding the various standard flowers in the market. All are in the same predicament.

The market conditions here the past week are tersely summed up in the words of a prominent wholesaler: "Too much stock for all the business there was." Business is rather slow, and the fine weather has brought in largely increased supplies, causing a good deal of a glut. Prices have been hard to hold, and at end of last week much went unsold, there being no takers at any price on many things. Qualities continue very good for this time of year. Northern-grown Beauties are arriving in excellent shape. The lily crop is still redundant, and now come along the candidums to help make things still worse. Carnations very glutty.

The recent warm weather and copious rains following the unusually long cold spring weather has forced vegetation and blooms of all description, and flowers are literally pouring in from every direction. Unfortunately, however, as the product increases, the business demands decrease with prices in proportion. Peonies and iris are the acme of perfection, and, considering the lateness of their season, carnations and roses are exceptionally of good quality. For the past ten days one Northside retailer has been advertising roses at fifteen cents per dozen, many out-of-town people taking advantage of the "ad" for "hothouse flowers," and one large department store has been disposing of its stock at "a penny" apiece.

Owing to the warm weather flowers have been more plentiful the past week, which has had a tendency to weaken the market despite the fact that the demand is well up to normal. White hydrangeas are in good supply with a fair movement. Dahlias are increasing in quantity, but the quality so far is not of the best, and they do not move readily for that reason. A limited amount of phlox is appearing and is being readily absorbed. Sweet peas are at their best, but the supply is a little greater than the demand. The same is true of carnations. Marigolds, stocks, cornflowers and other summer annuals are abundant. Roses continue on about the same basis. Stocks are heavy and only the best offerings clean-up closely. Some nice late peonies are offered at prices a shade lower than last year's quotations.

The market is in such a condition that the commission men can not dispose of the daily consignments as the demand is very slow and shipments large with prices very low and quotations on large lots would not look well on paper. There are a lot of extra good roses coming in. Killarneys comprise the bulk of the rose stock. Carnations are extremely plentiful. Enchantress are in the big majority.

Weather conditions have undergone a marked change during the past few days and Washington is sweltering in a midsummer heat. This has had a serious effect upon roses and carnations. The outdoor sweet peas are making their appearance in increased number and are very good. The demand for American Beauty roses last week was very good and orders literally poured in from southern points. The demand for good white roses is keeping up remarkably well. The market on these cleans up well daily. There has been a very good demand for cattleyas and these sell as soon as received. Some good miltonias are to be had but there is no call for these. Dorothy Perkins roses are an addition to the local market. Business during the past week or ten days has been good. With the society folks closing up their houses a let-up is expected in the rush although the dull season will be later in coming this year than last.

experimental study. The collection will be added to annually and it is intended to make this collection the largest and best in New England. The garden is composed of 18 beds with 5-foot grass walks. The main part of the garden is made up of three series of beds, with four beds in a series, each of the beds being 54 feet long and 12 feet wide. One row of six plants of each species or variety is the unit, and for convenience of study each genus is kept together. At the head of the garden there is a double row of beds each 30 feet long and 8 feet wide. To one side of the garden there are three large blocks of peonies.

With the close of the college year the regular work in floriculture has ended. Professor A. H. Nehrling, the head of the Department, will stay in Amherst through the month of July to teach in the Summer School, in which he offers two courses, one in Amateur Floriculture and one in Garden Flowers. At the close of the Summer School Professor Nehrling will take a trip to the Pacific Coast, where he will attend the two expositions and also take in the S. A. E. Convention. He will return by way of Florida, where he will visit his father, Henry Nehrling.

Mr. A. S. Thurston, the assistant in Floriculture, will spend the summer in graduate study at Cornell University.

The Department strongly advises its students to get all the practical experience possible, and so each summer a number of the men go out into practical work. As usual, the Department has placed a number of men for the summer.

During the summer months, the Department will make numerous repairs among which will be the painting of the greenhouses and the construction of concrete frames.

THE HOME GARDEN CRUSADE.

The Fishkill (N. Y.) Standard gives a list of nearly 250 young folks of Beacon who have enrolled as members of the Home Garden Brigade to make Beacon more beautiful. We congratulate Mr. Hammond on the success attending his earnest efforts in this good work. Prizes are offered for this season as follows:

For the boy or girl who has the best garden, in each of the four wards, a book in the savings bank for $2, for each first prize.

For the boy or girl who has the second best garden in each ward, an Ingersoll watch.

For the girl or boy who raises the best peck of potatoes, a bank book for $1.

For the boy or girl who has the best showing of morning glories or other vine over fence or porch, a bank book for $1.

For the boy or girl who has the best showing of roses, a bronze medal of the American Rose Society. There are to be not less than six bushes or climbers.

For the boy or girl who shows the handsomest front yard on the block a round trip ticket to Mt. Beacon.

All who work in the Brigade will receive a certificate of merit.

W. J. Pralatowski, Michael B. Walsh, Eugene S. Haight and Rev. Stephen F. White are acting as the committee to visit and inspect the gardens, and their report will determine who shall be entitled to receive the prizes, which will be distributed about September first.

CATCH THE SWINDLER.

The HORTICULTURE:

Sirs.—I have read in your last issue the notice of swindler. Will say that about three weeks ago a young man came here and offered HORTICULTURE and Florists' Exchange for renewals, saying if renewal was due he would collect account and save me the trouble, for he was a collector for same. I had nothing to do with him and promptly forgot it until I saw your issue of this week. I hope he will get it where he ought to.

Very truly yours,

WESLEY F. EWELL.

Winchester, Mass.

As stated in our issue of last week, HORTICULTURE has no traveling collector or subscription agent, and anyone so representing himself is an impostor. These fellows are roving here and there over the country from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Should they approach you, telephone for the police.

SCOTCH SOOT

Where there is a house that is just full of buds almost ready to show color, nothing will turn better color into the flowers than a little soot, that can be scattered over the benches before watering. The amount applied should not be excessive, as the soot is very strong and may damage some of the foliage somewhat. Apply just enough to blacken the surface of the soil in the benches, and let it go at that. Better a little oftener than too much all at once.

We offer the genuine in original cwt. Sacks, at:
$4.00 per 112 lbs.; $17.50 per 560 lbs.

Why Metropolitan Construction Was Used by the N. J. Agricultural Experiment Station, at New Brunswick, N. J.

Here is the story:

Every grower knows to what test the Government and State experiment stations put their greenhouses. The construction and heating system must be far above the ordinary in order to produce the desired results. The Greenhouse on the extreme left was not built by us, but when a new one was wanted we were awarded the contract. This greenhouse (the one in the center) was constructed of the Metropolitan patented iron wall construction. Two years later, they needed a third house, and would have none but our construction—that's the one to the right.

Here is what Dr. J. G. Lipman, Director of the New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Station has to say about our work:

"In so far as I know, the work done by you was eminently satisfactory, and I trust that we shall have occasion in the future to request your company to bid on other work."

If contemplating the building of a greenhouse, let us submit plans and prices. We go anywhere in the U. S. A.

There are three houses 75 ft. x 150 ft. and two 30 ft. x 28 ft.

The Dunbar and Hopkins Range

YOU are familiar enough when the florists used to say that "the iron frame house was all right enough for the private place or in parks, but for the right down to a business proposition, they cost entirely too much."

Then we both looked on smilingly, when a few years later these same florists started building Iron Frame houses because the other kinds cost too much in the end for repairs and rebuilding. Neither could they produce the quantity or quality of crop necessary to meet competition and keep the usual snug balance at the bank.

Then again, you and I also heard the merry laughter of the vegetable growers when the Iron Frame house was mentioned to them as their next move for larger profits.

They said, "Such houses may be all very well for you florists, who grow luxuries and get luxury prices, but we vegetable men sell on too narrow a margin of profit to put our money in such houses."

And then again both of us in a few years saw the change come when the Irondequoit vegetable men started with 40 foot iron framers; then finally 72 footers.

Old conservative Boston, with its Arlington sections, next fell into line when Alexander Porter put up an Iron Frame house 50 ft. x 450 ft.

Finally, several of the members of the big Ashtabula Vegetable Growers Association after trying out various constructions, more or less temporary, began to see that their next move must be the Iron Frame house.

They had looked with admiration on the splendid Iron Frame houses of Zuck and Sons at Erie, Pa., and became thoughtful.

And so it was that Dunbar and Hopkins, who for so many years have been leaders in the Ashtabula Association; still keep in the lead by building five Lord & Burnham Iron Frame houses. This is generally considered to be one of the most up-to-date vegetable ranges in the country.

The time has come, we all now know, when the question is no longer, shall we build an iron frame house; but of whose Iron Frame construction shall it be built?

When you are ready to talk it over, say when and where and we'll be there.

No benches. No beds. The vegetables are planted just as they would be out doors, so utilizing the space usually taken for walks.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Carnations

With the rush of other work do not neglect the carnations, as the good care they are given from this out will play a big part in perfecting fine plants for next winter's flowering. Keep the hoe and the cultivator going; you cannot over-use them. In sandy soil it is an easy matter to keep the surface pulverized and clean, but when it comes to heavy or clayey soil it means work, and in such soil continuous stirring up of the surface is necessary if the plants are to do their best. Remove the small weeds around the plants, such as the cultivator may be unable to reach. While they may not do much harm while small a few days of hot weather will develop them into large plants, and while removing them you might loosen the carnations. After every rain a few hours of sun will pack the surface to such an extent as to form a hard crust. Avoid this. If hot and dry weather should set in faithful cultivation is far more important than watering with the hose. Go over the field every few days and pinch back wherever necessary, for you want short stocky plants.

Cinerarias

Seeds of Cineraria hybrida started at about this time germinate most readily and with proper attention during the warmest months of summer are least difficult to work into good stock. It is well to make three sowings—one early in July, another about the middle of August, and the last sowing the middle of September. The two last dates are the best for most growers as they will have them from February on to Easter, which will be late next year. Use fresh seeds of the best strains to be had; sow on leaf-mold plentifully intermixed with clean, sharp sand; place the trays in a cold frame; keep moist and shaded, but let the sashes be raised a few inches from the start unless unusually cold winds and weather compel their being tightly closed for a time. When the seeds are up lay off the sashes on rainless pleasant nights altogether. Time to transplant is after the seedlings have developed their third leaf.

Compost Pile

Keep plenty of good compost always on hand. There is no better time than the present to prepare a nice pile of soil. Whether light or heavy don't handle the soil while it is in a wet state—heavy soil in particular. There is nothing worse. Insufficient attention is paid to this matter by many growers. Don't worry or wait with the handling of soil because you haven't the right kind of manure to mix with it. Get the soil and have it on hand. The manure or other fertilizer to be used can always be added. Select a convenient dry place for the soil pile, and while at it get enough to last until fall for as soon as all the bulbs are planted there will be another chance to do the hauling for winter and spring requirements. Heavy loam or soil of a clayey nature is always improved by handling or turning a pile over.

Boston Ferns

If you wish to make certain side benches pay for themselves during the summer months plant them now with a 3½ inch or 4 inch stock of Boston ferns, and if you have not those sizes take 2½ inch. Allow 12 x 14 inches of space between the plants; do not overlook shading the glass a little. They grow and do quite well in the sun when used to it, but better results will be had by slight shading. Another way to grow them during the summer is to plant them out into a frame but quicker results are obtained indoors with bench culture or when grown on in pots. Do not let them become dry at the roots, as it will always tell on the foliage. Go over them every day so they will be kept moist and give them a good syringing morning and afternoon. Keep shifting them as they may need it until you have them in 5, 6 and 7 inch pots, using any good compost.

Palms

If rains have washed off considerable of the shading applied to the glass some time ago it will be necessary to use some more whitening on the roof as many palms are quite easily scorched. Go over the old stock, remove every defective leaf, clean the base of the plants and wash both sides of the leaves thoroughly. A couple of hoseings overhead on clear days should also be given with a carefully directed pressure which will not only help to keep the foliage clear of dirt but also will assist materially in preventing the spread of scale. Air freely, now that the days are so warm, and keep plenty of moisture in the atmosphere. If there are large palms that need repotting get at them now. If larger pots are not required remove some of the old soil from the roots and replace with fresh. For a compost use fibrous loam three parts, well-rotted cow manure one part, and about a 5-inch pot of bone meal to a barrow load.

Painting

A few timely reminders for winter preparation will not be out of place here now that we are having plenty of hot dry weather when paint will dry in with a few hours of exposure it behooves us to make haste and get all our outside and inside painting done. Place all the houses in as good condition as possible as there is nothing so bad as leaky and draughty houses.

John Young in this issue of HORTICULTURE, are certainly pregnant with the assurance of success and a convincing optimism which should go far towards satisfying any one who has hitherto felt any doubt as to the outcome of these ventures. Plainly Philadelphia is ready—as she is also unquestionably able—to make the most ambitious national event of 1916 an occasion eminently worthy of her best traditions and well-earned horticultural fame.

Expensive lessons

Prevailing trade conditions and the uncertain outlook for the immediate future should be sufficient incentive for thoughtful business men to give serious consideration to the lesser details of practice and accounting—small things which in “piping” times of easy prosperity are apt to be passed over as trifles not worth taking cognizance of. We venture to say that there is not one of our readers who cannot bring to mind some or many ways in which he might with advantage to his business follow a little more closely Franklin's admonition to “take care of the pennies.” Practically every issue of HORTICULTURE tells of business embarrassments, here and there in every branch of commercial horticulture. All through these announcements runs the thread of trouble—not alone for the party of the first part, but for all those who directly or indirectly must bear a share, more or less grievous, in the loss. Economy now cannot alter the past but it may in some degree offset its effect. “Locking the stable door after the horse is stolen” is synonymous with a profitless act but, nevertheless, it is not a bad idea to lock it, all the same, and keep it locked hereafter if one proposes to continue keeping horses.

One way out

As we meditate on the course of events in the flower business, seed trade and nursery trade and the particular happenings which prompted the foregoing lines there come to mind the repeated attempts in various trade centers to establish through mutual agreement some basis of credit giving and collections which by its general enforcement would have tended to make impossible most of the paralyzing wrecks of the recent past and which if adopted now would provide some assurance against such catastrophes in the future. The very existence of such precautionary provisions as are in force in other lines of trade would in itself act as a check upon the extravagant living and reckless business methods which are the legitimate children of reckless credit giving. The indifference or blindness, which as our business grows in magnitude, leads us still to saunter along in the slipshod way which was thought good enough in the days of small responsibilities and big profits, is costing us all dearly and he is indeed hopelessly stone-blind who cannot discern the clouds that are yet on the horizon. Greater economy in operation, less of the passion to beat out the other fellow and a stricter accountability on the part of ourselves and all those with whom we deal will go a long way in helping to carry us through these disquieting times.

The information relative to the approaching Headed right S. A. F. Convention at San Francisco and the substantial forecast based on facts already established for the National Flower Show of 1916 at Philadelphia, as presented by Secretary

Rhododendrons and Rhododendron Exhibitions

Editor HORTICULTURE:

Please allow me to apologize to Mr. Koehler and the readers of HORTICULTURE for an inexcusable oversight in the omission of labels from the Hunnewell exhibit of Rhododendrons at the June show. It is my first offence and I will promise you it shall not happen again. I did not attend to the labelling at the proper time; that is, as soon as the blooms were set up. Intended to do it later, and instead, forgot it.

I agree with Mr. Koehler, Rhododendrons are not made the feature at these exhibitions they should be. That, however, cannot be charged against the Hunnewell estate. For many years theirs has been about the only exhibit of these flowers at the Rhododendron show. The feeling that the Rhododendron show was only so-called impressed the committee on prizes and exhibitors so much that they changed the name in the 1915 schedule to the "June" show. I understand the committee have under consideration the offering of special inducements to exhibitors to show Rhododendrons in tubs and in other ways at the May show of 1916, and if this is done, I would venture to ask Mr. Koehler to join in making that show a success as far as concerns the Rhododendron.

I further agree Rhododendrons are not given the prominence they deserve in the planting of estates, and herein may lie the reason why they do not appear at our exhibitions. It takes time to get a collection of Rhododendrons together. It is not all done when the planting is finished. There is much experimenting to do before one finds out just where and how they will do best. There are failures to meet and we need a good deal of persistence to meet them. The average owner objects to the expense and the average gardener to the care required to make them a success, but we think the compensations are worth the effort. I am in doubt, however, whether any "inducements" horticultural organizations may offer will be productive of the results we wish until Rhododendrons become better appreciated as garden plants.

In the 1915 schedule of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society we find No. 178, "Hunnewell Fund, Rhododendrons—Largest and best collection, not less than fifteen distinct varieties, six trusses of each, from plants that have been grown in the open in Massachusetts, for at least three years, two prizes * * * $20, $15." One would think the money inducement offered would be sufficient to bring out good exhibits. It would if they were commonly grown and kept properly named. The proviso that the flowers must be taken from plants that have been grown for three years in the open in Massachusetts should meet Mr. Koehler's suggestion of a means for determining the hardiness of the varieties exhibited.

As to what is hardy and what is tender no "hard and fast" rule can be laid down. Theories have been upset considerably during this past winter. It is more difficult than ever to say what is hardy and what is tender. A plant may be hardy in one place and tender in another, even on the same estate. We naturally look for a reason, and try to fit results to recognized causes. This season they did not fit, either here or anywhere else. Plants have come through perfectly where occasionally they have suffered and vice versa.

Mr. Curtis, of Cornell University, published a classified list of Rhododendrons in HORTICULTURE, in issue of May 3, 1913, in which the matter of hardiness was a feature. It was made up of reports from the Arnold Arboretum, the Hunnewell estate, and the Rochester parks. He has kept it checked up. Today, I have just finished my report to him, from this estate, for the past season. I find no two lists are alike, and in spite of what has been considered an unfavorable winter I am able to mark some hardy, which in previous years were marked tender.

It seems to me the more difficult it is to attain success the more we should appreciate it. Let us hope the tide of Rhododendron culture will rise so that we can again have a Rhododendron show.

Rhododendron Kaempferi

See Cover Illustration.

This scarlet azalea is probably the most ornamental and the most valuable flowering shrub for northern gardens that has been introduced to this country from Japan. It is perfectly hardy as far north as Boston, Mass., and ought to be grown in masses in every garden. It has its home on the mountains of central Japan and it is especially abundant in the Nikko region where it makes a wonderful display during the latter half of May and early June.

In warm localities in Japan this azalea retains its foliage throughout the winter, but in cold districts and at its altitudinal limits it is virtually deciduous. This peculiarity is of value to those who wish to use this azalea as a pot plant for Easter work. If grown in pots and "housed" before the early frost appears its full foliage should be retained as easily as in the Indian azaleas so called.

Kaempferi azalea is a bush four to seven feet tall with twiggy branches, and is extraordinarily floriferous. It does well in almost any well-drained situation but in the full sun the flowers bleach. It is seen to best advantage when planted under the leaf of woods and more especially against the dark background of conifers. In such half shade the flowers retain their full brilliancy and from a distance may be likened to the glow on a dark night from burning charcoal in full blast. This azalea was introduced to the Arnold Arboretum in 1892, by Prof. C. S. Sargent, who collected seeds during a tour in Japan. If this plant has the horticultural value which the writer claims, the reader may rightly ask, since it has been in the country over twenty-two years, why is it not everywhere well known and appreciated. By the numerous amateurs who visit the Arnold Arboretum it is appreciated and one and all desire to possess it. Why this legitimate desire remains ungratified the nurserymen can best supply the answer.

When the professional plant growers for the Christmas and Easter trade of this country properly realize what the devastation of Belgium means insofar as their affairs are concerned and begin to feel a pinch consequent upon the failure of erstwhile supplies, they will of necessity begin to look around for new sources and for substitute materials. Those who heretofore have imported for forcing purposes Belgian azaleas (Rhododendron indicum vars.) will do well to turn their attention to the scarlet azalea of Japan.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS AND ORNAMENTAL HORTICULTURISTS

The attendance at the convention of the S. A. F. and O. H. at the Hotel Hamilton in San Francisco, California, from July 1 to July 15, 1915, has been a most successful one. The attendance at the convention has been considerably larger than was at first anticipated.

President Welch expects that the delegation from Boston and the East will be large enough to fill a car. The New York delegation is already booked numbers fifteen, and in all probability this booking will be at least doubled. These bookings are, of course, exclusive of the attendance of those whose duties will require them to be in San Francisco in advance of the convention dates. The glowing reports concerning horticultural features of the great Exposition in progress in San Francisco, as presented by Chas. H. Totty and others who have returned from the coast, will undoubtedly influence many in their decision to attend the convention, so that a good average general attendance is confidently expected.

Floor plans of the Memorial Auditorium, where the business sessions of the convention and the trade exhibition are to be held, have been sent to all members. These plans show the spaces allotted to exhibitors, and the great adaptability of the building for exhibition purposes. While exhibitors from the far East, owing to distance and high transportation charges, will not occupy such generous display spaces as they have done at other exhibitions, the following have contracted for liberal areas and will make fine displays: H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia; M. Rice Co., Philadelphia; John A. Evans, Richmond, Ind.; The Advance Co., Richmond, Ind.

The secretary will be in San Francisco considerably in advance of the convention and will cheerfully care for and arrange exhibits sent by exhibitors who are unable to attend the exhibition personally. The only request he makes is that such exhibitors communicate with him at once. After July 15, all communications should be addressed to him in care of Daniel MacRorie, vice-president of the Society, 430 Phelan Building, San Francisco, Cal. Any commission entrusted to him will be executed to the best of his ability while in the convention city.

The Welch Prize.

Vice-President Daniel MacRorie is the only one to comply with the rules and regulations governing the President Welch prize offered for the member sending in the greatest number of applications for members before July 1. Mr. MacRorie has already sent in almost one hundred names, and reports that he will complete the hundred by July 1.

The S. A. F. Badge.

The S. A. F. annual badge button has been sent to all members who have remitted for the 1915 assessment. There are a few life members' buttons still available for those entitled to them and same will be sent upon receipt of 75c. It would be a convenience to the secretary if the members who have not already done so will send in their 1915 assessment at once. The receipts to date for dues compare favorably with those of other years.

The printed 1915 Annual Report has also been distributed and a copy should be in the hands of every member in good standing.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

53 W. 28th street, New York.

After July 15, care Daniel MacRorie, 430 Phelan Bldg. San Francisco, Cal.

NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW, PHILADELPHIA.

During the past six months much important work has been done by the National Flower Show Committee of the S. A. F. and O. H., in connection with the Fourth National Flower Show to be held in Convention Hall, Philadelphia, March 25 to April 2 next, and arrangements are rapidly assuming definite form. Chairman George Asmus of Chicago, has been in attendance at several of the meetings of the local executive committee in an advisory capacity, and the committee has had the full benefit of his past experience with such exhibitions. The local executive committee is well organized, and in no other city have the different horticultural interests been so well represented on an exhibition board as in this instance in Philadelphia. This committee will hold regular meetings from the present time until the close of the show.

The various sub-committees, too, are well organized, and are working on the many details of preparatory work harmoniously and with a zeal which leaves no doubt as to a successful outcome. These committees, with their chairmen, are as follows:

Press, Publicity and Advertising, W. J. Throckmorton; Securing Exhibits, Walter Kleinhelm; Decorations, John Habermehl; Special Premiums, Wm. P. Craig; Special Features, Chas. Grakelow; League and Conventions, A. Edenwald; Music, Leo Nissen; Printing, S. S. Petrick; Concessions, Henry E. Michel; Trade Tickets, E. J. Fancourt; Lectures, J. Otto Thlow; Bureau of Information, Frederick Cowperthwaite; Secretary and Treasurer, A. A. Nissen; Committee of Enquiry, George Burton; Louis Burke, Robert Craig.

The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society has been invited to assist in the work of the exhibition and, through Hartman Kuhn, its president, the ladies of the different garden clubs in the vicinity of Philadelphia have been invited to take part in the exhibition, and are already at work on plans to have a tea garden, or something similar, on lines followed by the ladies of the Red Cross at the recent New York show. Sufficient space will be allotted to them by the management for the purpose. An unusual feature and attraction will be exhibits by different societies devoted to aquarium fish and aquarium plants. This section of the show is being taken care of by Frankan Barrett, whose personal exhibit alone will cost almost $600 to stage.

The trade exhibition in connection with the show will be most extensive and comprehensive, and applications for space are coming in rapidly. The H. P. Mitchell Co., Philadelphia, have booked up for Block No. 30, and Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Riverton, N. J., and Philadelphia, for Block No. 1, each containing 1,026 square feet. A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., is among other large exhibitors in this section. Floor plans have been distributed, and extra copies may be had upon application to the superintendent of the trade exhibition.

The guarantors' list will soon reach $10,000, the amount authorized to be raised by the National Flower Show Committee. Subscribers to the guarantors' list, by states, are, so far, as follows:

California—Hans Barth, Daniel MacRorie, L. James, Ant. Zvonacek.
Connecticut—A. N. Pierson, Inc.
Indiana—Bartelme Bros. Co., Bauer & Stenkamp, John A. Evans.
Kansas—Chas. P. Mueller.

So it may be truly said, "The Biggest Floricultural Event of 1916 will be the Fourth National Flower Show in Philadelphia."

CHICAGO FLOWER SHOW.

At a meeting of the executive committee representing the Horticultural Society and the Florists' Club, held June 21, arrangements were materially advanced for the big fall flower show to be held at the Coliseum, November 9 to 14 inclusive. A large part of the $10,000 guarantee fund has already been subscribed.

LANCASTER COUNTY FLORISTS' CLUB.

Ira H. Landis, of Paradise, read a valuable paper on the Field Culture of Carnations at the last meeting, which we shall publish later. The committee on the dahlia show reported having secured some very fair premiums from the Lancaster County Fair Association for the amateur classes. The space allowed for this show has not yet been decided upon. The committee on picnic reported having arranged for a picnic at Rocky Springs Park to take the place of the July meeting, date to be announced later. B. F. Barr announced that the August meeting would be held at his nursery and farm and that the inspection would start at 1 p. m. and be followed by a variety of outdoor sports until 6 p. m. when a light lunch would be served and the meeting called to order. Mr. Barr has arranged for some visiting nurserymen to talk on this occasion. The programme committee had arranged for an Aster Symposium for this August meeting which will have to be deferred until another year.

Mr. Keohane, of the H. F. Michell Co., gave us some interesting remarks on the general condition of business, all of an optimistic nature. Alphonse Peters exhibited a number of climbing roses and surprised us all with an exhibit of Dahlias Georgeous, 20th Century, Jack, Yellow Century and Ami Bertillon.

ALBERT M. HERR.

Mr. Foster exhibited a collection of Spencer sweet peas, also Alaska. Both gentlemen were awarded a certificate of merit. Vice-President Wetterlow appointed Herman Sanford, William Judd and Carl Eicke to serve as discussion committee for the coming year.

W. T.

RHODE ISLAND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

More than 100 varieties of the leading roses were included in the excellent June exhibition of the R. I. Horticultural Society held last week in the Narragansett Hotel, Providence. The excellent opportunity offered for the display of the blooms was taken full advantage of by Superintendent E. K. Thomas and the arrangement added materially to the show. There was an especially good entry in the professional and special premium classes, and the show was pronounced a fine success. A feature, new to the society exhibits, was a demonstration in making up bouquets and floral pieces by a Boston expert. The awards follow:

S. A. G.

WESTCHESTER AND FAIRFIELD HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The Annual Summer Exhibition of this society was a grand success. The number and quality of the exhibits were noteworthy. The exhibition was staged in the main assembly room of the Town Hall in Greenwich, Conn. The attendance was very good indeed. In the classes set apart for amateurs and those not employing professional help the entries were numerous and some really good and well grown flowers, fruits and vegetables were in evidence:

The Geo. E. Baldwin Co. of Marlborough were awarded a certificate of merit for a fine display of orchids. Scott Bros. of Elmsford, N. Y., a certificate of merit for roses and perennials; the J. H. Troy Nurseries of New Rochelle, N. Y., also the A. N. Pierson Co. of Cromwell, Ct., honorable mention for displays of roses.

Many novelties among the hybrid tea roses were noted, as well as a number of new ramblers. The competition in the private gardener classes

The old officers were all re-elected except that A. H. Fewkes of Newton Highlands, Mass., succeeds E. B. George as vice-president. The next meeting and exhibition will be held in June, 1916, at the American Museum of Natural History, New York City.

PEONY SHOW AT BOSTON

The joint exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society and the American Peony Society at Horticultural Hall, Boston, on Saturday and Sunday, June 19 and 20 was a brilliant spectacle, altogether the most extensive and impressive showing of peonies ever seen in Boston. The effect was enhanced by very large groupings of herbaceous flowers in which irises and campanulas predominated. Roses of rare quality, strawberries, etc., and the entire space of the three halls was filled with exhibits. The displays of herbaceous perennials from the exhibitors named in the prize awards have never been excelled even in Boston.

R. & J. Farquhar & Co., had the largest display, filling 600 sq. ft. of floor space. The sensation of the peony show was their two vases of the superb Richardson production Walter Faxon. The collection by the secretary of the Peony Society, A. P. Saunders of Clinton, N. Y., contained some 200 varieties. Another immense display was that of T. C. Thurlow's Sons Co., which comprised over 1,000 blooms in 137 named varieties. The new variety Cherry Hill was a prime attraction in this exhibit. It was originally shown under the name of Gov. Guild, but not disseminated. Other large peony groups were staged by J. K. Alexander, Blue Hill Nurseries, Mrs. Mary Flood, George N. Smith of Wellesley Nurseries and others.

The roses did not make the showing that was expected, the date being a few days too early for this backward season, but the quality was very fine. In strawberries which were also backward the interest centered around the new undiscovered variety Judith shown by F. S. De Lue, which won the coveted silver medal.

The gold medal of the American Peony Society for the best exhibit of peonies was well won by T. C. Thurlow's Sons Co. A. P. Saunders received the silver medal for an unnamed seedling. The prizes for 25 named varieties, one of a kind, were won, 1st by A. H. Fewkes; 2nd, by T. C. Thurlow's Sons Co. President Farr had a small collection which did not reach the hall until Saturday evening. Cottage Gardens sent a splendid vase of the fine white Marie Lemoine, from Queens, N. Y., which was a convincing proof of the value of this variety as a late bloomer. The list of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society awards was as follows:

Peonies—Collection of twenty varieties, double: 1st, A. P. Saunders; 2nd, T. C. Thurlow's Sons Co. Ten varieties, double: 1st, T. C. Thurlow's Sons Co.; 2nd, Mrs. Frederick Kellogg. This society held a very successful rose show in Madison, N. J., on June 17. There were no money prizes offered and the use of the hall was donated. Among the names on the list of winners were:

Wm. Duckham, Mrs. Elwood Brant, David Francis, Robert Francis, Frank Cullen, Robert Tyson, L. A. Lockwood, Mrs. W. P. Jenks, Emil Graber and Charles Barbour. The same exhibitors were largely represented in the miscellaneous section, also Mrs. C. H. Stout, Short Hills, who received a special for sweet peas, and E. Leandle, also for sweet peas. Robert Tyson received a cultural certificate for greenhouse grapes. Certificates were also given to L. A. Lockwood for peonies, C. H.

Totty for roses, Mrs. Brant for blue rambler rose, E. Gruber a silver medal for standard fuchsias, R. D. Foote certificate of merit for Cattleya gigas Sanderiana, and Ed Reagan cultural certificate for delphiniums, anchusa and campanulas.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

The Paterson (N. J.) Floricultural Society gave a free flower show at the Second National Bank on Saturday, June 12. Among the large exhibits were peonies from George H. Peterson, and roses from Richard Petrie, W. E. Parker, J. C. Hardy, Matthew Morgan, Jas. Schofield and others. First, second and third prizes were awarded in 31 classes.

The Central New York Horticultural Society gave a successful peony show in Butler Memorial Hall, New Hartford, on Tuesday evening, June 15. Prof. A. P. Saunders of Clinton made a fine exhibit of peonies and Dr. W. A. Rowlands of Utica was represented by a good showing of carnations and sweet peas. There were about twenty exhibitors in all.

The annual June exhibition of the Medford (Mass.) Horticultural Society was held in the vestry of the Mystic Church on Saturday, the 19th. Owing to the lateness of the season, roses were somewhat scarce. Some good roses, clean and well grown, but only partly open, were staged by Mrs. Gates, Miss Hatch, Miss McKay and Josiah Teel. Peonies were extra good. Mrs. Roberts and Hon. Wilton B. Fay being the principal winners. Mrs. Roberts also had a grand lot of iris very artistically arranged. Fine bachelor's buttons and foxgloves won prizes for Mrs. Higly. Mrs. Hall won on table decoration. On the whole the exhibition was one of the best the society has held. Eric Wetterlow, John Jaffrey and A. Magnuson, Manchester, Mass., acted as judges.

The president of the Society is Mrs. Lester Williams; Mrs. Harry Randall, secretary; Miss R. M. Arrington, treasurer. GEORGE F. STEWART.

RHODODENDRONS IN THE ARBOLD ARBORETUM.

In the Bulletin issued April 28th attention was called to the damage which the rhododendrons in the Arboretum had suffered during the winter, and it was suggested that it was caused by the severe drought of the autumn, followed by the unprecedented drought of March and early April, and not by cold which had not been exceptional. The Arboretum rhododendrons certainly suffered from drought, but dryness alone will hardly account for such a destruction, for in other places near Boston plants in much drier and more exposed positions than those in the Arboretum are reported to have come through the winter uninjured. Some of the plants which were killed here have been twenty-five or thirty years in the country. These plants were grafted on Rhododendron ponticum, a plant which is not hardy here and is therefore not suitable stock for Catawbiense hybrid rhododendrons to be grown in this climate. It is well known that these old grafted plants often lose large branches from what gardeners call "canker," and it is not impossible that the old plants killed in the Arboretum have been gradually failing for several years from the influence of the stock on which they had been grafted, and were therefore susceptible to extreme climate conditions. This view is borne out by the fact that when plants of a particular kind were killed and others of the same kind were not killed it was always the oldest and largest plants of the variety that suffered. It has generally been supposed that it was the cross with R. arbutum and other Indian species which has made so many of the varieties of R. catawbiense tender in this climate, but some of the varieties which show in their bright red flowers this influence, like Atrorubrum, Charles Dickens, and H. W. Sargent are uninjured, while many of the pale-flowered kinds like Lady Grey Egerton, Mrs. H. S. Hunnewell and Delicatissimum have been killed. The last is a hybrid between R. catawbiense and R. arbutum, and for the last thirty years has been considered one of the hardiest and most desirable of the rhododendrons which have been planted in New England. Plants of the following catawbiense varieties have been killed in the Arboretum, but of the varieties marked with a star one or more, but not all the individuals in the collection, have been killed. On many plants which have not otherwise suffered the buds have been killed or injured. Adolf*, Alarich, Albin, Alfred, Atrorubrum*, Bismarck*, Bluebell, Butlerianum*, Circé, Daniel, Delicatissimum*, Diana*, Duchess of Connaught, Earl of Shannon, Esge, Elysium, Fee, F. L. Ames*, F. B. Hayes*, Hanna Felix*, Herkules, Jay Gould, King of the Purples*, Lady Grey Egerton*, Madame Wagner, Marquis of Waterford*, Mum, Mrs. Harry Ingersoll*, Mrs. H. S. Hunnewell, Mnemoisyné, Prometheus*, R. S. Field*, Salmonium roseum, Sir H. Hav-erlock.

On the whole the different forms of R. caucasicum have come through the winter in comparatively good condition. The plants of the varieties Cleo and Ochroleucum have been killed, and the flower-buds of a few others have suffered. The following varieties however, are uninjured, or have suffered only slightly: Boule de Neige, Coriaceum, Jacksonii and Mont Blanc.

In some years, when conditions are comparatively favorable, rhododendrons flourish in this climate; in other years when conditions are less favorable they suffer. Compared with these plants as they grow in England and Scotland, rhododendrons are never really successful here. This is not a climate for rhododendrons, that is for the sort of rhododendrons European nurserymen usually propagate and send to this country. It is true some of them can be kept alive here for a great many years but they require special care. The soil in which they grow best has to be specially prepared for them; they require shelter from the sun of early spring, and a great deal of moisture. Of late years they have suffered terribly from the attacks of the lace-wing fly which turns the leaves brown and makes them fall prematurely, thus weakening the plant. Rhododendrons, like many other plants of the Heath family, cannot grow in soil impregnated with lime; they are not hardy very far north of Boston, and south of Philadelphia, except in the elevated regions of the interior, it is too hot for them in summer, so that the region in the eastern states where these plants can be grown at all is not a large one. Here in eastern Massachusetts there are only four species of broad-leaved evergreen rhododendrons which are perfectly hardy; these are the native R. maximum, R. catawbiense from the high slopes of the southern Appalachian Mountains, R. carolinianum from the same region, and R. Smirnowii from the Caucasus, and if we can hope for a race of hybrid rhododendrons better suited to the conditions of the New England climate than any we now possess, it will be obtained by mingling the blood of these four species and by excluding entirely the blood of the Himalayan species to which the garden rhododendrons of Europe owe a large part of the brilliancy of their flowers.

Rhododendron Smirnowii.

This is a plant from which a good deal may be expected. It has been growing in the Arboretum for several years and has not suffered from cold or drought. When, however, the plant is fully exposed to the sun the leaves often droop and their edges infold, and it does better in partial shade. The leaves are pale grayish green above and below are thickly covered with pale felt which successfully protects them from the attacks of the lace-wing fly. The flowers are of good size and of pleasant shades of pink or rosy pink, and are borne in large clusters. As compared with the dark green leaves of R. catawbiense those of this plant are less attractive, but the flowers are much more beautiful in color and are equally large. Several hybrids of R. Smirnowii with varieties of R. catawbiense have been raised in Europe, and there are a few of these in the Arboretum collection. They have proved to be good garden plants here, flowering earlier than R. Smirnowii and producing larger pink flowers; they have never been injured in the Arboretum, but as there is only a trace of the felt left on their leaves they will probably suffer from the lace-wing fly. Rhododendron carolinianum is said to have suffered last winter in a few places near Boston, but it was uninjured in the Arboretum and in several other Massachusetts gardens. It is the most beautiful of the dwarf small-flowered rhododendrons which can be grown in this climate and may prove valuable to cross with other species.

SEED TRADE

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION

Officers—President, Lester L. Morse, San Francisco, Calif.; First Vice-President, J. M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I.; Second Vice-President, E. C. Dungan, Philadelphia, Pa.; Secretary and Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.; Assistant Secretary, S. F. Willard, Jr., Cleveland, O.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

The American Seed Trade Association is in session at San Francisco as we go to press. We take pleasure in presenting the address of President Morse and the report of Secretary Kendel. We had hoped to receive telegraphic reports on the proceedings in time for this issue but it's a long, long way from San Francisco to Boston and nothing further has come to hand. Full report will appear next week.

President Lester L. Morse's Address, in Part.

The year of my administration has been uneventful so far as affairs affecting the American seedsmen is concerned. The trade has had a normal season with no great shortages except on certain kinds of beans and no great overproduction of any particular line. When the war broke out, a feeling of fear and distrust filled us with grave doubt as to whether or not seeds from the belligerent countries would be delivered and as to whether or not seeds grown here for delivery abroad could be shipped. Except in a few isolated cases, I understand that practically all contracts were delivered either in full or pro rata when short, and most of the growers on this side were able to fill their contracts. So the season proved to be one of fair averages all round. If there was some reason for doubt as to deliveries last autumn, there is greater cause for fear this year. Any sort of prediction will be idle and all we can do at this time is to hope. In spite of the fact that large areas of such crops as are usually secured from Europe are being grown in America, there are many things that will be very greatly affected if they are not secured from Europe since even with a good crop in this country, there will still be a serious shortage of many varieties. I understand there is a large acreage of turnip and cabbage in the northwest, while in California there is a liberal acreage of radish and carrot and some table beet. Most of the sugar factories, I understand, have protected themselves with an acreage of beets for seed. The California flower seed growers have planted a good acreage of standard varieties which will take care of some lines, but there are many varieties of flowers and vegetables which are only used in limited quantity and which a seedsman needs badly for catalogue and store trade. These items will keep the retail dealer in a dilemma for a good part of the coming months or until he finally learns whether he can or cannot get them. Stocks of all kinds, I understand, are pretty well cleaned up and the trade generally is ready for a good harvest.

Legislation.

The principal matters of interest to the association during the past year have been those affecting legislation. The legislatures of most of the states were in session last winter and in a number of states some attempt was made to pass legislation affecting the seed trade. The details of these matters will be duly considered in the report of our attorney, Curtis Nye Smith. On the whole, the proposed legislation was less unjust and unwise than it has been in the past and there is a cheerful evidence of a better understanding between the public, lawmakers, and the seed trade.

The Disclaimer.

The grower and dealer in vegetable seeds must insist on the protection of the disclaimer, and we must contest all efforts to nullify it. The market gardener and large planter must know as we do that there is a certain element of risk in planting seeds for a marketable crop. We who know that all varieties of cabbage, turnip, cauliflower, rape, mustard and kindred types of Brassica are similar if not identical in appearance; that the seed of thirty colors, types and varieties of onion seed all looks alike, that the seed of mangels, beets and chard in all their multitude of variety is identical in appearance, know that mistakes are going to occur, this, too, in spite of intelligence and system in handling seed. If guaranteed seed means surety for the resulting crop or, in other words, if ten dollars' worth of celery seed means the responsibility for a thousand dollars' worth of crop with no share in the ultimate anticipated profit, then we are in a business too hazardous to warrant credit. The banks would soon put us all in the war risk class if they believed we were in such a business. The terrible results in loss of business in event of error is sufficient punishment to compel the utmost care and vigilance on the part of the seedsman.

I believe that the seed grower and dealer are both trying to produce and sell reliable seed and I believe that threatened punishment will have but Membership.

Our association has been invited by the American Vegetable Growers' Association to join with them in an attempt to regulate nomenclature. While our association has had a committee on nomenclature at various times, it has never been able to accomplish any definite results. It is well, however, that we appoint a committee and a good strong one to work with the vegetable growers. Their suggested rules for registration of garden vegetables are excellent, and while I doubt that any rule can be rigidly enforced, it will certainly be well to make some attempt to control the naming of varieties.

SEED TRADE NOTES.

Report of the awards at the Sweet Pea Show in San Francisco has not yet reached us, but we learn that A. C. Zvolanek is the happy winner of the

YARRAWA

The Sweet Pea par-excellence for Winter Flowering under glass.

We were awarded Certificates of Merit for this superb novelty at the International Flower Show in New York, March, 1914, and at the Spring Show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, Philadelphia, March, 1915.

YARRAWA is absolutely fixed—and true to color and type.

YARRAWA is a true winter flowering, invariably giving an excellent account of itself whether grown in pots, boxes, raised benches or solid beds.

YARRAWA has the best foliage and rank strong growth of the summer flowering type and is a true winter blooming Spencer. From seed sown early in October at Fordhook Farms, the plants came into bloom December 20th and flowered profusely until May. The flowers are exquisitely waved and when well grown will average two and one-half inches in diameter, many of them being double or double flowered, thus adding greatly to the general effect of the bunch. They become usually in fours on extra long, strong stems. The color is most perfect shade of bright rose pink, with light wings.

As the supply of seed will be limited we advise ordering early.

Floradale-grown seed exclusively

1-4 oz. $1.00; per oz. $3.50; per 1-4 lb. $12.50

gold medal for the best exhibit of sweet peas.

The value of horticultural imports into New York for the week ending June 12, is given as follows: Nitrate of soda, $336,405; grass seed, $1,582; fertilizer, $1,618; trees and plants, $1,800.

Lochner & Co., New York City, are in receipt of an interesting communication from Einar Knutsson, representative of Hjalmar Hartmann & Co., of Copenhagen, Denmark, dated at Petrograd, Russia. Mr. Knutsson says that the war does not seem to be felt much in Petrograd. He had been there for several weeks and did an excellent business in the seed specialties for which his house is well known.

CORNELL STUDENTS VISIT BOSTON.

A party consisting of Professors Bryant Fleming, Ralph W. Curtis, E. G. Montillon, E. G. Lawson, an instructor and eight senior students, all from the Department of the College of Agriculture at Cornell University, have been visiting Boston and vicinity during the past week.

Their itinerary while in Boston included the city parks and playgrounds, the Metropolitan Park Reservations of the Charles River Basin, Blue Hills, Middlesex Fells and Revere Beach, the Arnold Arboretum, Faulkner Farm and Weld Gardens, the Harvard School of Landscape Architecture and the Harvard Botanic Garden, many quaint old places at Salem and the following estates at Prides Crossing, along the North Shore, Frick's, Swift's, Moore's, Spalding's and Evans'.

A brief visit was also made to the offices of the Olmsted Brothers, landscape architects, and another visit to the Annual Rose and Peony Show at Horticultural Hall. The members of the party enjoyed every minute of their stay and are unanimous in their praise of Boston's many and varied examples of landscape development.

The party arrived on Friday, June 18, and left on Wednesday, June 23. They visited several places at Newport and then went to New York City. Professor Curtis remained behind for a longer stay at the Arnold Arboretum and returns to Cornell University today.

NEWS ITEMS FROM EVERYWHERE

NEW YORK.

Admiral U. S. B. Smith is to fly to New York by the Albatross tomorrow.

The Park Society is holding a whole sale sale at 11 P. M. every day for the summer months.

Charles Lacroix, Fifth Avenue store will be closed from Saturday noon until Monday morning each week throughout the summer.

The retail trade of New York city, more especially in the class of stores catering to the Fifth and Madison avenue people has been at a very low point ever since the sinking of the Lusitania.

The New York and New Jersey Association of Plant Growers will hold their next regular meeting at the secretary's office in the Queens Plaza Court Bldg., Bridge Plaza, Long Island City, on Tuesday, June 29, at 1:30 P. M. There will be a social meeting and immediately thereafter the members will go via automobiles to Feltman's at Coney Island for a dinner. The automobiles will be furnished by the members. All who participate will be expected to pay a proportionate share of what is spent at Feltman's.

The 15th annual outing and games of the New York Florists' Club will take place on Wednesday, July 14 at Witzel's Point View Grove, College Point. The committee in charge of this important event consists of F. W. Armitage, chairman; Louis Schmutz, Jr., A. J. Guttman, E. W. Holt, V. L. Morgan, J. W. Wagentohr, A. M. Henshaw, J. Hauck, Alex. Burns, Jr., Peter Denyse, Jr., J. J. Lane, L. W. C. Tut-hill, R. G. Wilson, A. Demusey, Jr., E. A. Manda, Sam. Redstone, J. Buerlein, Emil Schloss, J. W. Reimels, A. H. Donaldson and Victor S. Dorval.

The Greek American Picnic, another popular outing takes place one week earlier at the same grounds.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Southern Pacific Railway Co. is putting in a new depot down the peninsula, which is located on the MacRorie-McLaren nursery property.

Many of the business places in Oakland, Berkeley and Alameda, including florist shops, closed on Alameda County Day at the exposition in order to participate in that event.

The Oregon Rose Festival, which was celebrated at the Oregon building at the exposition the first of the week created an extra demand for roses that drained the local market. Two orders alone called for 20,000 blooms.

The Fairmont Floral Co. on Powell street supplied one of the largest orders for American Beauties they ever handled a few days ago when they decorated the Manx Hotel in honor of the arrival of a delegation of sixty young women, winners in a beauty contest, to visit the exposition.

CHICAGO.

George Ashmus, says that S. Miller stores are busy filling orders for June weddings and commencements, principally the former.

Van S. Rogers, of Saugatuck, Mich., who opened a new store last spring was a visitor here. He reports a good trade, especially in bedding stock.

Miss Gertrude Lewis, whose artistic work among the flowers at J. Mangel's is recognized as among the best in Chicago, leaves this week for a summer at Winnipeg and points in British Columbia.

Jas. S. Wilson was in Chicago with the Des Moines Advertising Club, of which he is a member and which is meeting in Chicago this week as a part of the Advertising Clubs of the World, now in convention here.

How to entertain the eastern delegation when here, on their way to San Francisco, is occupying the minds of a joint committee from the Chicago Florists' Club and the Park Superintendents. Chicago hospitality is too well known to leave any doubts as to its wish to welcome the travelers.

The W. L. Palinsky greenhouses at 2865 Palmer street are offered for sale to close up the estate of Mr. Palinsky, whose death occurred last August. Description will be found on another page. The property can be divided. Mr. Palinsky was a pioneer florist whose property, at first far out, is now in a residence district.

News of the success of the Flower Show committee in securing the use of the Coliseum for a fall flower show was received with pleasure by the trade in general. It is usually regarded as a stimulus to the use of flowers during the winter. The various sub-committees will hold meetings this week and the work will be pushed rapidly forward.

Word was received here of the death of D. U. Augspurger, of Peoria, Ill., on Sunday, June 20. The funeral was on Tuesday. Mr. Augspurger was the head of the firm of D. U. Augspurger & Sons and has been for many years actively engaged in the florists' business. His frequent trips to Chicago gave him a wide acquaintance here and he will be missed by his friends in the trade.

Samuel Garner, of 4309 N. Kostner avenue, believes that a city lot can be made beautiful and yield a profit at the same time. On the rear half of a 50x150 ft. lot he has 200 peonies, including the choicest varieties, and his place is visited daily during the blooming season by scores of flower lovers. Mr. Garner sells a limited quantity of his plants each year. He formerly devoted this space to a rose garden but he says "Roses have all the diseases and bugs that plants are heir to" and he takes more pleasure in his big peony beauties.

New Bedford, Mass.—Business among the local florists is still far from dull. Geraniums continue in brisk demand and are not always easy to get.

PHILADELPHIA.

The deeds of Robert Morris were recalled and his memory honored when a tablet was unveiled at the luncheon of the Chestnut Street Business Men's Association, June 15, in the Hotel Adelphia. Dr. Ellis Paxton Oberholzer extolled the financier of the Revolution as having accomplished even more for American independence than did George Washington, Benjamin Franklin or Thomas Jefferson.

The tablet will be erected outside the store of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Nos. 714 and 716 Chestnut street, within a few days. This site is chosen because it was on this ground Morris planned to erect a residence calculated to surpass in magnificence any building in the land. He laid the foundations, which still are to be seen in the basement of the Dreer and other properties in the row, just before he met financial misfortune, which resulted in his being thrown in the debtors' jail.

The tablet is bronze and bears the inscription, "Site of the residence of Robert Morris, statesman and financier. Born 1734. Died 1806. Founded Bank of North America in 1781. Buried in Christ Church. This tablet is erected to his memory by the Chestnut Street Business Men's Association."

The Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. will be under new management after July 1. R. C. Hayden, who was the founder and backer of the company, has sold out his interest to his manager, Geo. Aeugle. Mr. Aeugle is young and enthusiastic and we look to him as a comer in the commission field.

MacDonald's Grass Blankets have frequently been mentioned in these columns as well as all other gardening papers. It is worth noting, however, that an enterprising firm, who do business in lawn sprinklers, has been using this ready means of improvising a lawn in their shop window, with a sprinkler at work over its surface. It's a good idea, and it should set the minds of some of our big seedsmen at work thinking out equally ingenious schemes for making their shop windows more attractive.

The foregoing from an English trade paper "sounds reasonable!"—as Bo's'n Trainer would say. But how about our American pastmasters in window decorations, like Philip Freud, of Michell's, for instance. Wouldn't he smile if he should ever happen to read a paragraph like that!

ST. LOUIS.

A committee consisting of W. A. Rowe, W. Edwards and Hugo Gross has been appointed by the County Growers' Association to meet the wholesalers and try to persuade them to continue Sunday opening as heretofore so they could dispose of their Saturday morning cut.

Merchantville, N. J.—Mrs. M. A. Seaman became Mrs. Wm. S. Johnston, June 15th. Mr. Johnston is in the grocery business; but it is said that he is also an experienced florist—and this will no doubt develop added importance to the Seaman floral establishment.

THE FLORISTS' SUPPLY HOUSE OF AMERICA

H. BAYERSDORFER & CO., 1129 Arch Street, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

WASHINGTON.

A committee of florists is actively engaged in the preparation of plans for what may prove to be the most successful outing ever held by the Florists' Club of Washington, D. C. The affair is to be held at Great Falls, Va., early next month.

George W. Hess, superintendent of the United States Botanic Gardens, and William F. Gude just returned from a visit to Barnegat Bay where they were the guests of Commodore Wescott upon the opening of the rod and gun club at that place.

Congratulations are being heaped upon the popular young manager of the Washington Floral Company, J. Harper Hetherington, who was last Wednesday evening married to Miss Alice Cramer, formerly in the employ of the same concern as bookkeeper. Mr. Hetherington has been connected with the firm for the past five years, having previously been employed by Fred H. Kramer. He is the son of Joseph H. Hetherington, who is employed by the Robert Craig Company in Philadelphia, and has had a long experience for so young a man in the florists' business. He was made manager of the company following its recent reorganization. Miss Cramer at first acted as salesgirl and some little time ago she was made bookkeeper and cashier, remaining in that capacity until a week or so previous to her marriage. The young couple are at present spending their honeymoon in Atlantic City.

PITTSBURGH.

C. F. Mancke, of the Zieger Company, will leave shortly to spend his vacation at Atlantic City.

Vorbert Huttinger, who is in the store of Mrs. E. A. Williams, has the sympathy of his friends and acquaintances in the death of his mother, Mrs. Huttinger, of the North Side, last Monday evening.

Randolph & McClements have planted the grounds of their next door neighbor, the East Liberty Presbyterian Church, with a large bed of holyhocks, poppies, larkspur, fox glove, etc., with a border of pinks. Nearby is a mound of crotons and a crescent of coleus.

The horticultural department opened by the Rosenbaum Company in the basement of and simultaneously with the new store, has been abandoned. McCreery & Co., who began the sale of cut flowers a few weeks ago, have also dispensed with this feature "as long as there are so many outdoor flowers."

Those who visited the Joseph Horne Company store's celebration of Rose Day expressed the keenest admiration. These displays comprised some set pieces planned and executed by the young women and men of the store. For these the firm awarded several prizes through a committee. Many thousands of roses were used in conjunction with merchandise and store displays. Rose Day will be a recognized feature to continue in years to come.

BOSTON.

P. Welch has been away for the past week looking after his interests in Montreal and Albany.

The Garden Committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, under the personal conduct of President Farquhar visited the rose gardens of Miss Fay and M. H. Walsh at Woods Hole on Thursday, June 24.

Peirce Bros., of Waltham, have won the gratitude of the public and a nice amount of newspaper publicity by announcing that on a certain day they would give away 10,000 rose plants which had been growing in their houses for the past season, the distribution taking place at three public school buildings.

OBITUARY.

D. U. Augspurger.

D. U. Augspurger, senior member of the firm of Augspurger & Sons, Peoria, Ill., died on June 20.

Karl Koenig.

Following a brief attack of pleuropneumonia the death of Karl Koenig took place last Saturday at his home in Millvale, Pa. Mr. Koenig, who was aged 44, came from Germany in 1889, since which he has been engaged in the floral business. At the time of his death he was the largest and most successful wholesale grower of bulbs and lilies in the Pittsburgh section. Mr. Koenig is survived by his widow, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Fisher Koenig; four sons and five daughters.

Albert C. Rott.

Albert C. Rott, retail florist of Joliet, Ill., passed away at his home in that city, June 18, after a few days illness. Mr. Rott has been connected with the florists' business practically all his life, first in Chicago, then with the Thompson Carnation Co. and then taking over their store for himself. He was ably assisted by Mrs. Rott who will continue the business. Mr. Rott had not been well for some time, but was able to attend to business up to a week ago. Interment took place at Bloomington, Ill.

James H. McKay

One of the victims of the serious drowning tragedy at Atlantic City last Sunday, June 20, in which eight bathers lost their lives, was James H. McKay, a well-known retail florist of Philadelphia, whose store was located in the Kensington district for many years. He was a successful business man and highly respected in the trade. He was born in Scotland 51 years ago and came to this country when about twenty. A widow and four children survive him, also a brother, who is in the real estate business and with whom Mr. McKay was associated.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON The market here is at a dead standstill. For the past two weeks it has been on the down grade and, from the appearance of the wholesale market tables and according to the record of past seasons at this date there is no likelihood of recovering for some time. All flowers are in over-loaded profusion and only a small percentage of the product coming in is disposed of at quoted rates. Large quantities fail utterly to find a taker and have to be either thrown away or unloaded on terms which are practically the same thing. Carnations are the worst sufferers, judging from the wagon loads of blooms which encumber the market. Roses are not much different but they are of a little better quality, so far, and do not show the effects of the advancing season to such an extent as the carnations do. American Beauty is the best seller at present but at figures considerably lower than in previous years at this date. Peonies are about finishing up. The placing of peony buds in cold storage as is done in some other places is not practiced here.

CHICAGO The rain has stopped for three consecutive days and florists are again optimistic. Not all the downpour of the past six weeks can make a florist remain a pessimist when the sun shines three days in succession and Chicago florists are quick to see the bright side. The week end was not so bad. Flowers did not bring a high price, but they were moved without touching the lowest figures of the season. The tendency is to special quotations on large lots and frequently on lots that cannot be considered large so the buyer within a small radius of this market finds it well to come here frequently and buy in person. Peonies are still coming in, in spite of the fact that rain has played havoc with many fields. Stock is also being taken from storage and wholesalers report it coming out in good condition and selling readily at a fair price. Outdoor sweet peas are cutting down prices. Carnations are selling—at any price—some days to avoid accumulation. All kinds of roses can be bought in any quantity and almost at any price. There is plenty of miscellaneous stock.

CINCINNATI The market generally is in an oversupply. Receipts of all seasonable flowers are very heavy while the demand for them is not very large. Prices, naturally, with this set of circumstances, are low. Shipping business holds up pretty well. Roses are very plentiful and include many excellent blooms. Gladioli have a fair market. Good longiflorum lilies, Auratum lilies, lily of the valley and orchids may be had in fair quantities. Cut hardy hydrangea are now in the market. Carnations do not sell very well. The supply of greens is large.

NEW YORK Summer listlessness is rapidly enveloping the entire flower market here. The closing days of June show a little activity in the sweet pea call due to the school closing exercises and the stock available for this is abundant and excellent. Other than this wee bit of comfort there is little of encouragement in the situation or the immediate outlook. Peonies are about finished locally, but some cold storage blooms are in evidence which find a fair market. The push-carts in the downtown streets which were loaded last week with peonies, are still in evidence but carnations have taken the place of the peonies. The quality of both carnations and roses is fine and the debilitating effect of summer heat is not yet apparent. There is a large supply of lily of the valley in sight, much of it in over-ripe shape, mute evidence of the enormously excessive supply which the growers have been putting out in anticipation of the June wedding and graduation demand. Of lilies there is still an unweildy surplus and the standard of value for this product is now at an unprecedentedly low point. We have never seen so many superb cattleyas in the market. They are on every wholesaler's table but their prestige seems to have disappeared and they must now share with the more plebeian material the knocks of an unsympathetic market. Quantities of campanulas, sweet williams and similar flower garden products are in at present, also various rambler roses in bunches of sprays. These seasonable outdoor flowers seem to find preference with many retailers for show window adornment, together with water lilies, larkspurs, gypsophilas, sweet sultans and other odds and ends not obtainable as a rule at any other season.

Big oversupply
PHILADELPHIA here last week.
Piles and piles of boxes never opened. Roses a dollar a thousand. Carnations about as bad. Sweet peas much of the stock arriving in poor condition and unsalable at any price. Please excuse. Painful subject. The Leo Niessen Co. announces that early closing will commence July 1. On and after that date store will close at 5 p. m. until further notice.

Flower Market Reports

There was no special activity in the flower market here the past week, but general business seems to be keeping up a little better than usual for this time of the year on account of the increased travel through the city and the large number of special events in connection with the exposition, which follow each other in rapid succession. Several downtown shops have been featuring baskets, especially arranged as "Bon Voyage" gifts or favors to arriving guests, and a considerable demand is reported for such pieces. There is little change in the nature of the stock offered since the last report, with the exception of sweet peas and carnations being in somewhat lighter supply, with quality hardly so good. First-class carnations are really scarce and bring high prices, while ordinary stock is hard to move even at low figures. Gladioli are plentiful, but the offerings clean up nicely from day to day. Panama, America and Mrs. Francis King are the principal favorites. Dahlias are improving in quality and next week promises to be still better. A few very fine Delice are coming in. A liberal supply of gardenias finds a ready outlet, the specimens being of fine quality. All varieties of roses are exceptionally plentiful except long-stemmed American Beauties. The latter are scarce and are readily absorbed. Many of the staple lines are above average quality. Ophelia rose is very fine; Hadley is popular, and Aaron Ward has a good call. Rambler rose sprays are a strong feature for decorative work.

The wholesale market ST. LOUIS has plenty of everything in season and prices are unchanged. The biggest day in the wholesale district since Easter was on Saturday, June 19, when it was announced that the market would close on Saturday at noon and remain so until Monday morning. This announcement brought a protest from the local growers and some of the retailers but it was enforced just the same. Great cuts of carnations, roses, sweet peas and gladioli have been coming in. The demand was much better than for some time, still there is quite a lot of stock left over daily. Lily of the valley and white flowers sold best all last week.

The retailers have been having things pretty well their own way during the past week or ten days as the coming of hot weather has caused a marked depression in the local flower market and those selling flowers at wholesale would feel very well satisfied could they but move a fourth of the heavy supply of stock of all kinds which is coming in. The dull season has set in in earnest. Lily of the valley was the week's best seller, but even this did not clean up. Peonies are at an end. Roses and carnation of local production are getting very poor. Some excellent stock is being received from the north but is not being purchased to any great extent. Plenty of exceptionally fine Cattleya gigas are to be had but the demand is limited. The gross amount

Miss Clara Wilson, daughter of James S. Wilson, of Des Moines, Ia., and Irving Randolph Branner also of Des Moines were married in Chicago, Saturday, June 19.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

Edmonton, Alberta. A. E. Potte has made an assignment to J. A. MacKinnon.

Samuel Lum, for many years a well-known rose grower of Chatham, N. J., has gone into bankruptcy. Schedules of liabilities are not yet available but the amount is said to be more than $40,000. Harry O. May, as representing the Chatham Trust Co. and Summit Trust Co., has been appointed temporary receiver. Two wholesale houses in New York City have claims for cash advanced, we understand, but the failure is said to be due to unprofitable oil stock investments and note endorsements and does not involve florist trade people to the number and extent that such affairs usually do. The greenhouses comprise about 38,000 square feet.

SCOTCH SOOT

Where there is a house that is just full of buds almost ready to show color, nothing will turn better color into the flowers than a little soot, that can be scattered over the benches before watering. The amount applied should not be excessive, as the soot is very strong and may damage some of the foliage somewhat. Apply just enough to blacken the surface of the soil in the benches, and let it go at that. Better a little oftener than too much all at once.

We offer the genuine in original cwt.

NEW GIPSY MOTH QUARANTINE REGULATIONS.

Christmas Trees and Christmas Greens
May Now Be Shipped After Inspection.

New regulations for the quarantine on account of the gipsy moth and the brown-tail moth in New England become effective July 1, and copies of the new quarantine, known as No. 22, may now be obtained from the Department of Agriculture. The new regulations extend somewhat the territory quarantined for gipsy moth, but do not affect that quarantined for the brown-tail moth. On the other hand, in the territory quarantined for gipsy moth Christmas trees and Christmas greens may now be shipped out after they have been inspected by department agents and found free from egg-masses of this insect. Hitherto, movement of these products in interstate commerce was not allowed under any circumstances from the infested area. Other provisions of the quarantine remain in general much the same.

Stone and quarry products must be inspected for egg clusters as well as such forest products as logs, poles, etc.

You Can Teach A Parrot To Say

"Just As Good!"

But—

He Won't Know What He Is Talking About

YESTERDAY when I was riding in the street car, these words in an advertisement caught my eye. At once it popped into my mind that they exactly fitted some one who always buys on price alone, and are always telling you that what they buy is just as good.

But you and I know different. Take the question of commercial houses for example. It's a well understood fact that the leading greenhouse manufacturers make mighty little on such building.

The margin of profit is so small in fact, that if one of our competitors quotes you a much lower price; it's pretty safe to infer that the corners are going to be cut somewhere.

When a man claims that such a house is "just as good," won't it after this make you think of the parrot?

Sit down a minute while I tell you a secret. We do not claim to make a house "just as good" as anybody's. But we do build a house that nobody has yet built "as good." That house is our Reconstructed Construction. If you want us to prove to you its superior goodness—we are prepared to do exactly that thing. We are looking for just such a chance. Shall we come and see you; or would you prefer to come and see us? You know "we go anywhere for business."

Pecky Cypress

We are prepared to supply our customers with Pecky Cypress material for benches, cut to fit so that it can be quickly erected, or can furnish the lumber just as it comes from the mills.

We were the first to space our rafters 12 feet and 13 1/2 inches apart and use 20 inch glass. Our Reconstructed Construction made it practical.
